

Through Your Blood to Rheumatism.

The only way to get at Rheumatism is by the way it came.

Rheumatism and kindred diseases result from a common cause. It took the medical profession nineteen centuries to discover that the cause of this dreaded and painful disease is an excess of Uric acid!

Once Uric acid is in the system, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuralgia, Sciatica follow in its wake. You must get it out of the blood to get rid of these diseases.

Athlophoros is the only scientific remedy that cures all forms of disease resulting from an excess of Uric acid. It is the only specific that dissolves and removes the cause! The wonderful success it has had is due to the fact that it is the one medicine that cures by removing.

Our treatise, "Rheumatism—Its Cause and Cure," mailed to any address on receipt of four cents in stamps.

LOLITA ARMOUR

Goes to Europe to Have Lorenz Teach Her the Art of Walking.

(New York World.)

Little Lolita Armour is to cross the Atlantic Ocean to receive treatment from Prof. Adolf Lorenz whose cures of born cripples have aroused the interest of the civilized world. This does not mean that the little girl must undergo a second operation at the hands of the surgeon. She is going there merely to be under the care of Prof. Lorenz who will personally see that she learns how to walk just as other girls do who were not born with double dislocation of the hips.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Ogden Armour of Chicago, father and mother of Lolita, are at the Waldorf-Astoria. The little girl is with them. They will leave today for Europe. Mrs. Armour said to a World reporter last night:

"We do not know that a second operation will be necessary. On the contrary, we have every reason to hope that it will not be necessary. We agreed a year ago when Prof. Lorenz operated upon Lolita, that we would take the little girl over to Europe to see him within a year. He said that if we would be over there the following May that would be time for him to make a second examination of her case and direct what course we should pursue in bringing her up."

"Lolita has been getting along splendidly. She has perfect mobility, but doesn't know always how to use it. She is going now to Prof. Lorenz to be taught the art of walking."

"Can't she walk, now?" asked the reporter.

"Oh, yes," said Mrs. Armour. "Lolita has been able to walk since Prof. Lorenz performed his first operation about a year ago. She has even been taught dancing and has taken physical culture lessons daily. The only thing now is for her to gain complete mastery of her powers of mobility, and we thought, and Prof. Lorenz thought that she could gain this knowledge about the art of walking best by being over there in Vienna, where he has so many children learning to walk after similar operations."

"Has there been any disappointing developments in her case since the operation?"

"None whatever. Lolita is here with us and is getting along splendidly. It isn't that at all. We simply promised Prof. Lorenz to bring her over to see him within a year, and we are fulfilling the promise. All that he will have to do, we think, is to teach her the art of walking."

"We had a telegram from him," she said, "only the other day, saying it would be all right for us to come over now and be there in May."

Lolita Armour is just 8 years old. She was born in 1896 with double dislocation of the hips. Prof. Lorenz gave up a professorship in a great university for a time to come to America to treat her. The operation was performed at the home of the Armours in Chicago, on October 12, 1902.

Not long after the operation Lolita Armour was able to take exercise, and when the plaster cast was removed she had the power to rest the weight of her body upon her legs, which had from birth been useless to her. She then began to walk as other children do.

It has been said that Mr. Armour paid Prof. Lorenz $75,000 for the operation.

SENATOR FAIRBANKS'

TRIBUTE TO HANNA.

Senator Fairbanks' tribute to the late Senator Hanna during the memorial exercises recently held in the Senate was the forceful eulogy of a friend whose relations with the dead statesman were cordial and intimate. He said in part:

"Senator Hanna was a man of practical mind. He did not dwell in an atmosphere of purely speculative philosophy, but among the serious realities of life. He possessed in full degree the power of great initiative. He organized and set on foot vast enterprises which required large capital, and gave employment to thousands of workmen. He was essentially a creator; never a destroyer. He opened the door of opportunity to others and thus became a benefactor. He was a man of innate modesty and never indulged in the merely spectacular. He coveted the respect and confidence of his fellow-men, not for selfish purposes, but that he might the better serve them."

"He possessed a keenly sensitive nature. He was deeply touched by the criticism of his political opponents, which for a time was so sharp and unjust. That criticism which sought to undermine the confidence in him of his countrymen and to impeach his broad humanitarian sympathies and purposes left a sting. He cared nothing for the criticism of his political views. He held to them tenaciously and conscientiously, with confidence in the ultimate sober judgment of the people."

A Man of Sincerity.

"He was a plain, blunt man. He was always perfectly natural. He did not pretend to be what the Creator did not intend him to be. He was no mere timeserver. He did not bend to every wind that blew. He was an honest man—honest in thought, in purpose, and in deed; honest with the world and honest with himself. He possessed in a remarkable degree the 'genius of common sense.' He was resourceful and had at instant command all of his faculties."

"He was tenacious of his opinions, though not dogmatic. He was ready to yield to a better reason when it was made manifest. He sought no compromise with expediency. What was right was right, and what was wrong was wrong. He occupied no middle ground."

"He was the trusted friend of the late President McKinley throughout his illustrious political career. He possessed his unbounded confidence, a confidence which he repaid with unfailing loyalty and unmeasured devotion."

"His name was frequently mentioned, and with entire respect, for still further official honors than those he enjoyed here. The suggestion needed but the encouragement of his assent to make it a formidable reality, but he was content with the great distinction of a seat in this chamber and discouraged all effort to make him a candidate for the most exalted place in the government."

His Career an Inspiration.

"His career admirably illustrates the great possibilities that lie before the American youth. He became a power in widely separated fields of endeavor. To have achieved distinction in either was honor enough for one man. His early life as the successful man of business gave no promise of the eminence he was destined to achieve in the world of politics and statesmanship. He did not become a student of statecraft until after he had passed life's meridian. He proved to be a quick student of those great problems which concerned the state."

"He was a man of indefatigable industry. He believed in the virtue of labor. He wrought on with no thought of self. His friends observed the serious inroads he was making upon his health and sought to dissuade him from overtaxing his strength, but he disregarded their kindly admonitions and labored on until he fell at his post of duty—a virtual sacrifice to his country and his countrymen. No soldier ever died upon the field of glory more surely for others than did he."

His Fellowship Cherished.

"Senator Hanna and I were friends before coming here, and my entire public service to the hour of his death was in fellowship with him. One of the choicest memories I shall take into private life is the memory of his confidence and unvarying friendship."

"I visited him a number of times after he entered the sick chamber with an illness supposed to be but temporary. He was loath to give up his intercourse with his friends. He loved them and he loved the world. He had not gathered his harvest. He had no time to take account of death."

"For many long and anxious days his countrymen awaited tidings of his illness. In the alternations of hope and fear we watched and reverently invoked the All-Merciful One to spare our friend to us and to his country. But his hour had come, and tenderly we laid him away by the lakeside which he so much loved and where he sleeps well."

"Brave spirit, an affectionate farewell! We take up the burdens you left us and press on, and in good time, in God's providence, we shall leave them to others. This historic chamber has its entrances and its exits, through which the stately procession comes and goes. We shall, each, in his turn, seek an exit."

"Good friend! We shall forever cherish as a priceless heritage the memory of your nobility of character and your services and sacrifices for the state."

The Best of All

Good things are good so far as they do good. This axiom applies with force to the plain goodness of Uneeda Biscuit. They're good because they taste good and do good.

are good for the grown man as well as the boy—as good for the baby as the mother. Are not only good, but keep good. You can always depend on them. That's against your biscuit experience—and you can't understand it until you examine the air-tight, moisture-proof package in which they are sold. Never sold in bulk.
