BELIEVE IN FREE LOVE

ODD RELIGIOUS SECT WHICH HOLDS FORTH IN

COLUMBIANA CO., OHIO

A Farmer at the Head of It—His Radical Theory and Beliefs.

Lisbon, O., June 2.—On perhaps the prettiest of the many green knolls with which the country about Lisbon is dotted stands a large, old-fashioned country house commanding a view unsurpassed for beauty. This house is the home of the Spirit Fruit society, an incorporated religious organization practicing beliefs directly in contrast with ordinary ideas of religion.

Fourteen men and women are housed together here. According to the statement of Jacob Beilhart, president of the society, and executive head of the household, but one couple is married. This couple is Robert G. Wall and wife of Chicago. Wall was formerly a prominent labor delegate and came to Lisbon with Beilhart and two women from Chicago several days ago. He and the women are recent converts to the religion taught by Beilhart. The others in the house are either married persons living apart from their husbands or wives, or unmarried persons. Several are young girls hardly out of their teens, some of them from this vicinity and others from various parts of the country.

Non-resistance, universal love and common ownership are the three essential tenets of their religion. Lisbonites with high moral ideas have from time to time tried to procure official investigation into the affairs but as the Spirit Fruit farm is beyond the village limits, authorities say they can do nothing.

"In us who live here, spirit is predominant. We follow the dictates of spirit only. We are habitless. When the spirit speaks within us we obey accordingly, putting no restraint on the spirit. We believe in immortality of the spirit, but in no punishment in eternity and in that are like the Universalists.

"There is no personal God, we believe, but God is the spirit which pervades everybody, everything in you and me. I am a savior as I obey the law of spirit."

Pronouncing these doctrines, Jacob Beilhart looked more like a country business man than the preacher of a doctrine which has startled the community. He talked quietly, without even the appearance of suppressed excitement. He answered all questions, declaring that he had nothing to hide. He said he carried the ..... Idea of Non-resistance into all the details of his life and that he never went against the stream. His idea is to become perfectly passive; intelligence must give place to the spirit and conscience must ask no questions. He explained the mode of life of the inmates of the home by saying that they were like himself, the spirit reigning preeminent and the idea of non-resistance allowing them to be swept along wherever the impulse of spirit saw fit to carry them.

"I saw," he says, "that if I lived the life of love it must mean freedom for me and all who enter life. Freedom from what? Freedom to take any one we choose and cast them off when we want them no more. There must be absolute non-resistance."
