NICOLAY AND LINCOLN.

Career of the Martyred President's Private Secretary.

AN INTIMATE PERSONAL FRIEND.

In Collaboration With John Hay, Now Secretary of State, He Wrote the "Life of Abraham Lincoln." Accompanied the President on His Memorable Journey to Washington.

The late John G. Nicolay, private secretary to President Lincoln and an intimate personal friend of the great emancipator, was a resident of Washington since 1872, much of his time having been given to writing. In collaboration with John Hay, now secretary of state, he wrote the "Life of Abraham Lincoln."

John George Nicolay was born in the village of Essingen, in Rhenish Bavaria, Germany, Feb. 26, 1832, the son of Jacob and Helena Nicolay. In 1858 the Nicolay family emigrated to America, making their home first in Cincinnati, O. From there they moved successively to Indiana, Missouri and Illinois.
During this moving young Nicolay received elementary instruction in the schools of Cincinnati and St. Louis.
His school days in these two cities covered a period of about two years, but during that time the lad obtained tuition in German and English, as the two languages were taught together.
By the death of his parents when he was about 14 years old young Nicolay was thrown entirely on his own resources, and he became a clerk in a small retail store.

This occupation did not suit him, however, and when he was sixteen he started to learn the trade of a printer in the office of The Free Press, a county paper published weekly at Pittsfield, Pike county, Ill. He remained with The Free Press for about eight years, and while connected with this country sheet he laid the foundation for his future literary career.

Mr. Nicolay acquired a reputation as an editor which lasts even to the present day in Pike county. He was a forceful writer and soon became a political power in his part of the state.
He received flattering offers from the newspapers of Chicago and St. Louis, but preferred to continue in his independent capacity as the editor of his own paper. During the famous campaign between Lincoln and Douglas Mr. Nicolay took sides with Lincoln and laid the foundation for his close friendship with the great emancipator, which lasted until the tragic death of Lincoln.

At the close of the Fremont and Dayton campaign in 1856 Mr. Nicolay sold his paper and became a clerk in the office of the secretary of state at Springfield, Ill. He remained in this position until 1860, and during this time his friendship with Lincoln ripened into the closest intimacy. When Lincoln was nominated for the presidency, he appointed Nicolay his private secretary. After the election the correspondence of Mr. Lincoln increased so much that an assistant became necessary, and Mr. Nicolay chose for this position John Hay, the present secretary of state, who was then a young law student in Springfield.

When Lincoln made his memorable journey to Washington in the spring of 1861, both Mr. Nicolay and Mr. Hay accompanied him. During the first presidential term they occupied the same room at the White House together, performing the laborious and often delicate duties which fell to them and enjoying the closest confidence of President Lincoln. During this time they formed the plan, with the approval of Mr. Lincoln, of writing his biography, which design they carried out later in collaboration.

After the beginning of his second term, and shortly before his assassination, the president appointed Mr. Nicolay United States consul at Paris and appointed Mr. Hay secretary of the American legation in the same city.
They had not, however, entered upon their new duties before Mr. Lincoln's death occurred. Mr. Nicolay held the office of consul at Paris until the spring of 1869.

Mr. Nicolay and Mr. Hay began the active work of writing their biography of Lincoln in 1874, although they had spent the previous six years in gathering and arranging their material. Its serial publication under the title "Abraham Lincoln, a History," was begun in The Century Magazine in November, 1880, and continued until February, 1890. In the latter year the complete work, with many important chapters not included in the serial publication, was issued in ten volumes and achieved a permanent place in American historical literature. Of the joint work each author is said to have written about half, and concurrently also they collected, catalogued and edited "Abraham Lincoln's Complete Works," which were published in 1894.

In addition to this great task Mr.
Nicolay wrote in 1881 "The Outbreak of the Rebellion," it being the first volume of a series entitled "Campaigns of the Civil War." Mr. Nicolay also wrote the article on President Lincoln in the Encyclopaedia Britannica and has contributed numerous articles to American magazines.

All of Mr. Nicolay's accomplishments and tastes were of a high order. He had patented many inventions, was a lover of art and music, an accomplished linguist and a poet of unusual merit.
Of the many achievements of his life he, however, derived the greatest satisfaction from having earned Mr. Lincoln's friendship and trust, as well as of having, in collaboration with Mr.
Hay, carried out the design of writing the biography of the great president.

GOOD FINANCIERS

are generally heavy borrowers.
Thousands of wealthy men commenced on borrowed capital and bridged over subsequent difficulties by borrowing.

The person who makes it a rule to never borrow under any circumstances is usually too conservative to meet with great success. If you need more money than you have, borrow it.

If you are cramped and want ten dollars, or fifty dollars, or a hundred dollars, come to us.

We can arrange the matter of security all right under most any circumstances.

You can pay the money back in weekly or monthly installments. You can have one month or one year in which to pay it back.

Dysentery is prevalent everywhere in summer and is due to miasmatic poisons, and begins abruptly with inflammation of the mucous lining of the large bowel. In America the disease is common, but properly treated does not result as seriously as in the tropics. Perry Davis' Pain Killer is the best known remedy and the most efficacious in the treatment of dysentery.
