

NUSBAUM'S

TOMORROW LAST DAY! OF THIS GRAND VALUE GIVING.

AGAIN today our Garment Section was crowded with enthusiastic buyers eager to gather the bargain plums in ladies' choice wearables. But great as was the selling many are the attractions that remain.

All Suits go at 1-2 off. All Velour Coats go at 1-2 off.
All Colored Coats go at 1-2 off. All Black Coats go at 1-3 off.
All Furs go at 1-3 off. NOTHING RESERVED!

Come Tomorrow!
Come Early!

The extreme loss taking on such high grade stylish wearables will not permit or justify a continuance. So come tomorrow, the last day.

PUZZLING CASE IS DECIDED BY MACEY

Judge of Randolph Circuit Court Holds Fuller Agreement Valid.

CONTRACT FIGURES IN CASE

IT WAS THE MOST PECULIAR ARRANGEMENT EVER PRESENTED BEFORE THE COURT TO ACT UPON—CARED FOR FATHER.

In the opinion of Judge Macey of the Randolph circuit court, the contract between Mrs. Annie Fuller and her crippled father-in-law, James Fuller, both of this county, is valid. The contract is a most peculiar instrument.

Under the terms of this contract Mrs. Fuller agreed to meet the amount of judgment and costs obtained in the Wayne circuit court against James Fuller by Mrs. Mary Miller, his daughter. Mrs. Miller brought action for $1,000 against her father, which she claimed was due her for boarding and caring for Mr. Fuller. The judgment secured by Mrs. Miller with the costs of the case amount to about $1,500.

In return for meeting this obligation Fuller, under the terms of the contract promised to convey to Mrs. Fuller on his death his real estate holdings.

After this agreement was entered into, Mrs. Fuller paid to Mrs. Miller $500. Some time ago James Fuller died and Mrs. Fuller ceased making payments on the judgment. As a result W. C. Converse, as administrator of the estate of James Fuller brought suit to enforce Mrs. Fuller to fulfill her part of the contract. The case was taken to Randolph county on a change of venue. The estate was represented by Attorney T. J. Study while Mrs. Fuller was represented by Attorney W. A. Bond.

BIG FIRE WAS NOT WITHOUT COMEDY

Several Little Events Proved Mirthful to Crowd of Onlookers.

FUN IN KETTLER'S ESCAPE.

CLAIMED COLORED WOMAN HAD SAVED HIM FROM THE BURNING BUILDING—THIEVES WERE AT WORK DURING TIME OF BLAZE.

The fire last night at the old Schneider carriage factory was not without its serio-comic features. The emotions of the big crowd of onlookers constantly shifted from melodrama to farce comedy.

When the blaze started William Kettler, who does carriage repair work in the building, was peacefully asleep in the blazing structure. William had prior to the start of the fire apparently visited several liquid emporiums.

As the flames crackled and roared in the factory some had remembered that Kettler was doing the "Rip Van Winkle" on the second floor within. This boy climbed to a shed roof, then to a barn roof, where he was able to yell through a window at Kettler and warn him of his danger. In a very brief space of time Kettler made his excited exit from the building. He was quite briefly attired.

"Just to think I might be burned to death if that colored woman had not yelled through my window and told me to wake up," Kettler addressed the crowd. He was minus his coat, vest and other wearing apparel. Sympathetic people soon had him warmly clad. Kettler strenuously denied that he was the cause of the blaze.

Another amusing incident was when J. S. Brumley, a rural route mail carrier, entered his barn, which adjoined the burning building on the south. While Brumley was getting his horses and rigs out, some man entered the barn and stole Brumley's corduroy working jacket. This young man, who the police are now looking for, pawned at a South Sixth street "hock" establishment for fifty cents. After securing this amount on the jacket the fellow had the nerve to return to the barn and demand 25 cents for assisting in getting the rigs to a place of safety.

Brumley missed his jacket this morning. In company with an officer he went to the pawn shop where it was found. At police headquarters Brumley told Chief Bailey that in his opinion a man who would steal anything at a fire would rob a grave.

BUSINESS BLOCKS THREATENED BY A DANGEROUS FIRE

carriage factory removes the most dangerous fire-trap in the city. About six months ago the fire chief and the board of public works inspected this building and recommended that it be condemned. This action was never taken by the city council. The south and west walls of the building are in a most unsafe condition and all the time the firemen fought the blaze they were exposed to the danger of these walls falling.
