AMUSING, YET PATHETIC.

Were not the situation of peril and danger rendered by the eruption of Vesuvius pathetic, the following incident which happened to King Victor Emmanuel would be amusing, viewed in the light of the twentieth century civilization and knowledge. When the king and queen arrived Monday on the scene of devastation being wrought by Vesuvius, they were surrounded by a crowd of loyal subjects who exclaimed, "God sent you to us." One of the women in the crowd, addressing the king, cried: "If thou art our king, command the volcano to stop." It would be hard to find a better example of the superstitions belief in the divine power of kings still existing in Europe at the present time. Yet it is pathetic to see these peasants beseeching their king to stop Vesuvius' outbreak. Ancient history tells of a somewhat similar case. Hundreds of years ago Denmark was ruled over by a king named Canute. Canute, as was generally the case with monarchs, was attended by a number of fawning courtiers, by whom he was persuaded to believe he had such power that he could cause even the ocean's tide to stop at his command. One day when the tide was at the ebb, Canute, seated in chair placed at the edge of the ocean, commanded the tide not to flow back again. Needless to say the tide did flow back, and Canute, king though he was, discovered that God's natural laws obey the command of no man. It would be interesting to know, however, how King Victor got around the appeal of the peasant woman, and still left her a believer in the divine power of kings.

Doubtless Mr. Witherby wishes the smoke from Vesuvius would extend clear around to Richmond, and hide the true facts concerning the electric light deal.

THE RIGHT SORT.

King Victor Emmanuel and Queen Helena, of Italy, are the right sort. Kings and Queens as generally pictured are with few exceptions a worthless lot, caring for nothing but their own pleasure, and taking very little interest in their subjects whose worth they measure only in proportion to the amount of income they derive from them. Italy, however, is fortunate in possessing a king and queen who are an exception to the rule. The present eruption of Vesuvius furnishes a means of correctly judging the worth of this royal couple. The king and queen arrived in Naples on Monday, and spite of the fatigue occasioned by their long journey from Rome, proceeded at once to the towns and villages in the path of the lava streams from Vesuvius, as the King declared it was his duty to be where the danger was. Here, then, is a monarch who has the right conception of his duty to his subjects; to be with them in their need, and share the dangers which beset them. It is safe to say the devotion to duty displayed by King Victor Emmanuel, will increase his already great popularity among his subjects. Nor will Queen Helena's devotion in sharing her husband's perils, be likely to be forgotten.

CO-EDS ARE OUTNUMBERED

Reversal of Usual Conditions at Indiana Normal—Spring Enrollment 1,200.

[Palladium Special]

Terre Haute, Ind., April 11.—The spring term enrollment at the Indiana Normal will reach 1,200. More than 1,000 were present when regular class work began this week, and, judging by the past, 200 will enter within the next ten days. Fortunately many of the new students entered by examinations, but, as President Parsons explains, so many are now admitted on teachers' license and diplomas that a small per cent. take the examinations, and for that reason students do not feel the need of reporting early.

The remarkable fact in the enrollment is the large number of male students. For the first time in several years the male students outnumbered the co-eds. At the fall and winter terms of the current school year the co-eds outnumbered the male students nearly four to one.

MOTOR CARS ON THE PAN HANDLE

Richmond Division Officials Take Step to Meet Traction Line Competition.

SCHEDULES ARE PREPARED

TEN CARS MAY BE PUT IN SERVICE—LATER ON MOTOR CARS MAY RUN FROM COLUMBUS TO INDIANAPOLIS.

Although the officials do not authorize the report, it is practically certain that the Richmond Division of the Pennsylvania Lines will have motor cars in service on its line within six weeks, competing with interurban cars and other steam lines between Hamilton and Cincinnati and between New Castle and Elwood.

It was proposed several months ago to test the motor cars, but test runs on other roads, the Erie, Chicago & Alton and many others, have proven their worth and the Pennsylvania has decided to put them in operation on the Richmond Division, and possibly on the entire system, where the local business is cut into by electric lines.

It is proposed to put in service on June 1, from five to ten of the cars, making half hour trips between Hamilton & Cincinnati, through the suburban district, running over the tracks of the C. L. & N. Ry., and between New Castle and Elwood, running through Anderson and other good sized gas belt cities. The effect on local receipts of such a system of motor cars will be very beneficial, it is thought by the officials and will justify the expense of installing such service.

Schedules Are Made.

Schedules have been made out to be submitted to headquarters for approval. There will be thirty-eight trips made each day, on both ends of the division. The cars will be handled in the same manner as regular railroad trains, each being given a number. They will be operated by the train dispatchers in the head of the office. This will make an addition to the dispatcher's office a necessity, as there will then be over 100 trains to handle in every twenty-four hours.

Before the motor car service can go into effect, many more sidings will be necessary. The Richmond division has constructed several long sidings in anticipation of such service, but it will be necessary to have a siding in every two miles of the road.

May Make Long Trips.

The installation of motor cars on the Pennsylvania Lines means that hereafter, motor cars will cut a great figure in local passenger service. Failing to buy out the traction lines, which have been getting much of the business, the railroads have adopted a system which is a direct competitor of the electric lines. For such a railroad as the Pennsylvania Lines to take up motor cars, means that the cars are substantial and may eventually take the place of all steam trains for local traffic. Between Indianapolis and Columbus cars may be run, as there is much local trade lost to the steam roads between those two cities on account of the interurban lines.
