Events of the Week

The two subjects in congress which are attracting attention to the exclusion of almost everything else are the financial bill and the navy personnel bill, the former by Senator Aldrich and the latter by Senator Hale.

The senate committee on finance will take up the Aldrich bill Tuesday. It is not believed that the democrats will make any determined opposition to the bill in committee, and the indications are that it will be given a place on the senate calendar sooner than the republican advocates of the measure expected.

Senator Hale's bill will receive its first attention at the hands of the senate committee on naval affairs during the present week, but it will probably be some time before the measure can be reported to the senate. There is little doubt that hearings will be ordered.

The committee on appropriations will proceed with the consideration of the appropriation bills.

The voluminous bill providing for the codification of the penal laws holds the right of way in both houses. It has been under consideration in the house for two or three days, and it was given the position of unfinished business on the senate calendar.

The senate will adjourn again on Thursday until the following Monday, but the house will most likely continue its work until the end of the week.

Among the conventions and gatherings of various organizations which will take place this week probably the most interesting will be that of the National Guard association at Boston on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Much interest is lent to the meeting of the Civic Forum in New York on Tuesday evening by the presence of Paul Milyukof, the distinguished Russian statesman and leader of the Constitutionalists who comes to America only to address this meeting.

In Helena, Mont., on Tuesday, the National Wool Growers' association will meet to discuss a number of questions of vital interest to sheep raisers.

Three presidential possibilities are expected to make addresses at public functions. On Tuesday Secretary Taft will address the Ohio society in Philadelphia. Mr. Bryan will be the guest of honor at a dollar dinner in Lincoln, Neb., Wednesday evening, and Governor Hughes is scheduled for two speeches on Friday, one being before the West End Women's republican association of New York and the other at the annual dinner of the University of Pennsylvania.

The Nevada legislature will convene in extra session on Tuesday to consider legislation for the correction of the labor troubles at Goldfield.

The Thaw trial will occupy a large space in the week's news.

The Business College.

Chas. C. Cring, general manager of the Indiana Business college, was here on business Friday evening. He reports the attendance in the various schools very large. He desires to secure the pictures of all ex-students who now hold positions. They are to be used in the next College Beacon, which is now being prepared.

The school received an invitation from the Columbus Business college to attend reception to be held in the K. P. building at that place on Friday night January 17. The invitation includes all ex-students as well as present ones. They are preparing a good program and will be glad to have any one attend who can.

Katherine Murry of Richmond, Harry Dueben of Greenville, Perry Sober of East Germantown, Fred McClure of Richmond and Chester Catey of Dublin entered the day school this week.

Walter Mulligan, Rush Bowman and Robert Mendenhall entered the night school. They are all progressing very nicely with their work.

There have been several parents in the office this week who are looking after the interests of their children. We are glad to have them come as by working together we can be of more benefit to them.

Frank Smith has accepted a position as stenographer for Bertsch & Co. of Cambridge City.

A number of students were able to command a good grade in their tests this week.

Martha Bond is working as bookkeeper and cashier at the Hoosier store during the illness of Miss Warfel who is employed there.

Miss Carolyn Hankinson accepted a class in the First M. E. Sunday school.

DECLARES SHE LOVES RED FLAG OF SOCIALISM BETTER THAN THE STARS AND STRIPES.

MRS. J. G. PHELPS STOKES.

Philanthropist and Socialist Expresses Admiration for Flag, But Red Rag Is Her Choice.

New York, Jan. 13—Mrs. J. G. Phelps Stokes, speaking at a meeting of 500 Socialists, who had gathered at Clinton Hall to make a demonstration on behalf of the striking tenants, declared that she loved the red flag of socialism better than the flag of her country. She began her address by saying that conditions in America, so far as the laboring classes were concerned, were fully as bad as those in Russia today.

"I love the stars and stripes," Mrs. Stokes exclaimed. "I love the American flag, but, as much as I love it, I love the red flag better. Indeed, I could not love the stars and stripes as much as I do, did I not love the grand flag better."

Mrs. Stokes's expressions were greeted with the wildest enthusiasm and continued cheers. There were other speakers who condemned both political parties.

O'BRIEN CAPTURES BELMONT PLUM

Indiana Politician Joins Hands With Taggart.

Owensboro, Ky., Jan. 13.—W. H. O'Brien, ex-chairman of the Indiana democratic state committee, has been appointed treasurer of the national democratic committee, vice August Belmont, resigned.

Mr. O'Brien is a prominent banker at Lawrenceburg, Ind. He has been prominent in the councils of his party for several years. He became chairman of the Indiana democratic state committee in 1902, was re-elected in 1904 and again re-elected in 1906. He was not a candidate for the place during the state committee fight.

Mr. O'Brien enters upon the duties of his office at once. He will join hands with National Chairman Tom Taggart of Indianapolis to fight the national battles of his party.

Manager—We must put a good deal of realism in this wood scene. Can you get some one to grow so as to resemble a bear?

Assistant—I think so. There are six or seven actors who haven't received their wages for ten weeks. I'll call them—Pick-Me-Up.

"COFFEE" COUGH.

Woman Feared Consumption but Specialist Said Cough Came From Coffee.

Quite a relief to learn your cough, which everyone said was surely consumption, is really caused by reflex irritation from coffee drinking.

You can quit the coffee, but consumption is hard to "shake."

A wise woman coughed so hard and so much she and her friends thought sure she had consumption, but a specialist in lung diseases found her lungs were all right—the cough came from coffee. She writes:

"I had a very bad cough that refused to yield to medicine. After five months doctoring with my home doctor and fearing consumption, I consulted a specialist who examined my lungs thoroughly. He said they were all right but I must quit drinking coffee as that was probably the cause of it. I was very nervous, also."

"He suggested I drink Postum, and gave me no medicine, only said he would write to my home doctor. I came home glad in one way and sorry in another. I thought it was hard to give up coffee, for I did not care for breakfast without it."

"The doctor's letter miscarried and I got no medicine for 2 weeks, but I left off coffee and began to use Postum and my cough began to get better. I steadily improved in other ways—digestion got all right and I was not nervous."

"A short time ago I went to a place where they served only coffee and I drank some. I found my grandpa for it was entirely gone."

"I would have been glad to have had a cup of Postum for the coffee I drank seemed like I had swallowed a stone. Nothing would induce me to go back to coffee again." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Get the famous little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

Unlucky Suggestion.
An old vicar had a groan who had been detected stealing his master's oats. The vicar had not decided what course to take, and meantime the groan had gone to the curate to ask him to plead for him, and the sympathetic young fellow hastened to the rectory to appeal to the vicar. The old vicar heard his curate out, but looked obstinate, so as a last resource the curate quoted Scripture as a plea for leniency and said we were taught when man took our coat to let him take the cloak as well.

"That's true," said the vicar dryly, "and as the fellow has taken my coat I am going to give him the sack." London Answers.

UNION LABOR WILL TAKE A HAND IN COMING ELECTIONS

With Definite Plan of Action, Fight Will Be Begun to Secure Nomination of Clean Candidates.

LAW MAKING BODIES PLAY HIDE AND SEEK.

Laws Affecting Labor as a Class, Are Not Being Taken To By Those in Position to Do So as Readily as Desired

Political leaders are watching the political movements in organized labor as never before. Labor has laid out a program for both national and state elections. The program is simple and practical, and promises to cut a large figure in the approaching campaign. It was adopted by the American Federation of Labor and approved by the various local federations, and unions in general. While this program is not mandatory, it is believed it will be carried into effect in many parts of the country.

This activity on the part of union labor is the result of a feeling that the law-making bodies have been playing hide and seek with labor in some desired measures that are pending. The program does not propose a separate party, or the securing of industrial party affiliation. It simply means independent self interest. The program proposes that union men shall try to secure the nominations of fair men in their respective parties by activity at the primaries.

After the tickets and platforms are made they are to be thoroughly investigated and a report made as to their sentiments and records. Then the voter is expected to vote for the candidates that are considered most friendly to the proposed labor legislation. Labor is already in the field against several of the men seeking the nomination for president, and at least one of the candidates for governor in Indiana.

Union labor could not hope to succeed in the nation or any of the states without a separate party. The total voting strength of the unions is less than 3,000,000, about one-sixth of the total vote in the United States. There are nearly 100,000 union voters in Indiana, about equally divided between the two leading parties. It is therefore easily possible for the union vote to determine the electoral vote for president. A change of less than 3,000 votes would have defeated Benjamin Harrison in 1888. There are several close states that organized labor can easily control. Nearly one-third of the congressional districts can be controlled by a reasonable change of labor votes. It is also known that a considerable number of nonunion workers will be influenced by the unions. The possibilities presented in this campaign are great enough to cause anxiety on the part of politicians.

The Ceremony Was a Wonderful One In Louis XVI's Time.

In "Memoirs of the Comtesse de Bolge" (1781-1814), edited from the original manuscript by Charles Nicoulard, is found the following realistic description of the "couche" of Louis XVI:

"The king's coat, waistcoat and shirt were taken off. He stood there naked to the waist, scratching and rubbing himself as if he had been alone, in the presence of the whole court and often many strangers of distinction. The first valet handed the nightshirt to the most highly qualified person, to one of the princes of the blood if any were present. This was a right and not a favor. When the person was one with whom he was on familiar terms the king would often play tricks while putting it on, stepping on one side to make the holder run after him, accompanying these charming jokes with loud guffaws, which greatly vexed those who were sincerely attached to him. When his shirt was on he put on his dressing gown, while three valets unfastened his waist belt and knee breeches, which fell to his ankles, and in these ridiculous fetters, he would shuffle round the circle of those in waiting. When the king had had enough of it, he shuffled backward to an armchair which was pushed into the middle of the room and dropped into it, lifting up his legs. Two pages on his knees immediately seized his legs, pulled off the king's shoes and let them drop with a crash, which was a point of etiquette. As soon as he heard the noise the usher opened the door, saying, 'Gentlemen will please pass out.' Those present went away, and the ceremony was finished. However, the person who was holding the candlestick was allowed to stay if he had anything special to say to the king, and hence the value that was attached to this strange favor."

IT IS SERIOUS.

Some Richmond People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

The constant aching of a bad back, the weariness, the tired feeling, the pains and aches of kidneyills are serious—if neglected.

Dangerous urinary troubles follow. A Richmond citizen shows you how to avoid them.

I. F. Cooper of 714 North Thirteenth street, Richmond, Ind., says: "For two years there existed sharp pains in my loins and sides and a continual feeling of soreness. It was hard for me to stoop, lift or bend over and when I caught cold it always settled in the kidneys. The secretions were irregular and much too frequent. The medicines I used brought me no benefit until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. I used two boxes of these remedies last winter and since then have been free from all trouble with the kidneys. I am, therefore, glad to recommend the use of Doan's Kidney Pills."

PREACHER GUILTY OF COUNTERFEITING

HOLY WAR DECLARED BY A NEW SULTAN

Was Convicted in an Illinois Court and He Gets Two Years.

ATTEMPTED TO PASS COIN.

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 13.—Guilty of having molds in his possession for the manufacture of counterfeit dollars, half dollars, quarters and dimes, with the intent to use them unlawfully, was the verdict of a jury today in the case of Rev. James A. Kays, of Oak Park, Ill., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Wheaton, Ill., and formerly pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Lincoln, Ill., where the crime was alleged to have been committed. Dr. Kays was sentenced to two years in Chester penitentiary. Pending an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals, Kays is confined in Sangamon county jail annex.

The molds were found in the basement of a house occupied at Lincoln by Dr. Kays during his pastorate there.

Kay's defense was that he had the molds to make medals for Sunday school pupils. It was brought out, however, that Kays's son had attempted to pass some of the spurious coins.

Attractive Show.

1. Some horses will make as very much better tricks.

2. The clown will come and talk with that horses, therefore the audience will laugh itself very much.

3. Boys will jump and roll in the mud.

4. One man will walk on wire tight, he doing very nicely, because he is professor of that.

5. Then will come the very much better dramatic.

"Notice—No sticks will be allowed in the spectator, and he shall not make the smoke; also we don't make it only the fourth class.

"N. B.—The circus is the very much better; therefore he come to see that."

A Uncle Conversationist.

The Dawsens fully realized that their Uncle Eli Nabi was fond of good talk and good talkers and during his stay they tried to make his visit enjoyable by asking in such of their friends as they regarded as most likely to entertain the old gentleman.

"He's a wonderful conversationist, isn't he," Uncle Eli? asked Mrs. Dawson after the departure of their star dinner guest on the last night of Mr. Nabi's stay. "Such an extraordinary command of language and such a range of topics."

"Pretty fair talker," said Mr. Nabi, hopelessly unimpressed. "But we've got one to beat him up home you know. Oh, yes; old Lady Greenough. Why, I've stood at her gate less'n ten minutes an' had her go from my turnip bed to the doin's up Panama canal way, an' so easy you couldn't notice any abrupt change o' subject either. That's what I call a conversationist."
