TENNIS PROVING VERY POPULAR THIS SEASON

Many Players Are at the Public Playgrounds.

TOURNAMENTS ARE TALKED

Tennis is proving a very popular sport for many young and old men of this city. Every day there is a large number of players on the tennis courts at the public playgrounds. The interest is two-fold over that of past years.

The heavy rain caught a number of players Friday afternoon and while the storm was on, plans were discussed for a tennis tournament to be given each month during the remainder of the summer. The first probably will be started next week. Eight teams will be entered in the doubles while a single tournament probably will not be attempted at the present time owing to lack of interest in this branch of the sport. The number of entries is expected to increase as the season progresses.

EARLHAM ACCREDITED BY THE STATE BOARD

Becomes Part of the Normal School System.

INCREASE IN ATTENDANCE.

At a meeting of the state board of education Friday, Earlham college was "accredited" for the training of public school teachers, in accordance with the provisions of the new law. This makes Earlham a part of the normal school system of Indiana and teachers who do professional work there are eligible to teach in the public schools.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Earlham has an unusually large attendance at the summer term, now in session, there being an increase of about 40 per cent over the attendance of last year.

President Kelly left today for Terre Haute where he will deliver the address before the graduating class of the Indiana state normal school tomorrow.

W. R. Ward, of Dyersburg, Tenn., writes: "This is to certify that I have used Orino Laxative Fruit Syrup for chronic constipation, and it has proven without a doubt, to be a thorough, practical remedy for this trouble, and it is with pleasure I offer my conscientious reference." A. G. Luken & Co.

The reunions are always greatly enjoyed and Sunday's event promises to be no exception to the rule.

REMOVAL OF SCHOOL STIRS DISSENSION

Member of Taylor University Board Threatens an Injunction Suit.

OBJECTS TO USE OF NAME.

HE SAYS THAT THE NEW TRUSTEES WISH TO BENEFIT BY NAME AND GOOD WILL OF THE INSTITUTION.

After all the arrangements had been completed for the removal of the Taylor university from Upland to Muncie, to occupy the college buildings at Normal City, comes an objection from Grant A. Dentier, of Marion, who was named to serve one year on the board of trustees of the institution. Disputes from Marion state that he is opposed to the transfer of the property, and that he has threatened to file an injunction suit against the new corporation, charging that the Taylor university of Muncie is trying to steal the influences and good will of the school at Upland. Dentier is reported as saying that the removal of the university to Muncie will be a plain case of larceny, as it was not done by the consent of the regular board of the institution. He is reported as saying that Dr. Winchester and several of the trustees, called dissensionists, have attempted to steal the good name of the university. Dentier, of Marion, says that the matter will be taken up at the regular meeting of the old board, July 1. He accuses Trustees Shinn, Ayres and Smith of having conspired with President Winchester in getting the institution to remove to Muncie. He says they have no right to the title of the property of the Upland institution.

FALLING OFF A BICYCLE.

Mark Twain's Story of the Way He Established a Record.

It seems a good while ago. I must have been rather young for my age then, for I was trying to tame an old fashioned bicycle nine feet high. It is to me almost unbelievable at my present stage of life that there have really been people willing to trust themselves upon a dizzy and unstable altitude like that, and that I was one of them. Twicely and I took lessons every day. He succeeded and became master of the art of riding that wild vehicle, but I had no gift in that direction and was never able to stay on mine long enough to get any satisfactory view of the planet. Every time I tried to steal a look at a pretty girl or any other kind of scenery that single moment of inattention gave the bicycle the chance it had been waiting for, and I went over the front of it and struck the ground on my head or back before I had time to realize that something was happening. I didn't always go over the front way. I had other ways and practiced them all. But no matter which way was chosen for me there was always one monotonous result—the bicycle skinned my leg and leaped up into the air and came down on top of me. Sometimes its wires were so sprung by this violent performance that it had the collapsed look of an umbrella that had had a misunderstanding with a cyclone. After each day's practice I arrived at home with my skin hanging in ribbons from my knees down. I plastered the ribbons on where they belonged and bound them there with handkerchiefs steeped in lotions and was ready for more adventures next day. It was always a surprise to me that I had so much skin and that it held out so well. There was always plenty, and I soon came to understand that the supply was going to remain sufficient for all my needs. It turned out that I had nine skins, in layers, one on top of the other like the leaves of a book, and some of the doctors said it was quite remarkable.

I was full of enthusiasm over this insane amusement. My teacher was a young German from the bicycle factory, a gentle, kindly, patient creature with a pathetically grave face. He never smiled; he never made a remark; he always gathered me tenderly up when I plumped off and helped me on again without a word. When he had been teaching me twice a day for three weeks I introduced a new gymnastic—one that he had never seen before—and so at last a compliment was wrung from him, a thing which I had been risking my life for days to achieve. He gathered me up and said mournfully, "Mr. Clemens, you can fall off a bicycle in more different ways than any person I ever saw before."

—From Mark Twain's Autobiography in the North American Review.

CHINESE USE TIME STICKS.

Each Will Burn Throughout a Period of Twelve Hours.

The Chinese have several contrivances for keeping the time of day. The water clock has often been described, but the use of burning sticks is less familiar. These are described by Colonel Bridges in his book, "Round the World in Six Months."

We bought a small bundle of time sticks, each of which is thirty-two inches long, are used, as their name more or less implies, for the purpose of measuring time. For use by day some are especially made, while others for service by night are particularly constructed.

Each burns during a period of twelve hours. Of these "King Alfred's candles," as some of our party termed them, we bought two and from a printed circular or advertisement which was at the same time handed to us by the man who sold them we learned the following particulars:

The materials from which these time measuring sticks are made are prepared according to the directions of the official or imperial astronomers or astrologers. The duration of each time stick is adjusted according to the clepsydra or water clock, so that the time which it indicates when burning may be regarded as correct.

Time sticks which are manufactured to mark the hours of the day must be lighted at day dawn, when the lines on the palm of the hand are just visible, while those which are constructed to mark the hours of the night must be lighted at dusk, when the lines on the palm of the hand are not discernible. Each stick when burning must be placed in a perpendicular position. It is also necessary that it should be placed in a room free from currents of air.—Youth's Companion.

Leibnitz and the Alchemists.

Leibnitz, one of the great men of literature, who died in 1716, wished to join a society of alchemists who were prosecuting a search for the philosopher's stone. He compiled a letter from the writings of the most celebrated alchemists and sent it to the society. The letter consisted of the most obscure terms he could find, and he himself, he said, did not understand a word of it. Afraid to be thought ignorant, the society invited him to its meetings and made him secretary.—Argonaut.

Her Poem.

"Oh, George," she exclaimed, "now that you've seen my new hat you simply can't regret that I got it! Isn't it just a poem?"

"Well, if it is," replied John, "I suppose a proper title for it would be 'Owed to a Milliner.'"—Philadelphia Press.

Sam Minnix, who was tried in the city court Friday afternoon on a charge of stealing a lawnmower from Mrs. Sarah Sherer and who was found guilty by Judge Converse and fined $10 and costs, remarked after the trial that if he knew such stiff punishment was in store for him he would have asked the court to allow him to leave town and would have promised never to return.
