KENTUCKIAN'S TRAGIC END

FATHER FORCED TO KILL HIS FIRST BORN SON

COLD BLOODED CRIME

Remarkable Record of Young Nimrod Byrd—The Whole Story.

Owingsville, Ky., July 19.—When Almanza Byrd, aged 50 years, fired a load of buckshot through the heart of his 30-year-old son, Nimrod Byrd, at Stoops, Montgomery county, eight miles from here, there passed a man who for years has terrorized the community in which he lived and who was feared by almost everybody.

Between Byrd's home and Mount Sterling, the nearest town, there are probably not more than four or five residences whose walls have not been almost riddled with bullets from Byrd's pistol. A favorite method of the young desperado was to ride along the turnpike and fire at any spot that looked like it would make a good mark—Lamp light, windows, people or any other convenient object. He was an unerring shot with a pistol, and it is said could hit a quarter at 50 feet. But these deeds of violence were committed only when he was under the influence of whiskey. When sober there was no more courtly, polished gentleman than Nim Byrd, and his friends were numbered by hundreds. It was owing to this fact that his death has not occurred heretofore.

It was at his home that Byrd completely dominated and terrorized. There, if the food on the table did not suit him, he would draw his revolver and shoot the dishes from the table, or, at other times, shoot the food from the dishes and leave the latter. The doors, floors and ceilings at his home are literally riddled with bullets, and much of the furniture shows marks of the bullets fired by the drink-crazed man.

At Enmity With His Father.

From his youth he has been at odds with his father, Almanza Byrd. No cause is known, but when drunk Nimrod would always go home and call for his father, saying he "wished to settle with him." In spite of his shortcomings, and in spite of his antipathy to him, Almanza Byrd loved his son, and when he would come home and, with his revolver in his hand, demand that his father should come forth, the grief-stricken father would go to an up-stairs room and there take refuge. Then it was a favorite pastime with Nimrod to stand in a room under the one where his father was and shoot through the ceiling at him. Tiring of this he would go on the outside of the house and shoot through the windows at the ceiling of his father's room.

Many thousand dollars had been spent by Byrd's father and grandfather in getting him out of trouble, which his handiness with a pistol and his love for whiskey had led him into. Last autumn young Byrd went to Mount Sterling and called at the post office for his mail. A box containing a pistol was handed to him, and, without placing it in his pocket, he loaded the weapon and drove in his buggy down the street. He had a grudge against Dee Smith, a policeman, and, sighting Smith, Byrd began creating a disturbance. Smith attempted to arrest Byrd, when the latter turned and shot him through the body. For weeks Smith's life was despaired of but at last he recovered. Byrd was discharged from custody by paying a fine of $250, but it is said it cost his father and grandfather $5000 to clear him.

Desperado's Last Day.

The day of his death Byrd came home intoxicated. He went to his room upstairs and, taking his bed, set it on fire. Breaking out a window he threw the bed out. Then he went down stairs and announced his intention of burning the house and everything in it, including the family. He placed the burning bed under the veranda and then stood guard to prevent any one extinguishing the fire. The younger brother, Roy, threw water on the blaze. Nimrod secured a hoe and ran his brother from the scene, saying he would kill him. Then the fire was extinguished. When Nimrod returned from chasing his brother he called for his father, as was his custom. His 70-year-old grandfather, Nimrod Byrd, came out and entreated his grandson to become quiet. But the more he entreated the noisier Nim became. At last Almanza Byrd went to an upstairs room, secured a shotgun and barricaded the door. Nimrod, Jr., broke from his grandfather's hold and mounted the stairs. He demanded of his father that he open the door. No answer came and young Byrd secured a piece of heavy material, with which he broke in the door. As the door swung from its hinges Almanza Byrd fired a shotgun at his son's breast. The charge entered near the heart and Nimrod fell at his father's and grandfather's feet, a corpse. The coroner's jury exonerated Byrd and County Judge Hazelrigg of Montgomery county dismissed the charge against Byrd after the testimony which the filicide gave. There were few dry eyes in the courtroom, as Byrd almost a nervous wreck, told how he had sat and waited in the darkness of his room for the time to come when he would have to kill his first-born son to save his own life.

Cured of Chronic Diarrhoea After Ten Years of Suffering.

"I wish to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Mrs. Mattie Burge, of Martinsville, Va. "I suffered from chronic diarrhoea for ten years and during that time tried various medicines without obtaining any permanent relief. Last summer one of my children was taken with Cholera morbus, and I procured a bottle of this remedy. Only two doses were required to give her entire relief. I then decided to try the medicine myself, and did not use all of one bottle before I was well and I have never since been troubled with that complaint. One cannot say too much in favor of that wonderful medicine." This remedy is for sale by A. G. Luken & Co. and W. H. Sudhoff, Fifth and Main streets.

A trackless railway is soon to be made its advent in Prussia. It will run over a good roadbed, twenty feet wide, and will obtain its power from overhead wires.

STARBUCK CASE STILL A MISTERY

WHICH WILL LIKELY NEVER BE SOLVED

ALL CLUES RUN DOWN

In An Effort to Solve the Mystery of the Death of Mrs. William Starbuck.

Newcastle, Ind., July 20.—With no apparent progress having been made in the effort to solve the mystery of the Starbuck tragedy at Greensboro, the death of Mrs. William Starbuck and baby still continues the main topic of conversation and the hope that at first was held that the guilty parties would be brought to justice and punished has about given way to a settled opinion that the mystery will never be solved.

While the officers may have some clues that have not yet been run down, the investigation has been most thorough. If they have discovered any good information they have as yet failed to make it known, and the belief is gradually growing that they have discovered nothing that will warrant calling the grand jury or getting a conviction.

Every day the officers have been in Greensboro and vicinity. All other affairs of the county have been allowed to wait.

The public generally places considerable confidence in the belief of Dr. Garrett that the woman was not afflicted with insanity of any nature. Dr. Garrett is a reputable physician and business man and not given to entering such controversies without being firm in the belief he advocates. He knew the dead woman for years and was called to attend her when she was discovered in the well.
