HUGE RAILWAY COMBINE

Details of Plan Advanced by Paul Morton.

NATIONAL OWNERSHIP SUGGESTED

Vice President of the Santa Fe System, in a Lecture at Chicago University, favored the Consolidation of All Lines in the United States. Plea for Pooling.

Consolidation of all the railway lines of the country under the control of a single corporation, either private or public, was advanced by Vice-President Paul Morton of the Santa Fe system the other evening as the ultimate solution of the weighty transportation problems that are at present vexing the business world.

This, Mr. Morton declared, is the result toward which the large railway systems, driven by the legal restrictions on pooling, which work against their business interests, are now rapidly tending.

He imparted these views on the subject in a lecture on "Some Railway Problems," delivered before the students and faculty of the University of Chicago in Cobb Hall, Chicago, says the New York Journal.

Whether the ownership of the consolidated lines would remain in the hands of private individuals or be taken over by the national government Mr. Morton expressed himself as unable to foretell, but that consolidation itself was bound to come in the near future he stated as certain from present conditions in the railway world and the underlying tendencies of modern industrial progress.

"The best minds of the business world are engaged today," said Mr. Morton, "in working out plans for the further consolidation of industrial operations under great corporations. The same tendency is at work in the railway world."

"Under the present laws there is a great deal of unlawful pooling done in secret, and it is remarkable that there is not more."

"I see only three solutions to the problems which are at present vexing the railroad world. These are:

"First.—Legalizing of legitimate pooling.

"Second.—Unification of ownership of all the railway systems.

"Third.—Government ownership and management.

"I have always been in favor of legitimate pooling. Its absence, as I say, is at present hastening the consolidation of interests between the different railroads. Personally I view the solution of unity of ownership as much better than legalized pooling, and I do not see any harm that would ensue from a consolidation of all the railway interests of the country under a single private management.

"A vast amount of money could be saved under such a system of control, and the railroad management would certainly give a part of this gain to the public in the shape of lower rates and better service."

SURPRISED BY BOLOMEN.

How Unarmed American Soldiers Defeated a Number of Filipinos.

Interesting details are drifting in of the bravery of the soldiers surprised and massacred at Balangiga, writes the Manila correspondent of the New York Evening Post. Prodigies of valor were performed by some of the men, armed with table knives, stones, clubs or other rude weapons. A hospital corps man is credited with killing eleven natives with a shovel, while another man beat out the brains of four bolomen with a baseball bat before he went down. A sergeant of Company C and six men fought their way to the headquarters building to rescue the officers if possible. The officers were all dead, but the little squad held its ground until it had hauled down and saved the flag, when it fought its way back to the beach and sailed away.

One explanation of how so many men with bolos could be so near the quarters of the troops is that between 100 and 200 natives were employed to clear the surrounding grounds. These men were furnished by the president of the village, and they were permitted to carry their bolos, as part of their work was the cutting of underbrush. These were the men who, on a preconcerted signal, threw themselves on the unarmed soldiers.

Ben and His Work.

A Norwegian recently arrived in New York tells this, says the New York Times:

Henrik Ibsen, the Norwegian dramatist, was one day at dinner asked by a gushing maid how many words he wrote per day. Replied he:

"My dear maid, I haven't written a single word in ten years."

Of course his questioner and those who happened to overhear the conversation were fairly startled. One of the party was bold enough to say it was incredible, drawing especial attention to the fact that the poet's work, "When We Dead Awake," had just run off the press, adding triumphantly:

"Now, master, you don't mean to say you didn't write that?"

And then the Norse skeptic unbent and explained:

"I did not write that play. I merely thought it out. My secretary wrote it."

A Novelty in Foods.

One of the newest things in the way of foods is fish powder, which, it is claimed, is a highly nutritious article, easy of digestion, and therefore particularly suitable for invalids. It is intended for ordinary household use.

NEW SHORT STORIES

Mr. Cleveland's Test.

In a speech at Norwich, Conn., the home of his grandfather, delivered during a recent visit, ex-President Cleveland told the following anecdote: "When I lived in Buffalo, a man who lived there whose occupation was largely the collection of bad debts. He was so persistent and followed a debtor in manner so destructive of peace and comfort that he was quite commonly known as 'Pestilence.' He originated in Norwich, and I determined that if I ever had an opportunity I would test his Norwiche
