GRAND LODGE OF THE DRUIDS

OF INDIANA HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING HERE TOMORROW-WEDNESDAY

BANVUET TONIGAT

Will Start the Ceremonies—Program—
—Richmond Lodge to Give Carnival.

The annual meeting of the Grand Lodge of Druids of Indiana will be held in this city tomorrow and Wednesday and the meeting will be one of the best in a long while. The arrangements preparatory to the meeting have all been arranged and everything is in readiness for the comfort and enjoyment of the visitors, of whom there will be a large number. The business sessions open in the I. O. O. F. hall tomorrow morning. Tonight the chief social function of the meeting, a grand ball and banquet for the Druids and their ladies will be held in the Odd Fellows hall.

The ladies of the Indianapolis circle, the auxiliary of the order, will be among the visitors and the ball will be an occasion of great enjoyment to the delegations that will attend. During the business sessions, which will occupy the greater part of the two days of the meeting, reports will be heard from all the grand officers.

It will be shown that the lodge has grown greatly in the past few years and has attained a place in the high ranks of secret orders in the point of membership.

Appropos of the above announcement of the grand meeting it ought to be stated that the Richmond order of Druids will give a carnival this summer. The Mundy Carnival Co. will furnish the amusement, the company having been secured when it was playing at Dayton. It is a very large one, finer probably than the Ferrari Bros. Co., and the Richmond people will yet this year have a chance to see another excellent carnival. Let us hope the weather will be finer than it was during the week of the Red Men's Carnival.

Everybody's liable to itching piles. Rich and poor, old and young—terrible the torture they suffer. Only one sure cure; Doan's Ointment. Absolutely safe; can't fail.

present predicament, what does the future hold in store? There is no answer forthcoming to any of these questions. And, as they do not comprehend the past, the present, the future of his life, no more—had we better say much less?—do they comprehend the past, the present, the future of their own lives, for they had pinned their faith to Him. The sun has set, and it would seem the stars must go down, too. Here are two of God's men—two of humanity's men, filled with moral earnestness, in the midst of a surprising crisis, with hidden eyes. This is a picture of experience—not an experience of Cleopas and of Luke alone, but a picture of human experience—a picture of universal humanity. It is a picture of the experience of college men and women, it may be, on a commencement day. With all our language and mathematics and science and philosophy we still see through a glass darkly; with our little language and mathematics and science and philosophy we stand with uncovered heads as we are brought by this sudden, arresting today of the current of college life, face to face with the meaning and the mystery of our own lives.

"But, while I bring you a message today of the hidden eyes and the burning heart, I am chiefly concerned with the burning heart. If you speak of the mind of man you may be misunderstood—you may misunderstand yourself—for the world is made up of many men and of many minds; but you may speak of the heart of humanity without this ambiguity. Men have hearts, hidden away, it may be, in deep and dark recesses but the hearts are there, and what is even more to the point, He speaks to men's hearts and sends a thrill through their being.

"We are learning to judge of trees by their fruits, and so we are learning to judge of men and of institutions."

At the college last night the president of Butler college, Rev. Garrison, addressed a joint meeting of the Christian Associations. A large audience was present.

THE TEMPLES TEACH TRUTH

THEY HAVE THEIR LESSONS

YET FOR THE PEOPLE OF
THE OCCIDENT IS THE THOUGHT OF

REV. STEPHEN S. NYRICK

He Develops This Rather New Idea in

A Lecture at the Fifth Street
Methodist Episcopal Church
Last Night.

Stephen S. Myrick, who has but lately returned from a three years stay in the Orient, addressed an appreciative audience at the fifth street M. E. church Sunday night on the topic: "Thoughts Gleaned From Oriental Sanctuaries." It was the effort of the speaker to convey to his hearers a notion not only of the curious things connected with these sanctuaries but also to point out that vital element, the central helpful thought of good which was impressed upon him by the forms of worship which he saw. At Tokio in the Shinj temple the dominant thing was the perfectly polished mirror teaching the carefulness requisite to maintain perfection. The horse and its image of bronze which first catches the eye in the Buddhist temples of Japan gave the idea of the vitality and the constructive quality of religion. Mr. Myrick's idea of what may be learned from Oriental Sanctuaries, of the good which may come to one from their contemplation is rather a novel view to those who have been taught to think of them as pagan temples and of no ethical interest. But where there is persistent life, there is a truth behind it and this may lie in the central thought of good so well taken hold of by the speaker.

Mr. Myrick has many interesting curios from the east with which to illustrate his talks on life in the far east. He adds the local color of being able to use certain eastern dialects and twists his tongue about the words like a native. Mr. Myrick has abundant material at hand for many such instructive talks and it is to be hoped that he may see fit to develop it.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS.

(Indianapolis Journal.)

Chicago will need 200 new teachers in the public schools next September, and the school board doesn't see where they are to come from. The superintendent would like at least half of this number to be men, saying that it would be a distinct advantage to the schools to have more men in the service between the fifth and eighth grades, as well as in the high schools; but he does not see how they are to be secured when, after years of training and preparation, they are asked to begin on a salary of $550 a year. In some cities, he says, it is the custom to pay men nearly 50 per cent. more than women, and thinks it would solve the problem if Chicago would do the same, but "there would be an insurrection of women" in such event, he says—the board of education now placing men and women on an equality in the matter of salary.

The RAILROAD STORE

Saturday was the greatest day in the history of this store—greatest in point of crowds, in sales and in bargains. For a store, noted as being always busy even when others are idle, the above statement speaks volumes. Only those who were here Saturday—and it seemed that nearly all of Richmond was here—can appreciate the difficulty we had in properly serving every customer. We regret very much that all were not waited upon as they should have been, but it was unavoidable, even with our extra help. To these persons, as well as all others, we say, please come again.
