GOVERNOR DURBIN MAKES A DENIAL

Says He Was Not a Go-Between for McCullough and Crawford Fairbanks.

FALSE STATEMENTS MADE.

SAYS HE HAD NOTHING TO DO
WHATEVER WITH ANDERSON
SQUABBLE AND STARTLING
REVELATIONS MADE.

Indianapolis, Ind., Jan. 1.—Ex-Governor Winfield T. Durbin has issued a public statement denying the charges made by Sparks L. Brooks, ex-chairman of the Democratic Committee of Madison county, that he acted as a go-between in negotiations between his brother-in-law, C. K. McCullough and Crawford Fairbanks, the Terre Haute brewer, by which Lew Ellingham of Decatur received the Madison county vote for Eighth district chairman. It was charged that a deal was completed at Anderson last Friday night by which McCullough was to have Fairbanks' support for governor if Ellingham was elected. Colonel Durbin practically gave the lie to Brooks by saying that if the interview purporting to come from him is correct, that he has wilfully made malicious and false statements. He declared that he has not talked with Crawford Fairbanks for several months and that there was no deal between him and McCullough so far as he knows or was concerned. Colonel Durbin said that his stand on the liquor question was made clear in his last message to the legislature.

Waiting for His Second Trial in Dread, as Loved Ones Will Be Separated From Him

Thaw is Restless in His Prison Cell, as He Knows His Counsel Alone Will Be With Him.

Second Hearing of Famous Case Will Begin Monday Morning When Jurors Will Be Examined—Evelyn to Tell the Sad Story of Her Anguish and Ruin.

New York, Jan. 4.—Harry K. Thaw is in dread of his second trial for slaying Stanford White, because he will be without the cheering presence of his loyal wife and devoted mother as he sits in the court room and because his favorite sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, will not come to this country for the trial.

Under the new arrangement of the courtroom the wife and the mother will be kept 12 feet away from the defendant. At his first trial they were constantly with him and their love and words of hope did much to cheer him during his ordeal. He faces the second trial with the knowledge that he will have only his counsel near him.

Thaw will be within a brass railing at the second trial, while his wife, his mother, his sister, Mrs. Carnegie, and his brothers must remain outside. A passageway has been built around the wall of the room so that the prisoner will at no time pass his family.

There has been a rumor for some time that in case of a second disagreement, the same procedure will be followed as in the cases of Nan Patterson and Dr. Kennedy. Both of these prisoners were allowed to go free under a suspended sentence, after the two juries had failed to convict them.

Much New Testimony.
The defense will offer much new testimony—testimony that was not brought out at the first trial. There will be a score of new eyewitnesses to the shooting of White, and a 1 will testify that in their opinion Thaw was insane on the night of the murder.

Mrs. Evelyn Thaw will again, in moulton words of anguish, tell of her ruin at the hands of the arch betrayer, Stanford White.

Mr. Littleton has a list of the three hundred talesmen who have been summoned to appear Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in the criminal branch of the supreme court and detectives are investigating the record of each. This is done in every important murder case by the defense as well as by the district attorney.

Mr. O'Reilly and Mr. Peabody called at the Tombs early yesterday to see Thaw. They consulted with him in the counsel room on the second tier of the Tombs prison. Thaw was glad to see Mr. O'Reilly again. The lawyer has just recovered from an attack of bronchitis. Mr. O'Reilly said that he was feeling well and that outdoor exercise would soon restore him to his former self.

The rumor that Mrs. Evelyn Thaw had quarreled with her husband was denied. Mrs. Thaw has been suffering from a severe cold, but she has been in daily communication with her husband. She last saw him Sunday.

Evelyn Did Not Call.
Mrs. Thaw's chauffeur went to the prison yesterday morning with a note that Mrs. Thaw would call later in the afternoon. But she did not. She is still a sufferer from a cold, it was said.

Thaw's trial has been set down for 9:30 o'clock Monday morning. It is doubtful whether the first talesman will be called before noon. Justice Dowling must first deliver a charge to the special grand jury which will hear all the evidence in the various cases which the attorney general has referred to Mr. Jerome. Neither Mr. Jerome nor Mr. Littleton has been able to estimate how long it will take to fill the jury box. It might occupy two weeks. It has been decided to lock the jury up from the time they are sworn in. Mr. Garvan will assist Mr. Jerome in the prosecution of Thaw. It is because the jurors are to be locked up for so long that difficulty in filling the jury box is anticipated.

The Rub of the Body.
The organ around which all the other organs revolve, and upon which they are largely dependent for their welfare, is the stomach. The functions of the stomach become impaired, the bowels and liver also become impaired. To cure a disease of the stomach, the bowels get a 50 cent or $1 bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at your drugist's. It is the prompt relief for constipation and dyspepsia ever compounded.

GILLILAN WOULD BE CLAIRVOYANT

When Trade Came He Would Murmur Knowingly Into Eager Ears.

If I were hard up for coin of the realm—I mean any harder up than the normal man is all the time—I should have a sign painted and hung on my door. The word on that sign would be "Clairvoyant." Then I'd sit and wait for trade.

When the trade came, if it was a man trade, I'd look as wise as the hand of Dame Nature (which shaped my countenance) intended me ever to look and would say the following things:

"You were born about three and a half years before you remember, and at times since then you have regretted it. At other times you have wished you had been born twins. This wish has come oftenest when your digestion was good and you had just finished Thanksgiving dinner. Your mother was a good woman and a wise one, though you didn't always recognize her wisdom. You had spells of feeling much discouraged over the fact that you didn't have both your parents under better discipline.

"Your father wasn't as wise as your mother, although he thought he was. You take after your father in the matter of wisdom. Often since those days you have involuntarily taken off your hat and wished you could ever hope to have half as much horse sense as either of your parents.

"But cheer up. You were just as foolish at times as you have ever been, though it's hard for you to believe it. However, they knew it all the time, which gave them the wisdom to try to make something less of a fool out of you.

"You were frequently punished unjustly as a child. You admitted the injustice of it. You missed about three times as many punishments that you richly deserved. If you haven't admitted that, you will before you are through living. Also, you'll get your missed punishments, every one. There may be future punishments, but nature isn't going to mislead you at you in consideration of anything which may be laid up for you in the hereafter. It's a case of teacher punishing you at school and father giving you another lashing when you get home. At least that's the orthodoxy of it.

"You have great hopes of getting money. This hope of yours is sympathetically shared by every one you owe, and antagonized by every one having any hold on the wealth you expect to get. A dark man and a light man figure prominently in both bunches. Beware of dark or light men who want to borrow money without gilded security. You will be addressed by a dark or light man—your smooth face, behind a bank cashier's wicket. He will try to persuade you to take clearing house checks or trading stamps or souvenir post cards for your money. Do not listen to him or otherwise encourage him in this line of foolish talk. Take your money out and hide it in your fire proof safe.

"The woman who has most influenced your life you did not marry. You couldn't. Your father had married her before you had even thought of marrying anybody.

"Beware of a dark man with light clothing. He will cause you to lose money. You will know him by the hat brush and whisk broom he carries
