

EARLE'S AFFINITY HELPS WIFE PACK

Artist-Poet-Millionaire-Socialist
Expounds His New Doctrine.

HAPPINESS EXPECTED SOON

WOMAN WHO WILL BECOME MRS.
EARLE TO REMAIN AT HOUSE—
HIS WIFE AND CHILD HAVE SAILED.

New York, Sept. 4.—To a reporter Fredrick Pinney Earle, artist, poet, socialist, millionaire, vegetarian, recluse and eccentric, expounded his new doctrine of the freedom of love.

In the case of Earle, freedom of love means putting aside his wife and child so that he may marry his newly discovered soul's affinity, meaning by that a certain young woman from Pennsylvania.

The name of the woman for whom Earle is about to put by his wife is Miss Julia Cutler. Her brother's name is Alfred. Persons claiming to be familiar with the facts say that she and her brother, are well known in socialist circles in this city.

Today the wife sails for Europe to get a divorce. Her husband will see her off on the steamer and bid her an affectionate farewell.

The affinity will stay on at the Earle home, she and her people. When Mrs. Earle has got her French decree of divorce Mr. Earle will marry the affinity and, as they say in the fairy tales that are no more fantastic than this real tale, it is to be presumed that they will all live happily ever after.

The accepted code of social ethics has been turned upside down and stood upon its bewildering head by two astonishing women and a most amazing man.

Today Mrs. Earle came to New York from the beautiful Earle home near Monroe, in Orange county, to complete the preparations for her voyage. Her husband drove her to the station in a carriage and at the station he kissed her good-by. Her successor also rode to the station with her in the carriage. Around the village of Monroe it was said that the strange woman has even helped Mrs. Earle with her packing.

No Jealousy, Says Wife.

Today Earle and the affinity accompanied Mrs. Earle and the 2-year-old Earle baby, Harold, to New York. The husband and his soul mate went to the dock with the wife and the baby boy.

"Why should I be jealous?" demanded Mrs. Earle when she came to this city.

"After our marriage," said Mrs. Earle, "my husband and I loved each other dearly, but as time went on we gradually found that we were not suited to each other. Mr. Earle believed that marriages were rearranged; that they were made before birth, and that if two people were not intended by divine power for each other they would never be happy. Both he and I plainly saw that such was not the condition in our case and we agreed to become divorced when Mr. Earle met the Bethlehem woman, whom he believed was his affinity.

Says She Loved Him.

"So now I am going home to my family in France. Mr. Earle will remain here and as soon as our divorce is accomplished he will marry the other woman."

"Did you love your husband?" asked the reporter.

Mrs. Earle's big eyes opened wide. "Why, of course I did," she replied, simply.

"Do you still love him?"

"Well, I have the highest regard for him."

HORSE THIEF WORKS AT A NEARBY PLACE

Local Police Get Request From Winchester.

HEADED TOWARD RICHMOND

The local police have been informed that a sorrel horse, fifteen hands high weighing 1000 pounds, and a phaeton had been stolen Tuesday night at Winchester. The Winchester marshal stated that officers, headed by Detective Buck Fletcher, were on the trail of the thief and that he had been traced to a point within four miles north of Richmond.

Sergeant McManus took a horse and phaeton and started out in search of the thief. Sergeant McManus went as far as Chester where he was informed that nothing had been seen of the thief. After trying fruitlessly to get a clue as to the whereabouts of the thief Sergeant McManus returned to Richmond about noon.

It is thought that the thief wished to avoid Richmond and that after he was last seen turned either to the east or west. Buck Fletcher who is on his trail is one of the best known horse thief detectives in the state and if he has a hot scent he will stay on the trail until he succeeds in running his quarry to earth.

A HERO OF THE BUSH.

The Daring and Devotion of a Brave
Maori Youth.

Courage is not an attribute peculiar to the white man, nor is self sacrifice the prerogative of civilization. In Mr. J. C. Pirih's "Maori Making" is told a story as touching in its brave devotion as any tale of the Victoria cross. The incident occurred at Orakau, where the English soldiers had just defeated the Maoris. A little party of colonial troops, pursuing fugitives, came upon three natives, two old men and one young fellow.

The youth, seeing the soldiers, dropped on one knee and aimed with his gun at the advancing party, which halted a moment, while the old men ran toward the forest. The old men had thrown away their firearms in order to make escape easier.

The soldiers fired at the youth, but missed. Without discharging his gun he sprang to his feet and ran on in advance until he caught up with the old men once more. Then, facing about, he presented his gun as before, but reserved his fire.

The weary old men gradually drew near cover. Once more the soldiers fired and missed; once more the gallant fellow turned and bounded on. The old men were close to the forest when the youth, nearly fainting, again knelt and took aim, but still did not fire.

The soldiers shot him as he knelt and rushed to the forest, but failed to capture the two fugitives, who, safe in the dense underbrush, made their escape.

On their return the soldiers found the brave young fellow lying dead. His gun was empty; it had not been loaded at all. With it he had covered the retreat of the old men and secured their freedom by the loss of his own life. No more gallant deed of heroic devotion was ever accomplished in any land.

Dreams of the Healthy.

There has been much discussion as to whether one dreams only on falling to sleep and during the act of waking up, or whether dreams take place at any time during sleep. While not definitely determined as yet, the evidence seems to be rather in favor of the view that one may dream at any time during the night or the whole night through. Dreaming is common to perfectly healthy persons, and in itself is no evidence of disorder.—Harper's Magazine.

Mount McKinley.

In mountain climbing the world over the climber usually arrives fresh and unfatigued at the base of the peak he wishes to storm and, as a rule, begins his ascent at a high altitude. On Mount McKinley, as described by a writer in Outing, it is the opposite. There are twenty-five miles of rugged foothills and glaciers to be crossed—with heavy packs—before the base of the mountain is reached, and then the climber is confronted by 18,000 feet of rock and ice.

MELONS IN STORAGE.

How a Rural J. P. Decided a Suit
Between Neighbors.

Problems worthy of Solomon's acumen are often submitted to these rural arbitrators, justices of the peace. In the Macon county (Mo.) archives is a case of this sort:

Timothy Kain, a farmer of Easley township, set out some watermelon vines which grew so luxuriously that they trespassed upon the field of his neighbor, Felix Hopper. When gathering time came Kain's attempt to harvest his runaway product was rebuked by Hopper and his shotgun. The controversy got into court, and Squire William Easley, for whom the township was named, was asked to decide the ownership of ten watermelons worth 15 cents apiece. The lawyers for Kain read books to show that his rights of property followed the vines clear into the next county should they travel so far. Hopper's lawyers produced equally sound reading to prove that Hopper was entitled by law to it wasn't Hopper's fault, they said, if the vines wanted to spread out and go visiting. He had the same right to them that he would have to a colony of honeybees that might get tired of being with Kain and concluded to move over and make honey for Hopper.

Squire Easley let the lawyers spout until they had read through all their books; then he arose to his six feet and said:

"Mitchell has read books that make it absolutely certain them melons belong to Kain. I hadn't any doubt in the world about that till Guthrie here got up and turned Mitchell's law bottom side up. There's no question but what there's enough law in the books for both Kain and Hopper, and that ought to make 'em happy. The court decides under the circumstances that with the law deciding both ways there's nothing to do but to hand out justice as he sees fit. The judgment of the court is that those are Kain's melons."

"Thank you, your honor," said Mitchell, arising and bowing.

"But that he's indebted to Hopper 20 cents apiece for storage," finished the justice.

"But, your honor," said Mitchell indignantly, "you can't do that. They haven't filed any claim for storage. Besides, you're allowing them more for their melons than they're worth on the market."

"The court will take judicial notice of the defendant's rights, offset or no," said Squire Easley, with some asperity. "And your own evidence shows Hopper was diligently guarding Kain's property for him. That's worth something."

"Guarding it?"

"Yes, Kain himself testified Hopper was there with a shotgun when he climbed over the fence."—Kansas City Star.

Professor Matched the Boss.

Boston and Cambridge people of an earlier day remember well Professor Child of Harvard, a scholar who was likewise a live man. They tell with great gusto a story about his faithful attention to city politics. Professor Child always attended to his duties as a citizen of Cambridge. One night he went to a ward meeting at which a boss began to put forth some of his warped ideas. The college professor was speedily on his feet and scathingly denounced the boss and his methods. After the meeting was over the good-natured boss, just to show that he bore no ill will, met the scholar on the stairs and, genially handing over a cigar, said, "Have a smoke, profess?" His antagonist straightened up, took the cigar and said with great dignity, "Yes, I'll match you in any of your lesser vices!"—Boston Herald.
