WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24, 1901.

The supreme court of the state yesterday held the mechanics lien law constitutional.

The laws enacted by the last legislature will be ready for distribution next week. After that distribution all those laws will be in force.

The victory won by the C. R. & M. railroad company in the subsidy elections at Peru and Converse (Miami county) yesterday is a matter in which this city is deeply interested and for which it is to be congratulated. The victory means the rapid progress of the C. R. & M. road toward Chicago which will certainly be the northern terminus of the line, and that means the shortest line between the two great commercial centers, Chicago and Cincinnati. The bitter fight made by the Pennsylvania people to defeat these subsidies is the best evidence that they recognize the importance of the C. R. & M. as a competing line. The Pennsylvania does not touch Peru; hence the inference is plain that the fight was made not so much to keep the C. R. & M. out of Peru as it was to hinder the general progress of that road. It was, in fact, but a repetition of the fight against the C. R. & M. at this point. Richmond will be the largest beneficiary on the line between Cincinnati and Chicago and naturally feels the greatest interest in its success. The fight made against the C. R. & M. all along the line is practically a fight against Richmond where the Pennsylvania has had the most complete and valuable monopoly that it has held anywhere in the state. As a business proposition the Pennsylvania has been warranted in holding on to this monopoly with a death grip, and on the other hand, Richmond has been warranted in making a desperate and expensive effort to break it. That success has crowned its effort the result of the subsidy elections in Miami county yesterday is but another evidence.

DUBLIN.

For some weeks a hot controversy has been pending over our school matters here as to who should be chosen as the superintendent; especially has this been the case since Prof. John Cooper, one of the first superintendents of the school, saw proper to again make application for it a few weeks ago. Since then his friends have done all they could to get the school board to accept him, which met in regular session Monday night. All day Monday his friends were as busy as niggers circulating petitions in his behalf. The board met and quite a late session was had. A presidential election could not have created more animation than what has been engendered over this contest.
Prof. I. C. Mills, who has been principal of the school, was also the other applicant for superintendency. The petitions gotten out by Cooper's friends availed but little as the board elected Mr. Mills to the great delight of his friends, with the following corps of teachers: For principals, Mrs. M. E. Stewart, room number 1, Nellie Swain, room number 5, Olive Eschler, room number 6, M. E. Mason. Thus has ended one of the warmest contests in matters of this sort that perhaps has ever been had in the schools of this place.

The farmers are very far behind their usual time for crop preparation; not very much plowed for corn up to the present, and a considerable of oats to sow.
A small mistake was made in the Pallet's last week concerning the rural mail delivery. Many of the old citizens did not want such a delivery and the postoffice removed, and all mail one day later. From what it is at present it is a fact, costly and will have a farther tendency to do up all small towns and center nearly all business at a place everybody wants to go to, but ours after being here between sixty and one hundred years will be only a thing in a short time that we can think of having had the little privilege of a postoffice so long.
