Amusements

For Her Children's Sake.
There is a widespread interest manifested in the attraction at the Gennett theater tomorrow night, when one of the latest Sullivan, Harris & Woods' successes from the pen of Theodore Kremer, entitled "For Her Children's Sake," will be the bill. As the companion play to "The Fatal Wedding," this dramatic success

A CHILD'S VENGEANCE

bears a striking resemblance to its predecessor. It runs the gamut of emotions from grave to gay, and is a winner so far as strength and originality are concerned. It is not a copy of "The Fatal Wedding," but stands distinctly by itself as a unique and original dramatic offering. The intricate plot, with a strong counter plot, can not be told in a few words, and only by seeing it acted can its beauty and symmetry be justly appreciated. A large company of men and women of established theatrical reputation will present the play, and the scenic effects have been planned and executed on an unusually elaborate scale. As a complete production nothing has heretofore been attempted which in any way rivals "For Her Children's Sake."

Theatrical managers are not slow to take advantage of their rivals in any way possible, and oftentimes, if one did not stop and think, "It's only in the play," the thought that the unkind words spoken of such a rival must cause untold pain would present itself and stay "presented."

For instance it is now being said

ARE YOUR LUNGS WEAK?

Joseph Jefferson, sr., requires the services of a "prompter" to get him through his lines." This may or may not be so. Richmond theater-goers are not worrying over the matter for "The Rivals" is to be presented here by Joseph Jefferson, jr., and Wm. W. Jefferson, the latter the peer of his father in the character of Bob Acres. The press matter sent out in advance of "The Rivals" does not say this, but the fact remains just the same. Those who wisely decide to see this delightful comedy at the Gennett next Saturday at either the matinee or night performance will see a play that critics are now pleased to see severely alone, on account of the excellent manner in which the play is presented by the Jeffersons.

"Why Girls Leave Home" has been a question that has agitated the minds of millions for many generations back up to the present time. The "why" will be told in an effective manner at the Gennett theater on March 18.

Jim's Courtship.
HAVE you ever heard the story of the way that thoughtful Jim got his wife? It's very touching, and you'll make a hit with him if you slap him on the shoulder and mention casually that you know the value of a "matrimonial agency."

You see, Jim loved Miranda in a speechless sort of way. And had loved her since he was a boy, how much he couldn't say. For he never got his nerve up to propose, and so at last he gave it up, resolved that he would just forget the past.

Then one day he found a paper which contained a fetching ad. Of a "matrimonial agency," and that made Jimmy glad. He began to correspond with them, and inside one short week had picked out by description the girl his heart would seek.

He didn't see her picture, and he didn't know her name. But he thought, from what she wrote him, he could love her just the same; so the matrimonial agency arranged that they should meet.

At their office in the city, where his vows he could repeat.

When he started for the city he was quite put out to see that Miranda had an errand there; he wished that he could be where her pretty face and figure wouldn't disconcert his mind (This thing of changing sweethearts is a ticklish thing, you'll find).

But he hastened to the office where they made a business of discovering the mate you want—grand managers of love. And they introduced him presently, with a triumphant air. To the girl he'd won with their assistance, Miss Miranda Fair!

Of course that answered, then and there, the question, never asked. That he had longed to put to her; his heart was quite unmasked.

They've been married for a year or so, and now, if you should call, Little Matrimonial Agency will meet you in the hall!

A Married Man's Musings.
After a fellow's been married a few years he begins to long for a little monotony to relieve the excitement. A woman's idea of economy is to have her husband shave himself for six months so that she can get a new spring bonnet. Why don't society editors come right out and say that it was the bridegroom who was "led to the altar?" When a wife says she knows of a "tailor made" downtown that could be bought for a song the song often turns out to be "Old Hundred."
