CITY LEAGUE IS BROUGHT TO CLOSE

Quite Run Down at the Heel, the Organization Finishes Its First Season.

STARRS WIN FINAL GAME

PALLADIUMS, WITH A PATCHED-UP TEAM, LOSE TO LEAGUE LEADERS IN AN UNINTERESTING CONTEST.

Quite run down at the heel, the City Base Ball League came to a close yesterday. The Palladiums, with five regulars and four pickups, lost to the Starrs by a score of 6 to 4. The game was uninteresting, and long drawn out.

The Kibbys were scheduled to play the Pan Handles, but the railroaders have "husted" and they sent word they would forfeit. The Pogue-Miller team had one more game with the Pan Handles, and they got it in a similar manner. The correct standing of the clubs is now as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Starrs	12	4	.750
Kibbys	9	7	.562
Pogue-Millers	7	9	.438
Pan Handles	7	9	.438
Palladiums	6	10	.375

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

MAN, THE INSCRUTABLE.

You meet a man and talk to him. For days and even years. Together smoke your briar pipes. Perhaps have several beers. But, though you seem to know him well.

Through many a friendly chat. You never dream what schemes are stored Away beneath his hat.

You cannot guess, to watch his face. What vision stir his soul. Or where ambition has marked out. A lot for him a goal. His only care would seem to be. To get his daily bread. You never would suspect the plans That rattle in his head.

He may have hoped some day to be A senator and sit Around the capitol as though He had been raised to it; Nor can you even make a guess From outward signs you see But what beneath his hat may buzz A presidential bee.

You may be close to him for years And never see a sign That he has great ambitions in Society to shine. Ambitious he seems to be While resting in his chair. But he may have it all blocked out To be a millionaire.

Another Soulless Combine. In these days when things are being reformed while you wait, although many of them never find it out, the latest thing that calls for sniffling is a combine that has gathered to itself the pills, powder and lotions of the land and is now politely inviting us to pay the price or leave them alone, just as we see fit.

Congress may know how to handle the drug trust, and we hope it does. But if it is open to advice we would suggest that it give the naughty combine a dose of quinine without any jelly once every four till it throws up its hands and cries "Enough!"

If this does not do the work in four ten days there are some other drugs that you and I were obliged to take as children that it could sandwich in between for good measure. In other words, the drug trust should be given doses of its own medicine in large quantities and at regular intervals until cured.

Instantaneous Shorthand.

"By my system you can get shorthand in thirty days."

"Huh, I knew a fellow who beat that!"

"Impossible!"

"It wasn't with him. He monkeyed with a buzz saw."

When Inspiration Flags.
Kind reader, did you ever sit And watch the moments lightly flit And try to think with all your might Of something very cute to write?

The clock hands slowly moved along— Much swifter than your joke or song— And you have in an hour or so Some paper clean and white to show.

It's easy when you read a bit Of poetry or sparkling wit. Some one has dashed it off, you think. But test the thing with pen and ink.

Of course there's no such word as fall. But try a sonnet or a tale And see, as they refuse to frame. The beauty of the writing game.

You think and think and think some more Until your intellect is sore And wonder if you didn't miss Your calling when you took to this.

The hour to go to press draws nigh, And still your copy book is shy. So you fix up to make a show. Some ancient joke and let 'er go.

MINOT LEDGE LIGHTHOUSE

The First One Was Swept Away With Its Occupants.

The first lighthouse on Minot's ledge was built in 1848. It was an octagonal tower resting on the tops of eight wrought iron piles eight inches in diameter and sixty feet high, with their bases sunk five feet in the rock. These piles were placed together in many ways, and, as they offered less surface to the waves than a solid structure, this lighthouse was considered by all authorities upon the subject to be exceptionally strong.

Its great test came in April, 1851. On the 14th of that month, two keepers being in the lighthouse, an easterly gale set in, steadily increasing in force. People on shore, and no doubt the keepers themselves, watched the heavy seas sweep harmlessly through the network of piles beneath the house and feared no harm. On the 15th, however, the wind and sea had greatly increased and the waves were flung higher and higher toward that tower in the air. Yet all thought they surely could not reach sixty feet above the ledge.

That night was one of keen anxiety, for the gale still increased, and all through that dreadful driving storm and darkness the faithful keepers were at their posts, for the light burned brightly. On Wednesday, the 16th, the gale had become a hurricane, and when at times the tower could be seen through the mists and sea drift it seemed to bend to the shock of the waves. At 4 o'clock that afternoon an ominous proof of the fury of the waves on Minot's ledge reached the shore, a platform which had been built between the piles only seven feet below the floor of the keepers' room. The raging seas then were leaping fifty feet in the air. Would they reach ten feet higher, for if so the house and the keepers were doomed? Nevertheless, when darkness set in the light shone out as brilliantly as ever. But the gale seemed, if possible, to increase. What agony those two men must have suffered! How that dreadful abode must have swayed in the irresistible hurricane, and trembled at each crashing sea! The poor unfortunates must have known that if those seas, leaping always higher and higher, reached their house it would be flung down into the ocean and they would be buried with it beneath the waves.

To those hopeless, terrified watchers the entombing sea came at last. At 1 o'clock in the morning the lighthouse bell was heard by those on shore to give a mournful clang, and the light was extinguished. It was the funeral knell of two patient heroes.

Next day there remained on the rock only eight jagged iron stumps.

The Chinchilla.
The chinchilla, so much prized for its beautiful silken light gray fur, is found only in the Cordillera ranges of the Andes in Bolivia and Chile. It is a small animal which burrows in the ground and in appearance somewhat resembles a rat.

The Incoming Stream of Diamonds.
More than $36,000,000 worth of diamonds and other precious stones have been imported into the United States during the past calendar year. This importation of diamonds and precious stones is by far the largest in the history of the United States, the high water mark in earlier years having been $28,500,000 in 1903, while 1904 showed but $27,750,000. In the ten months of 1905 ended with the month of October the total was over $31,000,000, or more than in any full year prior to 1905. The importation of these ten months, amounting to $31,259,157, gives an average of over $3,000,000 per month, so that it may reasonably be assumed that the figures for the two following months will bring the total up to $36,000,000 as against $27,750,000 in 1904 and $28,500,000 in 1903.—Harper's Weekly.

Needed It.
From a sigh for the mint he could not refrain. There was none at hand, but he wished so hard For an odorous whiff of the herb's bruised vein That used to grow in the old back yard.

He was not athirst, as you may have guessed, And not for himself did he long for it. But his only son was so sore distressed That he felt he could use a little bit.

For the youngster had howled with the stomach ache From the dark midnight to the dawn's pale tint And had kept the household all awake— Wherefore the sigh for the peppermint.

Quite Right.
"What's your idea of a good joke?"
"One that hits a fellow that you don't like."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.
One reason why truth telling is so unpopular is because it is so apt to be unpleasant.

When mischief is chronic in a boy, spankings are apt to be periodical.
