

SMALLER AMOUNT OF COUNTY TAX GOES TO SCHOOLS

When Semi-annual Distribution Is Made, Corporation Will Get $6,000 Less Than State School Fund.

CITY OF RICHMOND WILL GET SMALL AMOUNT.

This Is Due to the Advance Payments That Have Been Made to the City Treasurer From Wayne County.

Monday of next week, the semi-annual distribution of county taxes will be made to the various township, school corporation and towns and cities corporation officials. Last month the state's share of the taxes collected between the months of May and November was apportioned. The city of Richmond receives as its share of the taxes, $63,054.02, but owing to the fact that the county treasurer has made advance payments amounting to $57,532.09 to the city treasurer, the city will only receive on Monday, $5,521.93.

The amount the Richmond school corporation receives, is $43,669.24, about $6,000 less than the county contributed to the state school fund. This is caused by the fact that the total number of school children in Wayne county is not up to the average. When the state redistributes the school fund to the various counties, Wayne receives a certain amount for each school child.

The following table shows the amount apportioned to each township, school corporation, and towns and cities corporation:

INDIANA TO HAVE WIRELESS TELEGRAPH

Columbus, Ind., Man Will Catch Messages.

Columbus, Ind., Jan. 23.—Dore Ogden, manager for the Western Union here, yesterday received a combination set of wireless telegraph and telephone instruments from Cleveland and has established a wireless station in a large field near here, with which, by sending up kites to a height of two miles, he hopes to gather wireless messages that are passing over and also to send them to a distance of at least 100 miles. He will use the kites, with which he made weather experiments for the government a few years ago. Both telegraph and telephone messages will be experimented on by this method.

Practice Economy Every Day

To the thrifty housewife who makes every dollar count, nothing in the food line is more acceptable than the new product called "OUR-PIE" put up in 10-cent packages for making lemon, chocolate and custard pies. Every package is sold under a positive guarantee and makes two large pies. Local grocers say the sale is rapidly increasing and customers are well pleased. Readers can make no mistake in giving these goods a trial.

MRS. ANTHONY J. DREXEL.

Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel of the famous Philadelphia family of Drexels is an American beauty, who is making a notable social success in England. Mrs. Drexel recently introduced her daughter at the court of King Edward. It is said that she herself is on such good terms with the king and queen that their august royalties laugh almost as heartily at her sallies of wit as they do at the jokes of Mark Twain. Mrs. Drexel is still a youthful looking woman, with the vivacity of a belle.

SOCIAL NEWS

In this age of clubs, needlework does not form the chief occupation and interest of woman's life. Long hours spent at a tambour frame doing elaborate needle embroidery would be considered in this day and age, rather of a bore, especially to the automobilist, golfer and lover of cards and clubs. But even the most profound lover of society is often times glad of a quiet hour in which to recuperate. During this time it is well that one's fingers be busy. China painting seems to hold full sway, but let us look back and see how our ancestors spent their time at their social gatherings. A sisterhood known as the "Nuns of Little Gidding" have the credit of inventing a very charming work basket. The boxes or baskets were embroidered by the nuns and then placed upon the market for sale, the money being used in hospitals and for religious purposes. Only the aristocracy and people of wealth were able to buy as the baskets were very expensive, being heavily embroidered. Finally the middle class began to make these baskets. Parties were given and the baskets were the means of entertainment. Flowers, birds, castles and animals completed the decorations. We must not pass over the mirrors which were perhaps more indispensable in the bygone days than the present, as "my lady's" sewing table was generally surrounded by three oblong mirrors. How shocked our sisters of old would be if they could behold the hurried arrangement of a "motor veil and goggles" of the present society girl. What strange bits of fashion, minutiae and odd parties of the olden time, these mirrors could reveal to us.

SENATORIAL DEADLOCK IN KENTUCKY UNBROKEN

Speaker Rules That Majority Of Quorum Could Elect.

Frankfort, Ky., Jan. 23.—The senatorial deadlock was not broken today and there seems to be no immediate prospect of a shift in votes. The rumor that more men will desert Beckham is still persistently circulated and also the rumor that Bradley will withdraw and help elect McCrory because of influence at work in Washington.

Speaker Gooch, who presided over the joint sessions, ruled today that a majority of a voting quorum could elect a senator and he would so decide if the question came up.

Senator Wheeler Campbell received a telegram from ex-Senator Blackburn today complimenting him on his stand against Beckham.

Those legislators who stood by Blackburn in 1896, when several democrats declined to support him as against Hunter (republican), say it looks funny to see the Panama government congratulating men for doing the same thing he denounced most bitterly when he was the nominee.

PRESIDENT MOVED WITHOUT HIS POWER CLAIMS THE SENATE

Branded an Autocrat by the Upper House Statesmen When He Sent Message on The German Question.

HIS CALL FOR LEGISLATION IS THE CAUSE.

Acts Declared to Be More Arbitrary than Kaiser Wilhelm—Action Is Demanded by The Chief Executive.

Washington, Jan. 23.—President Roosevelt yesterday transmitted to the senate and the house copies of the tariff regulations negotiated some time ago between the United States and Germany, together with a proposed amendment to the customs administrative act putting the same in force as a statute.

The president's message exploded a bomb in the senate. The senators pointed out that Roosevelt has exceeded his authority and branded him far more autocratic than the German Emperor.

The remarks were not addressed to the message so much as to the policy of considering it in executive session as well as the policy of the president in connection with the agreement.

His course, not only in negotiating that instrument, but in proclaiming it to the world, as he did last July, was sharply criticized. It was declared that the agreement makes changes which are equivalent to legislation, affecting the tariff must, under the constitution, originate in the house of representatives.

Attention was called to the third section of the McKinley law as possibly permitting the president's course, but his critics contended that his action in this case had gone far beyond the limits permitted by that section. Stress was laid on the fact that the president had not only negotiated the treaty, but that he had given it out as a complete performance without referring it to the senate for action.

Exceeds His Authority.

This the senators seemed to consider as especially reprehensible and far beyond the authority of the chief executive. It was pointed out that the Kaiser had not only referred the agreement to the Reichstag for its action, but that he had even consulted both the local and national boards of trade. Hence, the president was charged with being even more autocratic than the head of the German Empire. It was also declared that under the system of valuations provided for by the treaty, great injustice would be done to the United States.

Senator Hoeyburn made strenuous objection when the question was raised that the message was a subject for consideration in the open senate instead of behind closed doors. Senators McLaughlin, Teller and others called for open session and their plea finally won, but not before Senator Gallinger and one or two others had delivered their sentiments concerning the action of an executive in calling for legislation whenever the spirit moved him.

It was finally decided to refer the message to the committee on finance. If a bill is to be forthcoming it will be from that committee. It is thought by some senators that a resolution by Senator Gallinger, which was introduced early in the session, may have had something to do with the appearance of the message and a request for legislation in the German-American matter at this time. The figures which the Gallinger resolution produced about a week ago, showed quite a reduction in the value of German exports to this country since the regulations were passed and since the system

An Excellent Recipe For Obstinate Coughs.

This recipe will give you a full pint of excellent cough medicine, very inexpensive and far better than the cough syrups you buy. It can be made at home in five minutes.

Get the 21 oz. of Pinex from any druggist at a cost of 75 cents. Pour it into a clean pint bottle and then fill it up with the syrup. Make the syrup of granulated sugar and water, heated and stirred until thick. Shake well.

You will find that this simple remedy will quickly cure a cold or the most stubborn cough. Well, cooled, it will never spoil. Pinex is the most concentrated form of Norway white pine extract. It is rich in gauldine and other elements which have made the pine woods of Norway famous for centuries in the cure of consumption.

These are pure pine oil and pine tar preparations, but none of these can be compared with the pure Pinex itself. All druggists have it in stock or can get it without trouble on request.

of inspecting consignments was discontinued by our consular officers and agents.

President's Message.

After referring to the proposed amendment to the treaty, the president in his message, dated Jan. 22, 1908, says:

"I earnestly recommend to the congress the enactment into law of this amendment at an early date. Beside promoting harmonious relations between the contracting parties, to the agreement in question, I regard the proposed legislation as a meritorious measure for the improvement of our customs administrative act, the provisions of which are applicable to importations from all countries alike."

CORNMEAL.

Varied Joys of This Rich and Versatile Product.

But cornmeal is such a rich and versatile product that it lends itself to all days and all meals. For breakfast it can be turned into batter cakes light and luscious, or into muffins, which take on new sweetness in their tin boundaries, or you can have your corn in the shape of grits, yellow with butter and of happy digestibility.

Then for dinner there is the corn pone, large, brown and hot from the oven, ready to be seasoned with a sauce of butter and washed down with freshly churned buttermilk, with an accompaniment of cabbage or collards or turnip salad or new snap beans. If for any reason the corn pone is not desirable, though the farmer cannot imagine anything that can take its place with a healthy and an expectant appetite, there are the dumplings to fall back on, the dumplings boiled with a mess of greens. This dish is a time and space saver, and there is also a butter savor. The dumplings should never by any chance be allowed to grow cold before serving. For supper there is the hockeecake, which should be of a generous thickness, and it should be eaten with gravy distilled from the juices of a country cured ham, or, if you please, a dish of mush and milk. And then, the day's work being over and done with, the tired man or woman and the children, weary with play, may fall on their couches and forget in sweet and dreamless slumber the grisly troubles of the world.—Joel Chandler Harris in Uncle Remus' Magazine.

Throw away pile and strong cathartics which violent in action and always leave on the system. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, the guarantee for constipation and all diseases arising from stomach trouble.

FESTIVAL OF THE DEAD.

Esikims Provide Food and Clothes For Returning Ghosts.

The natives of the Yukon river region hold a festival of the dead every year shortly before Christmas and a greater festival at intervals of several years. At these seasons food, drink and clothes are provided for the returning ghosts in the clubhouse of the village, which is illuminated for the occasion with oil lamps. Every man or woman who wishes to honor a dead friend sets up a lamp on a stand in front of the place which the dead one used to occupy in the clubhouse. These lamps, filled with seal oil, are kept burning day and night until the festival is over. They are believed to light the shades on their return to their old home and back again to the land of the dead. If any one fails to put up a lamp in the clubhouse and to keep it burning, the shade whom he or she desires to honor could not find its way to the place and so would miss the feast. When a person has been much disliked his ghost is sometimes purposely ignored, and that is deemed the severest punishment that could be inflicted upon him. After the songs of invitation to the dead have been sung the graves of the feast take a small portion of food from every dish and eat it down as an offering to the shades. Then each pours a little water on the floor so that it runs through the cracks. Last is what they believed the spiritual essence of all the food and water is consumed by the souls. With songs and dances the feast comes to an end and the guests are dismissed to their own homes. The dancers then enter only in the night hours, but also of the graves and of the land of the dead and their shades is described. On the one of the festival the natives, native relatives, come to the grave and surround the shade by lighting them a small house of a sort made of a wooden dish, according as the dead was a man or a woman. The totems of the dead are marked on these implements. The dead who have none to make offerings to them are believed to suffer great destitution below the earth. Hence for this solemn festival the shades of the dead are invited to the feast. The shades of the dead are invited to the feast. The shades of the dead are invited to the feast.

An Oversight.

When Chapple got up the other morning he wandered around his apartments in his pretty pink pajamas, the very picture of woe.

"What's the matter, sir?" inquired his valet.

"I don't know, Alphonse," he groaned. "I passed a most unhappy night."

Alphonse looked him over carefully.

"Oh, sir," he exclaimed, "I know what was the matter. The trousseau of your pajamas were not crossed."

You must be more careful, sir. Those I had prepared for you were hanging across the foot of the bed,"—Bohemian.

WIFE LAYS BLAME ON SALOON KEEPER

Husband Was Killed and She Now Sues.

Bloomington, Ind., Jan. 23.—Alleging that her husband was sold intoxicating liquors after he was in a state of intoxication and that as a result he walked in front of a fast passenger train on the Monon railroad and was ground to pieces, Mrs. Millie Taylor of Stinesville appears as the plaintiff in circuit court demanding judgment for $2,000 from Henry H. Stewart, an ex-saloon keeper of Stinesville, and his bondsmen, the Title Guaranty and Trust company of Scranton, Pa.

Taylor was a farmer of the north part of the county and had gone to part of the county and had gone to the township trustee. He went to the Stewart saloon and Mrs. Taylor alleges that after he became intoxicated Taylor walked in front of the Chicago express at the Monon depot and his tragic death was witnessed by several people.

Count Tyskiewski, a noted judge and collector of antiquities, gives some interesting details of the forgeries that have been attempted from the earliest times. No metal lent itself so easily to this work as gold. Etruscan jewelry has been largely manufactured in Italy, but Syria has carried on the most extensive forgery of gold works of art. Forgeries in silver have been less successful.

A good story is told of a forged silver cup in Rome that purported to have come from some secret excavation in Sicily. This "ancient" cup was ornamented with a circular bas-relief representing the frieze of the Parthenon. In the height of his innocence the forger had given the frieze in its present ruined condition. SPURIOUS ANTIQUES.

Many Forgeries Clever Enough to Deceive the Experts.

In the manufacture of antiquities the forger shows an ingenuity that is unlimited. Furniture, prints, china, pictures, plate, armor, ivory, bronze, tapestry—all are most successfully imitated. Many such imitations are, it is true, clumsy enough, but a great many deceive even the initiated. The experts of national museums have been imposed upon more than once.

The British museum bought a Pallas plate for $250. While an attendant was handling it one of the seals attached to its back, attesting its genuineness, became detached, disclosing the mark of a modern French potter. Terra cotta figures of Isis and Osiris, bought by the same institution for thousands of dollars, were discovered to be composed of modern clay. There is one forger of antiquities whose specialty is old leather jackets; another produces horn books; still another turns out medieval manuscripts; a fourth, clerical vestments of the middle ages, and so on.

An expert of the Smithsonian Institution was called upon not long ago to pass upon a specimen of a mummy servant, an effigy, in a plastic material, such as the Egyptians buried with their dead. Close examination proved it to be made of putty. It was a very clever forgery.

Count Tyskiewski, a noted judge and collector of antiquities, gives some interesting details of the forgeries that have been attempted from the earliest times. No metal lent itself so easily to this work as gold. Etruscan jewelry has been largely manufactured in Italy, but Syria has carried on the most extensive forgery of gold works of art.
