ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Tomorrow will mark the ninety-fifth anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln. Gladstone the "grand old man" was born in the same year and both had some strikingly similar traits of character. In their educational advantages there was the widest difference. Lincoln was self educated and self made while Gladstone had all the advantages that wealth could command.

Abraham was a very appropriate name because, if ever a man was called of God to do a great work, it was Abraham Lincoln. He might have been called Moses because like Moses he was a great leader, and like Moses did not live to enjoy the fruits of his leadership. He might have been called Elijah because his mantle fell upon another when he was so suddenly and unexpectedly called over "the great divide."

The student of history loves to meditate upon the life and character of such a great and good man. He was a child of nature and became one of nature's greatest noblemen. He came from the common people and in all his public life was their hero.

He was known all over the nation as a great story teller. He had a story for every occasion. The story was sometimes very short and pointed and some times more extended and in the form of a parable. When his physical strength was almost worn out with office seekers, one of them said to him, "Mr. President, you will surely take the smallpox." Mr. Lincoln replied: "I'll be glad then because I will have something to give every one who calls." When Grant was hammering the very life out of the Confederacy, some of the general's enemies said to Mr. Lincoln that Gen. Grant was often drunk and not attentive to his duties. To which Mr. Lincoln replied: "I wish I knew where I could get some more of that whiskey for the other generals."

He was a man of broad sympathies—always easily touched, and always touched, by the sorrows and troubles of others. During the long and terrible civil war, he had ample opportunities to reveal these splendid traits in his character. No sorrowing wife or mother ever called on Mr. Lincoln in vain. He heard their stories and his great heart was touched and his order went forth, and, though often contrary to the rules of war, it must be obeyed.

Mr. Lincoln's speeches were unique in logic and clothed in the choicest English. His Gettysburg speech is a classic and is found in nearly all American text books on the subject of literature. In his second inaugural address he said:

"With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and orphans; to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations."

This diction is worthy of Webster and the good will and tender solicitude is worthy of our late President, the beloved McKinley. Washington is called the father of our country and Lincoln, the savior of his country. Washington founded and Lincoln preserved the Union. The great aim of his administration was to preserve the Union and he accomplished this great purpose. Tomorrow will recall the memory of his life and deeds and in rendering a tribute to his memory there will be no North, South, East or West, but the loving tribute will come from the whole people.

A combination of circumstances—good luck, rough playing and the referee's poor vision—won a game for Anderson last night at the Coliseum. Miller and Gardner played a very rough game, and several fouls were made, but not called. We think fouls ought to be called on both sides when they are made, but Moran is afraid of the Anderson team since his last "calling." Horse shoes were flying everywhere, and, if the Anderson team had fallen in the river last night, they couldn't have gotten wet.

Cunningham made two goals and Mansfield one.

Moran has stood pretty well with Richmond audience, but fell several points last night. Line-up and summary:

Notes.

There was only one game in the Western league last night and Richmond lost that one. It was the first game Anderson has won here this season.

Patrick O'Hara has been signed to play half back for Indianapolis during Way's enforced retirement.

The fast Fairview aggregation of polo players defeated the Models last night by a score of 9 to 1. The Models were clearly outclassed, and, after the first period, seemed to be tired out. The Fairviews scored almost at will. The Models were somewhat weakened by the absence of Decker, their speedy first rush. It is doubtful, however, if any team could have beaten Fairview last night, as they put up one of the best games of the season, their defense being exceptionally strong, while the Quigley brothers displayed good team work.

Manager Cohen is still trying to secure the services of George Cunningham, jr., who has been playing such a magnificent game for the Kokomo team of the minor league. Cunningham is still the property of the Richmond Western League club and may be loaned to Indianapolis by Manager Henley. Mr. Cohen is still negotiating with eastern players and there will be a general change in the Indianapolis line in a few days.—Indianapolis Journal.

We don't know whether Manager Henley intends to loan young Cunningham to Indianapolis or not, but we think Indianapolis has a lot of "gall" to ask the Richmond management to assist them in strengthening their team after the way they have been "knocking" the Richmond management and team all season.

THE MULE AND THE MAN.

The mule—he is a gentle beast; He's satisfied to be the least;

And so is man.

Like man he may be taught some tricks;

He does his work from 8 to 6;

The mule—when he gets mad he kicks;

And so does man.

The mule—he has a load to pull;

He's happiest when he is full;

And so is man.

Like man he holds a patient poise,

And when his work's done will rejoice;

The mule—he likes to hear his voice;

And so does man.

The mule—he has his faults, 'tis true;

And so has man.

He does some things he should no do;

And so does man.

Like man he doesn't yearn for style,

But wants contentment all the while.

The mule—he has a lovely smile;

And so has man.

The mule is sometimes kind and good;

And so is man.

He eats all kinds of breakfast food;

And so does man.

Like man he balks at gaudy dress

And all outlandish foolishness,

The mule's accused of mulishness;

And so is man.
