ODDITIES IN SERMONS

The Lucky London Clergyman Who Preaches the "Golden Sermon" Receives a Fee of $150—The Text Problem of the "Museum Sermon."

Every year on Oct. 16 is preached at St. Catherine Cree church in Leadenhall street the "lion sermon." It commemorates the escape, over two centuries back, of a then lord mayor, Sir John Gayer, who while traveling in the east encountered a lion, which, on his repeating the prayer of Daniel, loved him to pursue his way unmolested. In gratitude for his miraculous escape the worthy citizen left directions in his will that a commemorative sermon should be preached annually, together with sufficient money to carry this bequest into effect.

Every Jan. 30 for 225 years has the "Asheton sermon" been delivered in the parish church of Downham, Lancashire. Over two centuries since Sir Richard Asheton of Downham Hall left a legacy of £4 a year, £2 thereof to be distributed among the poor and the remainder to be paid to a clergyman for an annual exposition, on the date of the testator's death, of Job xix, 23, 26, and Colossians iii, 3, 4.

The "Spital sermon," which is delivered every Easter before the lord mayor and corporation of London at Christ church, Newgate street, originated in an old custom by which the bishop of London appointed some learned cleric to deliver a sermon at St. Paul's Cross on Good Friday as a prelude to three sermons on "The Resurrection" to be given at the pulpit cross in the Spital on the following Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday by a bishop, a dean and a doctor of divinity respectively.

The following Sunday at St. Paul's Cross another divine passed judgment on these discourses, and on this occasion the mayor and corporation, who had on the preceding Monday and Tuesday been garbed in scarlet, attended, as on Good Friday and Easter Wednesday, robed in violet, gowns. Ere their migration to Horseham the boys of the Bluecoat school were always present at the "spital sermon."

"Flower sermons" are still to be heard in more than one church. On Whitsun Tuesday at St. James' church, Mitre court, Aldgate, one of these is preached, while at St. Leonard's church, Shoreditch, a botanical discourse is, in accordance with the will of Thomas Faichild, who died in 1729, annually delivered. At Stepney church the "horticultural sermon" called to mind the long past days when instead of being surrounded by thousands of houses the church overtopped a country village with its quaint cottages and well tended gardens.

JOHN F. O'ROURKE, TUNNEL BUILDER.

The Pennsylvania railroad tunnels under the Hudson river from New Jersey to New York city, now very nearly completed, are marvels of engineering. John F. O'Rourke is the contractor. Unlike most of the men who are doing things in the metropolis, he was born in New York city. Mr. O'Rourke acquired his engineering education largely at the night school of the noted Cooper institute. Before he began boring the subaqueous tunnels he laid the deep foundations for many city skyscrapers.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The following is taken from an English history printed in London during the last decade of the eighteenth century: "The ship Bedford, Captain Moores, belonging in Massachusetts, arrived at the Downs on the 3d of February (1783), passed Gravesend and was reported at the custom house on the 6th. She was not allowed regular entry until some consultation had taken place between the commissioners of customs and the lords of council on account of many acts of parliament in force against the rebels of America. This was the first vessel which displayed the thirteen rebellious stripes of America in any British port. This vessel was a whale ship from New Bedford and undoubtedly was the first to carry the American flag on an errand of peace into a port of Great Britain.—Housekeeper.

The Game of Adjectives. A party of schoolgirls had capital fun one day over a "game of adjectives."

One of the girls, who was rather clever, wrote a little story about something that had happened at their school, and she was careful to use no adjectives. The story was not more than 300 words altogether, and where the adjectives should have been she left blanks. She did not show any one her paper, but she asked her companions one after the other to supply her with adjectives for the nouns, which she told them haphazard, so that they might not guess what the story was till all the adjectives had been supplied, says Home Notes. Then she read the tale aloud, and the shouts of laughter from her companions showed that the game was a success.

Letter Enigma. The letters which spell the name of a once great personage appear in their order at the beginning of the first or second words, helping to form the following well known old sayings: What is a name? All's well that ends well. A sitting hen never grows fat. Aim high, and you'll never fall low. Virtue is its own reward. We never miss the water till the well runs dry. Return good for evil. Where there's a will there's a way. One swallow does not make a summer. New wine should not be put into old bottles. Answer.—Washington.

The Czarowitz's Christmas Present. The czarina's Christmas present to her son was an exact model of the czar's favorite chalet, or summer house, in the imperial pleasure grounds attached to Tsarskoe-Selo palace. The model which is beautifully carved in soft whitewood, is built up of eighty-four separate pieces and can be pulled to bits by the little prince and put together again. The czarina, who is an expert woodcarver, fashioned the toy herself.

Conundrums. Why are grasshoppers like watches? Because they move by springs. When is an umbrella like a person convalescent? When it is recovered. What is that which we never borrow, yet often return? Thanks. What coat is finished without buttons and put on wet? A coat of paint. What is it that has neither flesh nor blood, yet has four fingers and a thumb? A glove.

Queer Things About Insects. A horsefly will live for hours after the head has been plucked off. The dragon fly can devour its own body and the head still live. Some flies thrust their eggs into the bodies of caterpillars, but always in such parts of the body that when the larvae are feeding on the flesh of the foster parent they will not eat into any vital part.

Four Leaf Clover. There is an old superstition that it brings good luck to find a four leaved clover. The superstition is founded, first, on the rarity of the specimen, but chiefly on the fact that the four leaves are arranged in the form of a cross.

A Riddle. What is it that is so dangerous that all people fear it, but which a woman proudly wears about her neck with comfort? Answer.—Boa.

Helped the Y. M. C. A. At a mothers' meeting held at the Warner school building the past week $2 was raised by subscription to aid the Y. M. C. A. fund. Although small, the incident serves to show the spirit that is manifest among those friendly to the movement.
