

DISTRICT MEDICAL ASSOCIATION HERE

About Seventy-five Members Attending Meeting of The Association.

ARE AT WESTCOTT HOTEL.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS ONE OF THE INTERESTING PARTS OF THE PROGRAM—TUBERCULOSIS IS DISCUSSED.

About seventy-five eastern Indiana and western Ohio physicians, members of the Union District Medical society, met today in annual session at the Westcott hotel. The program began this morning and continued until this evening. Late this afternoon officers to serve for the ensuing year were elected. Physicians of prominence in medical colleges in this section are in attendance. Among these is Daniel Millikan of Hamilton, O., who made the dedicatory address for the physicians at the opening of Reid Memorial hospital in this city two years ago. He is considered one of the brightest men of the profession, either in Indiana or Ohio. He is a professor of medical jurisprudence in Miami Medical college. Owing to his late arrival at the meeting, President C. S. Hoagland, of Milroy, did not deliver his opening address until this afternoon. Dr. Joseph Eichberg, of Cincinnati, a member of the faculty of Miami medical college, read a very interesting paper before the society at its morning session.

Tuberculosis Discussed. Tuberculosis was the main topic of discussion this afternoon. Dr. Charles S. Bond spoke on "Tuberculosis from a Modern Standpoint," in which he outlined the campaign against the disease that has been waged in the past several months. He spoke of the condition of Wayne county so far as it was affected by the disease.

The Westcott hotel presented an animated scene at noon today, shortly following the adjournment of the morning session. Physicians of all sizes, descriptions and standing veritably swarmed through the lobby. The society took dinner at the hotel in a body.

There was much lobbying done during the noon recess in preparation for the election of officers which took place this afternoon. In a business-like manner, physicians were hustling about securing votes for their favorites. It was expected that the election would be spirited. A partial list of the members of the society who are here, follows:

POINTS TO DANGERS ABOUT YOUNG LIVES

Evangelist Urges That Greater Care Be Taken.

FEW PLACES QUITE SAFE.

Wednesday night was a good one for the U. B. revival. There were more people in attendance than at any other time except Sunday night. Mr. Shannon's subject was "Young Life, Its Possibilities and Its Perils." Among other things he declared that many men invest more money in books and papers on the mating and rearing of fowls and beasts than they do for information concerning the proper mating of human beings and the prenatal and post-natal influences that are to bless or curse the race. The children not only manifest the native characteristics seen in the parents but unless they come in contact with influences outside of the home they'll speak the language of the home and never rise above it. One strong point in training him up the way he should go, is for the parents to go that way themselves, and not simply talk about it.

But says one, we cannot always have these young lives under our own care. That is true, and we cannot be too careful as to their companions and especially the adults. The influence of children with children is a small thing compared with the influence of adults with children. The man who said that we are part of all we ever met, did not miss the truth very far. Mr. Shannon appealed to the people to name the places in Richmond to which young people may go and be perfectly safe, either private social functions or places of public resort. Mr. Shannon has promised to continue the discussion.

INSPECTION TRAINS PASS THROUGH CITY

No Stop Was Made in Richmond, There Not Being Even a Hesitation.

THROUGH TO COLUMBUS, O.

EACH TRAIN CARRIED AN INSPECTION CAR IN FRONT OF THE ENGINE AND TWO HAD CARS FRONT AND BACK.

Four inspection trains bearing General Manager G. L. Peck and J. J. Turner, second vice-president and many under officials passed through Richmond shortly after nine o'clock this morning. The occasion was the annual track inspection of the Pennsylvania lines west. Not one of the sections stopped in Richmond, going on to Columbus.

The four trains were met by a large delegation of local Pennsylvania railroad men at the station. A number of friends of officials were also there. Supervisors H. Mann and R. L. Adams Superintendent Nettleton Neff and Engineer of Maintenance of Way, Guy Scott, were members of the inspection crew. They joined the inspection trains at Pittsburgh, Pa., Monday morning and have been with the company since. Ross Harris, an old Richmond boy, now engineer of maintenance of way on the Toledo division, was also a member of the inspection party.

Each train carried a regular inspection car in front of the engine. Two trains had inspection cars both on the front and the rear. The trip will end in Pittsburgh Friday or Saturday and local officials accompanying the party will return to Richmond from that point. Supervisors of the local divisions hope to land one of the prizes given for the best bit of roadbed on the lines west of Pittsburgh. This will not be announced for some time.

Eating Grasshoppers. "No wonder I am brown," said a globe trotter. "I am just back from the Sahara. I spent two months wandering with a caravan of camels over that white expanse of sun warmed sand. The Sahara is like the beach at Atlantic City, a flat immensity of the whitest, cleanest sand, and the strangest thing I did in my wanderings was to eat desert grasshoppers. The Arabs regard these grasshoppers as a luxury, and I was tempted to try them, just as in Paris I have been tempted to try snails. The grasshoppers were good. You plucked off the wings, the legs and the head, and then you ate the dried body. This morsel tasted precisely like an English walnut. I ate grasshoppers several times, and when I return to the Sahara I am going to eat them again."

Spelling by Ear. The young French stenographer, whose progress in English had not kept pace with her proficiency in shorthand, was puzzling over some notes she had taken of a recitation at a public entertainment.

As she transcribed them the recitation began like this: La fanthi wuriaf swidheu, Cui panjaui cul pelone.

"That's easy," said the expert to whom she submitted the notes. "It is part of a poem that begins: 'Laugh, and the world laughs with you, Weep, and you weep alone.'"

—Chicago Tribune.

Law Term Explained. "Well, proceed," said the lawyer. "The plaintiff resorted to an ingenious use of circumstantial evidence," said the witness. "For the benefit of the jury state in plainer language exactly what you mean by that," interrupted the judge. "Well, my meaning is that he lied."

If Women Couldn't Read. "Then you don't believe in higher education for women?" "Certainly not. I think it's a shame to even teach 'em how to read. If a woman couldn't read the bargain advertisements, she wouldn't be so unhappy over the lots of things she can't afford to buy."

WOODWARD LODGE WILL SEND TEAM

Richmond to Be Represented At Next Sovereign Grand Lodge Meeting.

LOCAL TEAM TO CONTEST.

IT HAS WON SEVERAL PRIZES IN THE PAST AND IS CONFIDENT OF BEING ABLE TO DO SO AGAIN.

Richmond will send a crack degree team to the sovereign grand lodge meeting of Odd Fellows, to be held at Denver, Col., next year. Although the time for the meeting is yet far off, Woodward lodge of this city will reorganize a drill team to participate in the initiatory and third degree team contests. Two captains will be selected that the work may be given in each degree with efficiency.

The entrance into the contests is not a new one for the Woodward degree staff. Two years ago the local team won second honors at the sovereign grand lodge meeting held at Baltimore. Three years ago second honors fell to the local team who participated in second degree work at Des Moines, Ia., while four years ago two prizes were won at Indianapolis, both in the first and third degree contests. As the Woodward degree staff has won honors in the past, it is confident of winning additional honors at Denver next year.

Clever With the Cards.

Some years ago a certain county jail was undergoing extensive alterations, during which time a gang of pickpockets, four in number, were arrested one market day. Owing to the alterations the lot were confined for a time in one cell, but were placed under strict surveillance, the care of them being specially entrusted to the sergeant. The day after during his rounds he spied them playing cards, when he promptly opened the door and summoned a fellow constable, on whose arrival the cell and the prisoners were most carefully searched, but no cards were found. However, the card playing still continued until the day on which the pickpockets were to be sent to the assizes for trial. Then the superintendent, a very kind man and a great favorite with every one, asked them as a favor to tell him where they had hidden the cards. They told him that as soon as the sergeant and his comrade entered their cell they stuck the pack in his pocket and picked it again before he left, as a proof of which they presented him with the much used pack.—Pearson's Weekly.

A Bride's Dilemma.

A humorous romance is reported from Natal, where a youthful Hindoo bride was recently called upon to choose between her husband and her jewels. The case came before the Durban police court in the first instance, where the bride's parents, says the Natal Mercury, accused her husband of abducting her while under thirteen years of age. The bride, however, claimed to be eighteen, and the magistrate dismissed the case. Outside the court a tug of war took place between the two parties for the possession of the bride, in the course of which it appeared that what her parents particularly desired was not herself, but her jewelry. A sergeant of police then sat in judgment and decided that the jewelry belonged to the parents, and the girl must choose between her husband and her bracelets. After some cogitation she chose the husband, who promptly unfastened the bangles from her arms and handed them to her parents.

The Judge in Jail.

"I," said an esteemed magistrate, "spent a week in jail before I entered on my judgeship. I ate the prison food. I slept in a cell. I conformed with all the prison rules. I wore the prison clothes. I did the prison work. Thus I learned the value of the sentences I was to mete out later on. I got to know what a week, a month, a year, in jail meant. As a result I am more merciful than most judges. I think it would be a good thing if every judge before taking office would spend a little while in jail as I did. He would then know the value of prison sentences, a thing he doesn't know now. Now he is like a cashier who attempts to pay out money in a coinage of which he is ignorant. In Baden this thing I speak of must be done. Every judge in Baden before he takes his seat on the bench is required by law to pass weeks like a common prisoner in jail."—Cincinnati Enquirer.
