

NEW STATES IN 1904.

One, and Possibly Four, May Figure in the Campaign.

OKLAHOMA TERRITORY PROBLEM.

Will She Be Admitted With Her Present Area or Come In With the Indian Territory Included?—Political Figures Largely in the Case. Important to Both Parties.

Politicians in the national capital do not lose sight of the fact that one new and important state, possibly four, may figure prominently in the campaign of 1904, writes the correspondent of the Galveston News. For this very reason the recent opening of the Wichita and the Kiowa, Comanche and Apache reservations to settlement has been watched with no little interest.

Oklahoma, the territory which will profit by this new citizenship, has for some time been a candidate for statehood honors. Bills providing for her admission were introduced in the Fifty-sixth congress; but, like many other measures of importance, failed of consideration for lack of time. There is every prospect that the Fifty-seventh congress will provide for her admission with reasonable promptness. The only really doubtful question involved is whether Oklahoma shall be admitted with her present territorial area or include the Indian Territory. Her importance as a state will be largely determined by the settlement of this question.

The bill introduced by Senator Fairbanks in the last congress provided that congress might in its discretion attach the Indian Territory to Oklahoma. The people of the two territories are considerably divided over the proposition. As a rule the people of the Indian Territory want to come in as a separate state. In Oklahoma there are many who want separate statehood and likewise many who desire one state formed of both territories. The Fairbanks bill provided for immediate statehood for Oklahoma, leaving it to congress to determine what shall be done with the Indian Territory when the work of the Dawes commission is finished and admission is applied for.

Naturally politics figures largely in the case. At present Oklahoma is Republican, but by a very narrow margin, unless the new population has materially increased the Republican strength. This is the feature of the recent opening which most attracts the attention of the politicians. It is estimated that the new territory brings in 100,000 additional population. Half of this number hails from the older settled sections of Oklahoma and Indian Territory. The remaining 50,000 may be divided as follows: From Kansas, 20,000; from Texas and the remaining 15,000 from the rest of the country. Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa and Nebraska leading in supplying this latter number.

On the hypothesis that 50,000 of the settlers were from Oklahoma and the Indian Territory it might appear to some that there are only 50,000 new people in Oklahoma as a result of the opening of the new country, but as it is clear that new population must take the places of the homesteaders it is safe to assume that Oklahoma is about 100,000 more populous than when the census was taken last June, making her approximate population at this time about 500,000. As to the division of the new population politically, that is difficult to determine, but investigation suggests that it is closely divided between the two great parties, with a goodly bunch of Kansas Populists thrown in to make matters interesting.

Probably the Republicans have the best of the deal by possibly as many as 2,000 votes. The claim of Delegate Flynn that Oklahoma will be a Republican state if admitted as a separate state is reasonable, and this fact is a potent argument with a Republican congress to admit her separately, since the Indian Territory is strongly Democratic and would possibly overwhelm the Republican margin of Oklahoma should the one state idea be adopted by congress.

At any rate, if the Fairbanks bill is enacted the election of 1902 will show just how strongly Oklahoma is Republican on account of the new population, and if the figures look encouraging in the Indian Territory can be attached in time for the election of 1904. If the campaign of 1904 should find the two territories in as one state, it would be a state of a million people, with seven votes in the electoral college. It is easy to see it might cut an important figure in the presidential campaign if the contest should be close.

Arizona and New Mexico, too, are still clamoring for statehood. Arizona, according to the new census, has a population of less than 125,000, while New Mexico is still under 200,000. New Mexico is now represented by a Republican delegate, but the Democrats are numerous enough to carry the territory most of the time. Arizona is still Democratic and would probably remain so even if statehood should be granted at the hands of a Republican administration.

If Oklahoma should be admitted as a separate state and Arizona and New Mexico should also be admitted, the chances are, in the absence of an adverse tidal wave, that Oklahoma and New Mexico would add eight electoral votes to the Republican column, while Arizona would give three to the Democrats.

On the other hand, should Oklahoma and Indian Territory be admitted as one state in time to participate in the election of 1904 and Arizona and New Mexico should also be admitted the Democrats would be more than likely to capture the seven from Oklahoma and three from Arizona, leaving the Republicans little more than an even chance for the three from New Mexico. Since the admission of the continental territories is bound to be seriously considered by the new congress the determination of the question of separate statehood for Oklahoma and the Indian Territory is of great importance both to the great parties and to the people of the territories as well. The only certain thing at this time is that Oklahoma will be granted some sort of statehood. She may be admitted and Arizona and New Mexico left out, but it is certain that when the Oklahoma bill comes up for consideration the Arizona and New Mexico people are going to make desperate efforts to get in.

FOR SCIENCE'S SAKE.

Physician Isolates Himself From the World to Study Leprosy.

For the sake of science Dr. Louis Knapp of St. Louis broke his family ties and severed all connection with society to nurse Dong Gong, the Chinese leper discovered here a few days ago, says a dispatch to the New York Journal. Dr. Knapp will live with the Chinaman in a small frame house near quarantine, south of the city, and has the prospect of an indefinite vigil, as the Chinaman may live 10 or 15 years.

Equipped with an exhaustive library, medical instruments and a good supply of medicines, the doctor will make an exhaustive study of the case. The doctor bade his wife and children a final farewell before reporting for duty at the health department. He was warned of the danger to which he exposed himself and told that he might not be permitted to leave the house, but may be compelled to reside with the Chinaman until he dies. The doctor heard the penalties prescribed without a waver in his determination and undertook the task.

Besides his library the doctor will be provided with a piano to while away the hours. The doctor will do all of the cooking and will not permit the Chinaman to enter the kitchen.

Discussing the case Dr. Knapp said: "Any disease is incurable until its cure is discovered. If a cure for leprosy is ever found, it will be found by some one who has devoted years to the study of an actual case of the disease, and I am not without hope that I may at least contribute to such a discovery."

"Leprosy is only mildly contagious, as I understand it. It would be contracted only by living in the same room with a patient or by the grossest carelessness in handling articles which had been infected by him. Both these dangers I shall carefully avoid."

NEW GOLF FASHION.

Latest Fad Is to Wear Gold Chain Around Ankle.

A young woman living in New York has astonished her friends by the new fashion she has brought home from abroad, says the New York Sun. Around one of her ankles is linked a gold chain bracelet or anklet of heavy Tuscan gold fastened with a turquoise amulet clasp. This is worn outside the stocking and is plainly in evidence when a golf skirt is worn.

It would seem far too striking a fashion to find favor with women of good taste, but it is difficult to tell exactly what will strike the feminine fancy. Already a few of her friends have ordered similar anklets in gun metal and silver of less elaborate fashion than that worn by the young woman who brought the fad direct from Paris, where it was introduced by a Russian woman of title. One of these anklets being observed at a Turkish bath patronized by women, the attendant was asked if the custom was general.

"A great many women," said the girl, "wear these chain bracelets, some above the knee and others at the ankle. I have never known of their being worn outside the stocking, however, as I have been usually called to assist the wearer to adjust the stockings over the ankle, sometimes a difficult task to perform without tearing delicate hosiery."

All summer long women have been wearing bracelets outside the sleeve, and the new anklet fad seems to have originated in the new and rather pronounced fashion of exhibiting the bracelet. These odd fashions, however, have a short life on this side of the water, although they are carried to extremes abroad, especially by the fashion makers of Paris.

Oom Paul.

(Two of Paul Kruger's sons have been killed in battle, one daughter died as a result of the privations of the war, and now his wife is dead, while the venerable president of the Transvaal Republic is an exile from his country.)

Alone he bravely stands
Beneath the heavy weight
Of woe's deep sinking bands,
Of the defeat of fate,
With supplicating hands,
A saddest incarnation.

No more the light of joy
Nor gladness ray of mirth
May his sad life ally
Or gleam upon his heart,
But he, stern fortune's toy,
Must wander o'er the earth.

For him no loving arms
Bid welcome to the home;
No roof-tree's happy charms
Bid him no more to roam,
But battle's dread alarms
Greet him 'neath heaven's dome.

And yet his face is proud,
Though darkened by his grief;
His head may not be bowed,
His still he is the chief,
Nor is his spirit cowed,
Sustained by his belief.

Oom Paul! O'er him his fate
May clatter roughly shod;
His thoughts mid sorrow great
May mark to mounds of sod,
Yet grand he'll stand and wait,
Serenely before his God.

"French Pens" From Indiana.
Between 22,000,000 and 24,000,000 cans of "French pens" have been packed in Indiana this year.

WOMAN AND FASHION

A Novel Tea Gown.

The sketch pictures a novel tea gown of white crepe de chine, the little coat being of net edged with flowers cut out in cloth and applied with spots on to the net, the skirt of the gown showing three flounces tucked, white black velvet ribbon forms the waistband, passed under the arms and fastened with old cameo clasps. The double sleeves are quite new and charming.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Blouses For Maid and Dowager.
The blouse of the day is a dainty thing of muslin, crepe or washing silk inset with lace. The design which has a yoke and braces of lace, bishop sleeves and lace cuffs still remains popular. Odds and ends of old lace are often used for blouses, narrow Mechlin, Valenciennes or Buckingham lace being applied on strips of net to form insertions. Plain and spotted muslins are used, and the ones that have transparent stripes clean best.

In these days even quite elderly women wear blouses, and why not? One needs cool, careful clothes as much or more when one is old as when one is young. A blouse of black muslin spotted with white and inset with black lace, lined with white net, is quite suited to a matron of advanced years.

The Parasol of Many Colors.
Among novelties from Paris is the sunshade with a movable cover, achieved in an ingenious and perfectly simple manner so that the cover can be put on instantly and naturally can be varied as much as liked, so that each one will harmonize with a different dress. It used to be the custom to give as a present a valuable parasol handle, but instead of that it is now fashionable to present the frame, accompanied by several covers. A sunshade cover painted by the giver forms a lovely gift.

Cool and Pretty as an Iris.
Here is an idea for a pretty little morning dress in blue tinted pique. The skirt is made quite plainly and well stitched on the hips. The loose blouse bodice is open in the front; it fastens from side to side with braids and small amethyst studs and discloses a tucked shirt of soft cream muslin. There is a large round collar of embroidered muslin, a belt and satchel of white peau de suede, and the hat is of burned straw with pale pink roses and leaves suggestive of the serene and yellow period.

The Fad of Combination.
One fad of the moment is to combine some thin mull with silk. The gown proper will be of silk, with the mull or other thin goods in dead black or pure white, put on in flounces showing in the narrow frill around the shaped sash in the tucked yoke and perhaps in puffed undersleeves. Sometimes a gown will be in two patterns of the silk or striped with a flowered design or wreaths with bars, and there are figures sweet and charming enough to withstand the eccentricity.

Buckles For Slippers.
Fancy buckles are much admired now on slippers, circles of amethyst or pearls being frequently used in this way. A fascinating little slipper was worn at a recent evening party upon which was set a buckle consisting of a circle of pearls through which satin ribbon had been passed and tied in a bow just above the buckle.

SEEDLESS WATERMELONS.

The Secret of Raising Them Said to Have Been Discovered.

Former State Senator Swink has been working on the seedless melon proposition many years. During the long winter nights he sat up and wrestled with the great problem, "How can it be done?" Often daylight found him examining minutely and microscopically the seeds he had cut and hacked and desiccated in his efforts to determine how to get along without them. And early one morning about five months ago, so it is related, Mr. Swink came bounding into breakfast after one of his all night sessions and started his wife and children by shouting in a perfect spasm of glee: "I've got it! I can do it!"

Then, it is said, he rushed away without explaining to his astonished family what on earth he meant.

But Mrs. Swink is reputed to have said: "Never mind. Father knows." And as "father" stands quite well in the estimation of his family the mere knowledge that he knew was quite sufficient for all. Swink selected certain kinds of seeds, planted them at certain unusual distances apart and began to watch for the first signs of their germination. After spying on the plants as they grew, it became known that he had really put some momentous enterprise on foot.

Later Mr. Swink brought and laid before his family and friends a huge, long, green melon and, dividing it clearly at one stroke of his big knife, displayed to them the pink interior of a splendid emerald sphere without a single seed. This was but the small beginning of a great end. Of course, Mr. Swink will not reveal the secret process by which he cuts off a melon's hope of posterity and at the same time renders its fleeting presence here most beneficial and beloved.

The seeds in the melons have always been considered a great drawback, and while they do not act as complete neutralizers of the joys of such luscious generalizing, they have by many been recorded as a serious menace to the lives of the eaters.—Denver Post.

Champion Life Raft.

The latest patent in life saving rafts, one just adopted by the United States navy, sees the old idea of the raft. "Your feet are always in the water, but you never sink," and goes it one better. While you are being saved on this raft you are to stand in the water up to your middle. It is thus in effect a big basket with an exaggerated life preserver for its rim, the flat platform of the raft hanging to the inside of a big circular hollow frame by slack ropes. Men or horses can evidently be packed safely upon such a raft as thickly as folks can stand in a crowded car in the "rush hours." When you come to think of it, you might as well be wet up to your waist as up to your ankles, especially after you have once been in at over in your clothes.—Boston Transcript.

Height and Weight of Englishmen.

Statistics have recently been collected of the height of 10,000 English boys and men. At the age of 17 these averaged 5 feet 8 inches; at the age of 22, 5 feet 9 inches. At 17 they weighed 11 stone 2 pounds; at 22, 10 stone 12 pounds. No nation is increasing in height and weight so rapidly as the British. In 50 years the average has gone up for the whole nation from 5 feet 7 1/2 inches to 5 feet 8 1/2 inches. The average height of the British upper classes at 30 years of age is 5 feet 8 1/2 inches; of the farm laborer, 5 feet 7 1/2 inches. The criminal class brings down the average, as their height is but 5 feet 5 1/2 inches.—London Family Doctor.

A Great Healer.

One of the greatest European healers is Miss Lucienne Fremelle Hirsch, who is shortly to make her debut in Brussels, where she has been brought up in strict retirement. Most of the millions left by the late Baron Hirsch go to this granddaughter, who had a somewhat romantic history. Her father, Lucien Hirsch, when living with his parents in Paris, fell in love with Mlle. Fremelle, a governess of the household, and married her.

The child of the marriage was recognized by the baron, and to her he left his vast fortune, amounting, if we remember rightly, to about $20,000,000.—Philadelphia Ledger.

An Orchid That Drinks.

What is probably the most extraordinary plant ever discovered has been found in South America. It is an orchid that takes a drink whenever it feels thirsty by letting down a tube in to the water, the tube when not in use being coiled up on top of the plant. A traveler came across the plant by the side of a lagoon on the Rio de la Plata

TWIN TROUBLES

They Are Often Together These Days—They Work Havoc all Over the Country and in Richmond.

Weak, nervous, the digestion out of order—that is what ails a host of people. It comes about in this way. First from overwork or other causes, the nerves are burdened beyond endurance, nerve waste is not replaced, nerve force is weakened, then the stomach loses its nerve controlling power and indigestion follows with falling strength. When first Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills came to Richmond people could hardly be convinced that this great medicine would remove these troubles. Now it is an accepted fact because of their cure of very stubborn cases no other medicine would influence.

Mr. O. H. Fouts of number 15 eighth street, Richmond, Ind., says: "I was a great sufferer from indigestion, nervousness and dizziness. I heard of Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills at A. G. Luken & Co.'s drug store. Now I can say my nerves are steady and as a result my digestion is greatly improved and I am relieved of those dizzy spells. I consider these pills a splendid nerve medicine and can recommend them very highly."

Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills are sold at 50c a box at dealers or Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y. See that portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M. D., are on every package. Richmond, Ind.

A Night of Terror.

"Awful anxiety was felt for the widow of the brave General Burnham of Machias, Me., when the doctors said she would die of pneumonia before morning," writes Mrs. S. H. Lincoln, who attended her that fearful night, but she begged for Dr. King's New Discovery, which had more than once saved her life, and cured her of consumption. After taking, she slept all night. Further use entirely cured her. This marvellous medicine is guaranteed to cure all throat, chest and lung diseases. Only 50c and $1.00 Trial bottles free at A. G. Luken & Co.'s, druggists.

BIG TIME AT BUFFALO.

Railroad Day at the Pan-American Exposition.

The second Saturday in September, the 14th, will be Railroad day at the Pan-American exposition. It promises to be one of the most interesting days of the great show at Buffalo. Elaborate arrangements have been completed for an interesting and novel demonstration. The grand parade on the exposition grounds that day will be extremely unique and interesting. It will illustrate the different methods of transportation in use since Adam and Eve moved out of the Garden of Eden. There will be many striking novelties in the way of special features. Hon. Chauncey Depew will be one of the distinguished orators. The night illuminations and fireworks will be on a magnificent scale. The day and night festivities will be highly enjoyable for Pan-American Exposition visitors. Special low fares in effect over the Akron route will permit everybody to attend at small expense. For particulars about the cost of tickets, through time to Buffalo, etc., apply to Passenger and Ticket Agent.
