GOOD FOR EARLHAM.

The faculty and students of Earlham College, as well as the friends of that institution, have good reason to feel proud of their institution, and Mr. Hamilton as well who has been so conspicuously honored by his appointment to one of the oldest Universities on the continent of Europe.

This is an emphatic expression in favor of the college. Only a few years ago, there was an idea prevailing that the ideal place for the American boy or girl to attend school was the great university with its quadrangles, laboratories, observatories, libraries, foreign born professors and millions of endowment. But the sentiment has changed in favor of the small college and the result will be more thorough scholarship.

The great and well equipped university is needed as a place to do advanced work but it presupposes a liberal education before entering it.

The small college is the place to get instruction or education or culture or whatever one may desire to call it. The small college is the place to lay broad and deep foundations for the university—the real university, the ideal university. This appointment of one of Earlham's students to a Rhodes scholarship, is a distinguished compliment to this institution as well as to the community that fosters it. This appointment is more than a compliment to the institution. It will place it in the front ranks of American colleges and will widen its field of influence and usefulness. This appointment marks the beginning of a new era in the history of Earlham college and with its splendid faculty and equipment, next year ought to be its best year. Long live the American college in general and Earlham college in particular. These colleges are the outgrowth of the prayers and support of the real, common people of this country and the universities are (not always, nearly always) the monuments of some rich men who would not care to give all the particulars about how they acquired their riches.

Earlham was founded and is fostered by the real and will touch the lives of more individuals than the university founded by the rich.

The Palladium was in error the other day when it said that Governor Morton resigned the governorship to be appointed United States Senator by Governor Lane. He resigned the governorship after he had been elected senator by the legislature in January 1867. He was elected again in 1873.

The president of Cornell University is most excellent authority on some of the economic questions of the day but his method of dealing with trusts is unique. He believes that all the evils of the trusts can be overcome by "public opinion and the influence of potential competition. Well, public opinion as expressed in legislation is a good thing but some kind of competition—that kind that means free trade—would be very detrimental to the American corner-stones of prosperity.

One of the most conspicuous educational doctrines ever uttered was that by Comenius: "Learn to do by doing." This doctrine was meant primarily for the schools but is now recognized in all the trades and professions. It is well exemplified in the camp for military instruction at Indianapolis. When the Indiana state troops are called out hereafter, they will be ready for active service. The camps of instruction will not be as necessary as they have been in the past when the recruit had to be trained for months before entering regular service.

DEMOCRATS

Of Prominence are in Session at Parkersburg.

(By Associated Press.)

Parkersburg, W. Va., August 2.—National Committeeman John McGraw, Henry G. Davis and members of the State committee and others have been in conference today considering the ticket and platform for tomorrow's State convention. It is expected the latter will accord with the St. Louis platform and embody Davis' well known ideas on State taxation, which seeks to relieve real estate and tax oil, coal and corporations. The talk today indicates that Judge John H. Holt, of Huntington, will be made a candidate for governor unless he positively declines. Davis declares he has no slate for tickets.
