

IDA VERA SIMONTON WILL TESTIFY IN FAMOUS THAW CASE

She So Expressed Herself Today and Her Testimony Promises to Do Harm to Walls of the Defense.

DEFENDANT'S MOTHER ILL AT HOME IN PITTSBURG.

Eleven Jurors Were Selected Up to This Afternoon and Judge Dowling Ordered the Summoning of Sixth Panel.

BREACH BETWEEN THAWS.

CURRENT REPORT ABOUT COURT ROOM SAYS THAT PRETTY EVELYN AND HUSBAND HAD LOVERS' QUARREL.

New York, Jan. 10. The examination of witnesses was resumed at the Thaw trial this morning. Ida Vera Simonton of Pittsburgh, who declares Harry Thaw beat his wife, says she will testify against Thaw. The prisoner is worried over the condition of his mother, Mrs. William Thaw, who is threatened with pneumonia at her home in Pittsburgh.

Judge Dowling has ordered the sixth panel of one hundred jurors for Saturday. The court has decided to hold sessions from ten to six o'clock, with an intermission from one to two, when taking testimony will begin. Wm. H. McKnight, clerk, was accepted provisionally as juror eight. The remaining provisionals, Fred J. Howell, vice president, Wm. L. Southam, broker, Wm. Burck, secretary, Henry Buschness, card merchant, were sworn in, making eleven permanent jurors.

Lovers' Quarrel Reported.

Outside the dull routine of the court room, there were several interesting incidents. It was said that a lovers' quarrel had occurred between Harry Thaw and his wife on the bridge of Sixth, and at the end of it, as in all well-regulated dramas, the woman had hurled herself into the arms of the man, pleading in vain for a reconciliation.

"The story was denied by the officer on the bridge and by the deputy sheriff in charge of Thaw."

"It is absolutely untrue," said Harry Thaw; "my wife and myself are on the best of terms."

But it so happened that a daughter of Eve, who is famous for news, was lying in wait in the court corridor to catch a glimpse of Evelyn Thaw. She was the stenographer of Colonel Dooley.

Speaking of the prisoner's wife, she said: "I just wanted to see what she had on and whether she was pretty."

"How did it happen? Well, you see Evelyn Thaw was coming down the bridge toward the courtroom ahead of Harry Thaw. She was a—"

"Oh, well then, Harry Thaw and the deputy were walking behind. Just as they entered the court building Evelyn turned back and said—"

"'Won't you make up, Harry?' Harry Thaw was smoking and did not reply. He looked awful gloomy. Then Evelyn turned around again and threw her arms around his neck. 'Kiss me, Harry, and make up,' she said. 'Let's forget it.' Harry Thaw did not answer, and they walked on into the courtroom."

This, then, may have accounted for Evelyn Thaw's somber spirits throughout the entire day's proceedings. She seemed prier and quieter than on the previous day. There was no light or laughter in her eyes, and she did not even roll them heavenward when the evening flared up. Her general attitude and bearing were those of the average woman on wash day. She was filled with apparent gloom, and as one of the court officers expressed it, "if her husband refused to kiss her he ought to get the limit."

Mental Nervousness.

Thaw seemed more interested, however, than on the preceding day. It was mental nervousness rather than calm reflection. He is a man who apparently is driven to the verge of insanity when required to concentrate his mind for a length of time on any one thing. He constantly jerked his eyes from his lawyer to the talesman and back again, each time with an unnatural, bolted expression that suggested anything but an even trend of thought.

The trial is already wearing upon him. He is already becoming peevish and irascible and inclined to take the bronco bit in his teeth and back, as he did with his former counsel. If he goes entirely crazy during the trial it may tell somewhat in his favor.

It is said that he is constantly being attacked by anonymous letters. In some of these he is personally reproached. Still others advise an immediate separation from his wife in case he is acquitted.

He usually laughs at these letters, and in the glow of his cell has forgotten hundreds of them. But now that the trial is on once more and his mind is wrought up to its top pitch the most trivial thing distracts him.

MANY LICENSES ISSUED.

Z. T. Sweeney, state fish and game commissioner, has written to Clerk H. E. Penny congratulating him on the large number of hunter's licenses issued in this county the past year and expressing his regrets that the state law did not provide a fee for the clerk on each license issued. In his letter Mr. Sweeney stated that an effort would be made at the next legislature to have the game laws amended so that fees for the county clerks will be provided.

COURT WORK IS BEING SUMMARIZED

Deputy County Clerk Miss Addison Peel Has a Most Tedious Task.

SENT STATE STATISTICIAN.

SUMMARY UP TO DATE SHOWS

THAT SIXTY-EIGHT LETTERS OF ADMINISTRATION WERE ISSUED BY COURT.

Deputy County Clerk Miss Addison Peel, is at work compiling a summary of the work done by the circuit court the past year. This report will be sent to Miss Mary Stalder, state statistician. The task Miss Peel has before her is a most tedious one. So far, as a result of her investigations, Miss Peel has discovered that last year the following things were done by the court: Sixty-eight letters of administration were issued; thirty-three guardianships made; ten decrees of foreclosures issued; five sheriff's sales ordered; seven people adjudged of unsound mind by the court and twenty by justices of the peace, whose inquest papers are filed in the circuit court.

If $5.00 strikes the readers as about the price they would like to pay for a Long Coat worth from $7.50 to $18.00, tomorrow (Saturday) will be the chance. Twenty-five Garments to select from at Knollenberg's Store.

HUNT CASE TO BE HEARD JAN. 27

Hunt Will Be Defended by Bond.

The trial of Alva J. Hunt, charged with grand larceny and embezzlement, will be tried in the circuit court Jan. 27. This date was set this morning. Hunt will be defended by Attorney W. A. Bond.

POSTOFFICE IN A RACE WITH TIME

The increase of the sales of the local postoffice last year to $60,000, meant the increase in the salaries of the postmaster and his assistant. It is stipulated however that the sales must be kept up to that standard in order that the increase in salaries be continued. Up to date the sales have fallen lower than last year, and with but three months more remaining in the fiscal year, things begin to appear rather blue for the local officials and they will very probably have a close race with time if they succeed in reaching the desired amount by April first.

INTEREST IN ART EXHIBIT IS HIGH

Turner Prints at Garfield Are Attracting Very Much Interest.

EVENT LARGELY ATTENDED

EXHIBIT WILL CLOSE SATURDAY NIGHT—PICTURES ARE TAKEN FROM SOME OF THE MORE CELEBRATED PAINTINGS.

Considerable interest centers in the Turner exhibit which is in progress at the Garfield school building, and which closes Saturday night. Many people have visited the exhibit and admired the magnificent prints which adorn the walls of the two private offices of Superintendent Mott. These pictures are taken from many of the more celebrated paintings and works of art, and are faithful reproductions. From an artistic standpoint these prints are the same of skill in the printer's art, and are well adapted to grace the walls of any home.

OUR NEW MINISTER

EXCELLENT SHOW

An audience by far too small showed marked enthusiasm over the performance of "Our New Minister," at the Gannett theatre Thursday night. The company is a well balanced one, and is equipped with ample stage settings and costumes to make this extract of life from old New Hampshire, a realistic one. Joseph Conyers, in the role of Barlow Shurtle, a country doctor, proved himself an actor of no mean ability and there was almost continuous laughter, not only while he was occupying the center of the stage, but throughout the play. Patrons of the Gannett who did not witness the performance will have an opportunity to do so as a return engagement has been secured for the middle of February, probably the 14 or 15.

G. R. & I. CHANGE.

JAIL BREAKER IS RELEASED BY COURT

Murray Did Not Want to Break Away From Custody, But Into It.

DID NOT LIKE CONFINEMENT

WAS PLACED ALONE IN SMALL CELL FOR HIS DESIRE TO SPEND WINTER AMIDST COMFORTS OF COUNTY JAIL.

Frank Murray, colored, who sought to "break" into the county jail for the winter and received for his pains four days of solitary confinement in a 2x4 cell in the city jail, is once more at liberty. Murray is a sadder, but wiser man for his unpleasant experience and he states that never again will he try to force himself on the county as a guest for the winter. He attempted it last Monday.

This morning he was taken from his confined quarters for the first time in four days and after being allowed to take a stretch was placed at work having coal into the basement of the city building. After completing this task Murray was brought before Judge Converse.

The court asked Murray how he enjoyed the process of breaking into the county jail. With a mournful face Murray replied that he did not like it. After promising he would never again repeat his offense, Judge Converse told Murray that he would be allowed his liberty on good behavior. Immediately an ear-to-ear smile chased the mournful expression from the countenance of said Murray.
