QUAKERS HAVE LEFT TO INVADE BLUFFTON

They Are Hopeful of Bagging These Two Games in Championship Race.

KOKOMO IS AT DECATUR.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND SUNDAY THERE WILL BE GAMES PLAYED AT ATHLETIC PARK.

I. O. LEAGUE STANDING.

Richmond	23	16	.590
Decatur	22	17	.565
Portland	19	18	.513

Bluffton	16	23	.410

Games Tuesday and Wednesday. Richmond at Bluffton. Portland at Van Wert. Kokomo at Decatur.

The Quakers have left for a two days' invasion of Bluffton. Every effort will be made by the locals to take these two games as they will figure prominently in the race for the championship of the I. O. league in which Richmond and Decatur are ahead of the field by a good margin, running neck and neck. While we are storming Bluffton, Decatur will be entertaining on her own yard the scrappy Kokomo Wildcats. Local fans are praying that the Wildcats use their claws to good advantage. Bluffton is a hard nut for the locals to crack, owing to the splendid corps of pitchers the Dregs carry. It will be remembered that this outfit twice shut us out on our own yard Labor Day. Thursday and Friday Richmond will play Kokomo at Athletic park and Saturday and Sunday Portland will be the attraction here.

King Cole will be used against Bluffton first and the second day Casey Horn will be relied on to subdue the Dregs. All three of our pitchers are in good shape and can be depended on to do their share in bringing the rag to Richmond.

A Military Exquisite.

Marshal Ney, who was as handsome as he was brave, never appeared on the field at a great battle until he was dressed with scrupulous elegance and his beard carefully curled and perfumed. When he was led out to execution he was cool and calm as though he were going to open a dance, only asking that the guns should be aimed low that his face might not be disfigured.

JOE GANS HAD EASY TIME WITH J. BRITT

Fight at San Francisco Lasted Five Rounds.

BRITT'S ARM IS BROKEN.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 10—Joe Gans made Jimmy Britt look like a duncie at Recreation Park Monday, but at the same time failed to realize his day dream of months, to wit: He would administer a knockout punch and have the pleasure of looking down on the native son's prostrate form while the timekeeper told off the fatal seconds.

Five rounds were boxed, the last four of them having a decided Gans favor, and then the native son declared his inability to continue. He sat in his corner holding his left arm and telling those around him that he had broken it by bringing it in contact with Gans' educated elbow in the fourth round.

Referee Welch saw Britt's plight and stepped toward him.

"His arm is broken," yelled Britt's seconds. Welch then turned and pointed dramatically at Gans, who sat in his chair and bent forward as if wondering what the commotion was about.

"You win," shouted Welch, and the battle of the lightweight championship was over.

GAY FASHIONS OF THE PAST

Dandies of Past Centuries Would Make Solomon Look Sad.

Compared with the gay apparel worn by the dandies of the past ages the youths of our time in the gayest of gay raiment make but a poor show.

The bishop of Ely in the fourteenth century had a change of raiment for every day in the year. The Earl of Northumberland boasted no less than sixty cloth of gold suits at this time.

In Queen Mary's time the wardrobe of a bishop must have been the envy of Solomon for the variety and costliness of its contents, and even a simple village priest wore "a vestment of crimson satin, a vestment of crimson velvet, a stole and fannon set with pearls, etc."

In the time of Chaucer the men wore clothes as many colored as Joseph's coat, so that while one leg would be a blaze of crimson the other would be tricked out in green, blue or yellow without any regard for harmony or contrast.

Even as late as the middle of the eighteenth century a dandy would dress himself in a vivid green coat, a waistcoat of scarlet, yellow breeches and blue stockings.

And the gentleman of a few years later wore, among other vagaries, a coat of light green, with sleeves too small for the arms and buttons too big for the sleeves; a pair of fine Manchester breeches without money in their pockets; clocked silk stockings; a club of hair behind larger than the head which carried it; a hat not larger than a sixpence.

It was a common thing in the early part of the eighteenth century for a man of fashion to spend several hours daily in the hands of his valet. Among the many operations which took up this time was "the starching of the beard and the proper perfuming of the garments, the painting of the face and anointing with oils, tinctures, essences and pomatums."—New York Herald.

THE FLAGEOLET.

It Has Always Been the Love Flute of the Apache Indian.

The flageolet is of peculiar interest to Americans, as from time immemorial it has been the medium through which the Indian youth courted their sweethearts at a distance when they were so unfortunate as to be unable to gain a personal audience.

The love or courting flute of the Apache is made of a round stick of cedar about twenty-four inches long, split lengthwise and hollowed to form an air chamber. A hole is made on each side of this diaphragm and a shallow air passage cut from one hole to the other.

Above it a cap of wood is placed for the purpose of covering the upper hole and the air channel. The lip is made of a thin sheet of lead and the whole bound together with a slender thong. In the tube part or body of the instrument are placed six finger holes, a condition that points unmistakably to the influence of contact with the white man.

The flageolet, as ordinarily understood, may be described as a whistle headed flute. In the seventeenth century English ladies often played on it. Sometimes two or three flageolet tubes were constructed with one head for the purpose of introducing notes in harmony. These were called double or triple flageolets, and a patent was taken out for this instrument by one Bainbridge.

An old English diary of 1667 contains this quaint reference to the double flageolet: "To Dumbleby's, the pipemaker, there to advise about the making of a flageolet to go low and soft, and he do show me a way which to do, and also a fashion of having two pipes of the same note fastened together, so as I can play on one and then echo it upon the other, which is mighty pretty."—American Inventor.

The Name of Higgins.

Many people who sign themselves Higgins have sought to prove that their surname is derived from the name borne by St. Hyginus, tracing it through the old English form "St. Ygyn." But according to an authority their name is really connected with "Hike," short for Isaac, or, rather, with "Hikke," the form in which "Ike" appeared in Langland's time. Isaacs, Isaacson, Hicks, Higgs, Hickson and Higson would thus be different versions of the same name, while Higgins is merely modified by the addition of the Anglo-Norman diminutive. Another school derives Higgins, Hutchinson and Higgins alike from Hugh, or, more exactly, from Hugonis, the gentile of the Latin Hugo.

The Call of the Wild.

Most of our song birds have three notes expressive of love, alarm and fellowship. The latter call seems to keep them in touch with one another. I might perhaps add to this list the scream of distress which most birds utter when caught by a cat or a hawk —the voice of uncontrolled terror and pain which is nearly the same in all species—dissonant and piercing. The other notes and calls are characteristic, but this last is the simple screech of common terrified nature.—John Burroughs in Country Life in America.

Matrimonial Tendencies.

We always tend to run to extremes in our social fashions, and it is therefore not without some interest, one may even say anxiety, that we shall watch the very decided tendency of society women to marry men very much younger than themselves. There may come a day when an age limit may have to be instituted.—London World.

The boy is taught at school that the earth is not square. By and by he finds out for himself that the same thing is true of a good many of the people.

RUN OVER BY A WAGON.

Wm. Doney, Sr., Don't Mind a Little Thing Like That.

Cambridge City, Ind., Sept. 10—Wm. Doney, Sr., was knocked down yesterday afternoon by a team of horses hitched to a farm wagon. The horses and wagon both passed over him, but he came out unhurt.

Joaquin Miller was once conversing with a learned professor who was visiting California. To the poet's query, "What do you do?" The professor answered that he held the chair of metaphysics and logic at a New England university. Whereupon the venerable Miller with an encouraging smile, reassuringly patted the professor on the shoulder. "Logic and metaphysics, eh? Well, I suppose we must have people to look after these things, even if they don't exist."

Says a San Francisco bank president: "This spring I entertained a prominent banker from Tucson, Arizona. I invited him to the merchants' association dinner. My friend listened to the many speeches very attentively and said afterward: 'I noticed that almost every speaker said, "This city, like Phoenix, will rise from her ashes." Now there is some mistake about that. I have lived in Arizona all my life, and I know for a fact that Phoenix never had a conflagration.'"
