

Summoning Sleep.

At all times a perfect mob of ideas and words stands at the gate leading in to the mind, trying to get in. While we wake and are sane, says a writer in Everybody's Magazine, there is something that stands at this gate and lets in only the sensible ideas and the words that have relation to the subject in hand. All the others it keeps shooting away with: "Get back there! Go on away!" It is this inhibitive faculty that keeps us sane. But in order to reach the general paralysis of sleep we have to pass through a preliminary stage wherein we are as foolish as any lunatic. When the sentinel at the gate of the mind goes off duty for the night the mob of irrational ideas and words comes trooping in, and so when I would court sleep I deliberately open the door of my mind to the rabble, turning loose upon it a troupe of unrelated words and phrases. For some reason or other I find that the vocable "abracadabra" is a good one to start off with. Often a word or sentence will repeat itself with increasing rapidity—and shall I say loudness?—until it is all a jumble which breaks up simultaneously with the disintegration of the colored pattern before my closed eyes.

Profiles.

It is said that the American woman's profile is the finest in the world; that it is the most clear cut and finely modeled of any other type. Generalities like this are hard to prove. It cannot be denied that some of the finest profiles in the history of feminine beauty are to be found in America, but whether the average is markedly higher in this country than anywhere else is an open question. But the ordeal is a trying one to any woman when it comes to a faithful delineation of her profile in shadow. It is a finely molded face indeed which looks well in a shadow picture seen sideways. If the nose turns up the least bit in real life it is sure to point skyward in a silhouette. If that organ is even a trifle above the usual size it will appear huge in a shadow profile. A projecting upper lip or a projecting under lip becomes a positive deformity in a silhouette, no matter how slight it may be in the original.—Atlanta Journal.

Head Hunters.

Head hunters is the name given to the professional assassins of the Solomon Islands. The vocation of these men is to procure the heads of those whom they are hired to murder or to sell the victims for sacrificial purposes. Sometimes the enemies of a man offer a large sum to be paid in the native shell money for the head, which will be a proof of death, and the head hunter, with cold blooded and unscrupulous methods, lays his plans.

Frequently great caution is necessary. The intending murderer will worm his way into the friendship of his victim, and a long period may elapse before the opportunity will arrive for the fatal stroke. It may thus happen that the murdered man's death will have been compassed by one whom he has regarded as the closest and most loving of intimates. Surely this is the most hateful of all professions followed for the sake of gain.

A Prince Edward Island Legend.
There is a delightful legend among the people of Point Prim to the effect that when the English attacked the French fort at that place a chain ball from one of the attacking vessels cut the steeple from the old church located on the very point. In falling it toppled over the promontory, and carried the bell which it contained into the sea. Dwellers along the point affirm that from time to time the sound of that bell comes over the waters at eventide and that its phantom tone is ever a warning of a fierce storm or some imminent danger to those who make their living by the spoils of the ocean.—Donahoe's Magazine.

Bone Felon.

A physician of large practice says he has found an egg the most efficacious cure for a bone felon. He uses it in this fashion: Take a fresh egg and crack the larger end, making a hole just big enough to admit the thumb or finger and forcing it into the egg as far as possible without further rupture of the shell. Wipe off the egg that runs out, bind a handkerchief or soft cloth over all and let the finger remain over night. Generally the felon is cured; if not, another application finishes it.

Enjoying the Sport.

"Perkins," languidly called Fwaddy, "come and take this beastly thing off the hook!"
While his man disengaged the fish from the hook and put on a fresh bait Fwaddy yawned dismally.
"That's what makes fishing such a boah," he said. "Once in awhile you catch one of the slippery things, don't you know?"—Stray Stories.

A Fashionable Woman's Confession.
Nobody finds it more difficult to spare time for reading than the very idle, yet every woman in society religiously orders every new book from her library, even though she sends most of them back without having even cut the leaves. If it is a book every one is talking about she skims through the opening chapters, dismissing the volume with a single observation at a dinner party and forgetting everything about it a month after she has returned it. Most of us remember the books of our youth, but if any one were to ask me the titles of the novels I read a couple of years ago no definite impression would be aroused.—"A Countess" in London Telegraph.

A Volcano.

"What is a volcano?" asked the teacher.
"A mountain with a fire inside," said one.
A smile of comprehension spread over the puzzled face of the smallest scholar as she asked surprisedly, "Is that a mountain range?"—Harper's Magazine.

Panned Oysters—Cut stale bread in slices to fit patty pans. Toast, butter and place in the pans. Moistened each slice with three or four teaspoonfuls of oyster juice, then place a layer of oysters on each, sprinkle with pepper, and place a piece of butter on top. Put the patty pans in a baking pan, covering with another pan closely to keep in steam and flavor. Have a quick oven; when cooked until the oysters are "ruffled," remove the cover, and sprinkle with salt, replace cover and cook a minute longer. Serve hot.

Maitre de Hotel Sauce—Cream one half cup of butter; add gradually two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, and pepper to taste. Spread over fish when serving.

Story of the Honey

Comb Candy.

A Delicious Confection

Come to your city, you will always know me after you once taste me. I am all the rage in the East and West, where I have been for some time. Just eat me and you will then understand why I am pronounced "simply delicious," and will not wonder why you want more of me. I am the purest and most wholesome piece of candy in the market. There is only one firm in this country that can make me. Every other firm who has tried to imitate me has given it up.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Calif., writes "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters and it's the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by A. G. Luken & Co., druggist.
