GETTING LIGHT UPON DIVORCE

WILL GATHER STATISTICS IN CONFORMITY WITH CRUM-PACKER'S RESOLUTION.

COMMON LAW WAS BEST

Census Bureau To Look Into Much
Mooted Question—A National Law Out of Question.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—In conformity with a resolution offered by Representative Crumpacker, and adopted in the last Congress, agents of the census bureau will soon begin to gather data all over the country, which will throw light on the extent to which the sanctity of the marriage relation is being disregarded and the causes of domestic infidelity. The inquiry will cover the whole scope of divorces and their causes.

Judge Crumpacker, whose long experience on the bench gave him an insight into the joys and woes of married life, is convinced that there has for years been a growing disregard for the marriage relation throughout the country.

"The old common law," said he, "regarded marriage as a complete union, an indissoluble merger of man and wife. The whole tendency of modern times and modern legislation is to regard marriage as a sort of business arrangement between man and woman. It is no longer a case of 'what is yours is mine and what is mine is yours.' All sorts of antenatal contracts and post-nuptial disputes looking to what is called the greater liberty of the wife in a certain sense did not have as broad a measure of liberty as at present, but he social status was higher. Men were never more gallant and chivalrous toward the gentle sex in those days than they are now.

"The statistics which are soon to be gathered will afford a liberal education on the subject of marriage. A national law on the subject is, of course, out of the question, as it can only be dealt with by the several state legislatures, but the statistics will furnish material whereby social reformers can work toward the establishment of uniform marriage and divorce laws in all of the states. When such uniformity is secured the divorce mills in the Dakotas and the Gretna Greens at Jeffersonville and other places will have to go out of business.

ASSASSINS' LAIR IS FOUND

SHANTY IN SWAMP REVEALS SOCIETY'S PLOTS.

Believed by Officers that Governors of Pennsylvania and Ohio Were Marked for Death.

Washington, Jan. 25.—What is believed to be a gigantic anarchistic plot for the destruction of prominent men in the United States, was unearthed at Baird, a small mining town ten miles east of here.

It is believed that Governor Penypacker of this state and Governor Pattison of Ohio were condemned to death by the organization. Evidence also was found that leads the authorities to believe that many other high officials were included.

Coroner Sipe stumbled upon the scene while searching for the murderer of Michael Cerrazola, a wealthy Washington county Italian, who was killed last week. The crime was laid to the "Black Hand" society, and in searching for members of this organization the other bigger one was discovered.

George Baril, an Italian, was arrested last night by the police for the Cerrazola murder. In his clothes was found a paper containing the plans formulated in a small hut, evidently the meeting place of some society to which he belonged. Officers finally discovered this shanty at Baird in a dense swamp. They broke it open and found there evidence that may incriminate at least half a hundred Italians in Washington county. The room was lined with pigeonholes filled with letters in which the plot for the killing of numerous officials was outlined.

The destruction of Governor Penypacker and Governor Pattison was delegated to the local band, and similar gangs in other parts of the country were given their territories. Nearly all of the letters found were received from Paterson, N. J., but no names were signed. A majority of the letters bore the initials "G." and "M."

The letters were addressed to John Spida, the president, Peter Soraki, and Livey Custno. Spida was placed under arrest this evening and the other two men are being shadowed. It is believed that the clew the police are working on will lead to some rendezvous where other members of the organization can be arrested.

Cerrazola is now asserted by the authorities to have been murdered because he refused to contribute money to aid in the consummation of the plots of the organization. His cousin, Mrs. Lizzie Pezzona, a wealthy widow, was threatened with death recently, unless she contributed $1,000. The county authorities are endeavoring to suppress facts in connection with the case.

WIG DISGUISES HIM FROM PROCESS SERVERS

Expedience, Not Vanity, Prompts Oil
King to Hide His Sahara-Like Pate.

New York, Jan. 25.—When John D. Rockefeller took to wearing a wig less than a year ago, he adopted a disguise that has proven almost impenetrable. It was thought that when the black and gray head covering first made its appearance the old man decided to wear it because of his abhorrence of a bald head.

A close friend of Mr. Rockefeller, however, says it was not the millionaire's vanity that prompted the change, but his desire to conceal his identity from an inquisitive public.

Mr. Rockefeller, because of his hairless head and sharp features used to be easily recognized when traveling about the country. This was vividly impressed upon him during a trip to San Francisco, about a year ago, when a porter, within three minutes after Mr. Rockefeller boarded the train, spread the news about that "John D." was aboard.

On his return to Cleveland, Mr. Rockefeller bought the wig, and

Mr. Rockefeller has made several trips since he got the wig, and has escaped the attention that he used to attract. His closest friends have to look twice to be sure it is Mr. Rockefeller.

It is considered possible that the process servers in the Standard Oil investigation may have passed Mr. Rockefeller on the street without having recognized him.

SCORED BY TWAIN

ASSAILS THE HYPOCRITICAL
MILLIONAIRES.

True to Christian Private Morals
363 Days a Year and Dishonest at Tax-Paying Times.

New York, Jan. 25.—Mark Twain, in speaking of the Booker T. Washington meeting at Carnegie hall, took occasion to deliver a scathing arraignment of the hypocritical millionaires who go to church and then swear off their honest taxes. By their example they debauch the whole community, he said.

"There are two separate and distinct kinds of Christian morals," said Twain, "so separate, so distinct, so unrelated, that they are no more kin to each other than are archangels and politicians. During 363 days in the year the American citizen is true to his Christian private morals and keeps undefiled the nations character. In the other two days of the year he leaves his Christian private morals at home and carries his Christian public morals to the tax office and the polls. Without a blush he will vote for an unclean, boss, if that boss is his party's Moses. Without compunction, he will vote against the best man in the whole land if he is on the other ticket.

"Once a year he lays aside his Christian private morals and hires a ferryboat and piles up his bonds in a warehouse in New Jersey for three days, and gets out his Christian public morals and goes to the tax office and holds up his hand and swears he has told the truth, so help him. The next day the list appears in the papers—and every man in the list is a billionaire and a member of a couple of churches.

"I know all those people. I have friendly, social and criminal intercourse with the whole lot of them. They never miss a sermon when they are asked to be around, and they never miss swearing-off day, whether they are told to be around or not. Even the innocent cannot remain innocent in the disintegration atmosphere of this thing.

"I used to be honest. I am crumbling. No, I have crumbled. When they assessed me at $75,000, a fortnight ago, I went out and tried to borrow the money and could not. Then, when I found they were letting a whole crop of millionaires live in New York at a third of the price they were charging me, I was hurt. I was indignant, and said this is the last feature. I am not going to run this town all by myself.

"In that moment—in that memorable moment—I began to crumble. In 15 minutes I was merely a moral sand pile, and lifted up my hand with those seasoned and experienced deacons and swore off every bit of personal property I've got in the world, clear down to the cork leg, glass eye and what is left of the figure.

"Look at those good millionaires. Aren't they gentlemen? Well, they swear, only once a year, maybe, but there's enough bulk to make up for the last time.

"And do they lose anything by it? No, they don't. They save enough in three minutes to support the family seven years."
