

WILL THURSDAY BE HARRY THAW'S "JONAH DAY?"

Asserted That the Prosecution Will Close Its Case and Judge Dowling Will Charge The Jury Before Noon.

SUMMING UP OF EVIDENCE TO BE CONCISE IT IS SAID.

Both the Defense and Prosecution Desire to Bring the Hearing to a Halt—Evelyn's Testimony Will Stand.

New York, Jan. 28.—Attorney Littleton, for the defense, announced that he would begin summing up in the Thaw trial tomorrow morning. Jerome said it would take him only about three hours to close the prosecution's case. Judge Dowling's charge to the jury will begin probably Thursday morning and the case will go to the jury, it is thought, by noon Thursday. Hummel's testimony was admitted and was read in return for a concession. Jerome consented to the admission as evidence the Thaw will which was made on his wedding day. Several minor witnesses were examined in rebuttal.

An English physician, one of the three men of medicine who testified yesterday, gave the name of "mania-depressive" or subacute mania to Thaw's mental condition. Dr. Sydney Russell Wells, of London, made the diagnosis during an outbreak by Thaw in London in 1899, when, with a normal temperature, Thaw demanded that the walls of his room in a nursing home be torn down so that he might have air and put twenty tons of ice in the apartment to cool it.

Mr. Littleton's question which was a complete resume of the evidence, with the exception, as District Attorney Jerome pointed out, of the testimony of James Clinch Smith, brother-in-law of Stanford White, who talked with Thaw for fifteen minutes just before the shooting on the roof of Madison Square garden. The question contained some sixteen thousand words.

Explains "Mania-Depressive" Insanity. Dr. Wagner was asked to explain "mania-depressive" insanity to the jury, one of the foreign physicians having employed this term to Thaw's outbursts abroad. The witness said it was a circular form of insanity where the periods of maniacal violence were followed by spells of depression or melancholia and then by a period of sanity, the same process recurring from time to time.

Justice Dowling put a series of very important questions to the witness evidently for the purpose of his own guidance in the event of a verdict of acquittal on the ground of insanity—when it was in the discretion of the court to commute the defendant to an asylum for the criminal insane.

Evelyn Thaw's Evidence Stands. District Attorney Jerome moved that all of the evidence of Evelyn Thaw be stricken from the record on the ground that she had not produced in evidence the fourteen letters from Stanford White she showed Thaw in Paris. He said that only part of her story had been told so that certain evidence had been selected for presentation and other evidence left out. Mr. Littleton objected to the district attorney making a speech and Justice Dowling said there was no necessity to proceed further. He overruled the motion.

NIGHT RIDERS BURN STORE AND THREATEN

Storekeeper Talked Too Much They Claimed.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Jan. 28.—Night-riders burned the store of Fay Brown last night. They left a note saying that if he didn't quit talking they would burn his residence also.

WALSH HEARING WILL BE ASKED

Second Trial Desired by Attorneys.

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 28.—Owing to death and sickness in the rank of John R. Walsh, the convicted banker, will not until tomorrow hold hearing for new trial in one month.

FORMED TO FIGHT WATSON.

Terre Haute, Ind., January 28.—A committee, composed of representatives from trade unions, to act for the Central Labor Union in local politics has been formed here, and it will endeavor to prevent the selection of delegates to the Republican State Convention who favor the nomination of Congressman Watson for Governor.

"I will pay your debts today, but it is positively for the last time." "Oh, dear uncle, then wait at least until tomorrow."—Fliegende Blätter.

CRACKED FACE BY SOM- NOLENT INCLINATIONS

St. Louis, January 28.—His irresistible desire to yawn compelled John H. Barnes, a printer, to seek medical attention six times in one day.

One morning, eight years ago, when Barnes arose from bed and yawned he found he couldn't close his jaws. He consulted a physician, who set the dislocation. Since then Barnes has never yawned without the penalty of a visit to a physician.

He was eating a sandwich in a restaurant on Saturday and opened wide his mouth. His jaws immediately became dislocated. He went to the City Hospital for treatment and returned to finish his meal. The same thing happened again, and the next day he made no fewer than six trips to the institution.

THE TALE OF THOUSANDS.

The Scientist and His Great Discovery.

Many things have been advertised in the local papers for human ailments, but nothing has created the talk and enthusiastic praise in this city and vicinity like Root Juice. Most of those who take the remedy a short while cannot say too many good things for the scientist and his wonderful health-promoting discovery. While here the scientist said: "The medicine does not cure disease; it simply removes the cause and gives nature a chance. That is why so many people get well after taking the Juice a short while." Many local people permitted their names to be published in this paper because the remedy cured them and they continue to report at A. G. Luken's drug store some great good the Juice is doing. It is certainly a great medicine for the stomach, liver and kidneys. Indigestion, constipation, rheumatism, backache, sick headache, nervousness and other symptoms of a disordered condition of the digestive and secretory organs are soon removed under the Juice treatment. They are pleased to tell all about it at Luken's drug store. "Ze-lit" Pain Oil should be used freely in connection with the Juice in rheumatic and kidney troubles when there is any pain, soreness or inflammation. Root Juice is $1 a bottle. Three bottles for $2.50. "Ze-lit" Pain Oil, 25 cents.

HOUSE SUBCOMMITTEE MAKES RECOMMENDATION

Thinks Pension Roll Should Be $150,000,000.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The house subcommittee on pensions has agreed to recommend a pension roll of $150,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1909. This will be about $7,000,000 in excess of the pension roll of the present fiscal year. The increase is largely due to the provisions of the McCumber bill, effective in February, 1907, by which the enlargement of pensions in accordance with age and the abolishment of physical examination as a prerequisite to the establishment of pension claims on account of physical disability were brought about. The secretary of the interior and the commissioner of pensions have been invited to appear next Monday before the subcommittee and support the recommendation that the number of pension agencies in the United States be reduced from eighteen to nine or to one only at Washington. The proposed reduction has been suggested in the interest of economy.

SISTERS

Would Not Allow Coffee Used.

It doesn't take very long, only long enough to get well away from the bad effects of coffee, the drug in coffee and a little while for Postum to commence toning up the nerves and your reformed coffee drinker will begin to put on flesh and show an improved condition generally.

An Indiana man says: "I knew for a long time that coffee was running my system down. For the last five years I have been troubled with my stomach but didn't seem able to quit coffee. Finally I took down sick and my doctor told me to stop coffee."

"I tried milk and hot water, but got tired of both. About that time while on a visit to my cousin she recommended Postum, claiming that it had done so much for her."

"She was looking stouter and was not at all nervous, while I was shaking at the least excitement. Her husband told me that the sisters at the hospital where he worked used Postum and wouldn't allow any coffee to be used."

"I came home and began using Postum and in a few days noticed improvement which continued until now I must say that I am feeling fine. The more I drink Postum the better I like it. I make it according to directions on the package which gives it its good rich taste."

"I have thanked my cousin many times for telling me about Postum, for it has done great good to my nerves and whole system. Before I quit coffee and began to use Postum I was troubled with toothache and headache, besides the steady old grind of stomach troubles. Now I have none of them." "There's a Reason."

LETT IS RELEASED

Young Man Accused of Stealing Watch Given His Freedom by Court.

IS OF GOOD CHARACTER.

Charles Lett, colored, charged with petit larceny, has been released on his own recognizance. This morning in the circuit court the young colored man was given a hearing. Officers from Portland, Ind., his former home, testified that while a resident of that town, Lett had always borne a good reputation. Lett was charged with stealing a watch from the home of George R. Dilks, Spring Grove.

ACADEMIC COSTUMES.

Square Cap or Berretta Hood Survival of the Ancient Cope.

Academic costume was originally the ordinary dress of the period in which it was prescribed. Mediaeval statutes were directed not to the wearing of any particular robe, but against extravagant taste in or deficiencies of dress. At Heidelberg, for instance, students were forbidden to go out without boots "unless clad in a garment reaching to the heels." The most purely academic part of the costume was the square cap or berretta, with a tuft on the top (in lieu of the very modern tassels, which was the distinctive badge of the mastership. Its possession was much coveted, and, according to one authority, "it is only in post mediaeval times that the berretta, first worn by undergraduates and now (outside the universities) by more chorist or school boys." The gown, or toga, on the other hand, was an unofficial robe or cassock of various colors the favorite at Oxford being green, blue or blood color.

"The hood is a survival of the ancient cappa, or cope, which is still to be seen in the official robes of the chancellor of Cambridge. It formed part of the garment, like the cowl of a monk's robe, and was not restricted to graduates, being the ordinary clerical dress, and not even exclusively clerical. "It is only the material of the hood which was characteristic of degree or office," the use of miniver, for instance, being confined to masters. "Silk hoods came in perhaps toward the end of the fourteenth century as a summer alternative for masters, whose winter fur hoods were something more than an honorary appendage in the unwarmened schools and churches of mediaeval times." At Oxford undergraduates lost their hoods in 1480, but it was not till "about the beginning of Queen Elizabeth's reign" that the masters and stewards of incorporated societies, who also wore them, "cast them off their heads and hung them on their shoulders."—Dundee Advertiser.

TAILORS IN A RIOT.

Refused to Permit a Performance That Satisfied Their Craft.

In 1769 Foote had produced a burlesque, the author of which has never been discovered, entitled "The Tailors; a Tragedy For Warm Weather." Town announced the revival of this piece for his benefit. As the title implies, it was a satire upon the sartorial craft, and upon the bills being issued an indignation meeting was convened by the knights of the needle, who vowed to oppose the performance by might and main.

Menacing letters were sent to Dowton telling him that 17,000 tailors would attend to his piece, and one, who signed himself "Death," added that 10,000 men could be found if necessary. These threats were laughed at by the actors, but when night came it was discovered that the craft were in earnest and that with few exceptions they had contrived to secure every seat in the house, while a mob without still squeezed for admission. The moment Dowton appeared upon the stage there was a hideous uproar and some one threw a pair of shears at him.

Not a word would the rioters listen to, nor would they accept any compromise in the way of changing the piece. Within howled and hissed without intermission hundreds of exasperated tailors, outside howled and belabored thousands of raging rioters, who attempted to storm the house. So for maddened did the riot wax that a magistrate had to be sent for and special constables called out, but these were helpless against overwhelming odds, so a troop of life guards was ultimately summoned, who, after making sixteen prisoners, put the riot to flight.—American Tailor and Cutter.

His Sense of Touch.

"A country grocer," said a lecturer, "was talking to a throng of customers about the wonderful sense of touch that the blind have. 'Here comes old blind Henry Perkins now,' said the grocer. 'We'll test him.' And he took a scoopful of sugar and extended it to the old man. 'Feel this, Henry,' he said, 'and tell us what it is.' 'The blind man put his hand in the scoop, passed its contents through his fingers and said in a firm, confident tone, 'Sand.'"

Dainty Deer.

How sensitive deer are in the matter of food was proved once again during the hearing of a case at Earlham, England, where three men were charged with sleeping in a deer pen in Bishop park. A keeper said they had pulled down from the racks about ten shillings' worth of hay, which the deer would not afterward touch because it had been lying upon it. In fact, the deer would not go near the pens, as the men had slept there.

Looking Forward.

"Do you think the time will ever come when every one will fly?" "It may. But if it does I hope I'll not have to live near the people who are our next door neighbors now. I know they would be running in every day or two to borrow our wings."—Chicago Record Herald.

PARIS IN 1869.

Never Had the Empire Seemed More Assured, the Court More Brilliant. The last flicker of the candle, the last flame of the dying fire, is ever the brightest, and so it was with Paris in 1869.

Never had the empire seemed more assured, the court more brilliant, the fete more gorgeous. The light-hearted Parisians revelled in the daily sights of royal processions and cavalcades. The Bois de Boulogne and the Champs Elysees, where we were living at that time, were crowded with splendid equipages. I remember often seeing the Empress Eugenie, then the handsomest woman in Europe, driving in her daumont, the green and gold liveries of the postillions and outriders making a brave show. Nor were four horses and postillions the privilege of royalty alone. Princess Metternich, the wife of the Austrian ambassador, often went out in similar style. The beautiful Mme de Canisy and the Duchesse de Mouchy, the empress's greatest and perhaps only intimate friend, and a host of court ladies habitually drove out in great state and helped by the magnificence of their appearance to give to Paris that air of elegance and distinction which could neither be surpassed nor emulated by any other capital in Europe. Even among those who had forebodings of the gathering storm no one had deserted the black shadow cast on the blue sky by the approaching figure of Bellona, her fierce eyes fixed on luxury, smiling, tranquil France.—Lady Randolph Churchill in Century.

QUITE A NICE GAME.

Why the Girl Who Proposed It Lost Her Temper.

The other day Miss Fannie Lomer ran across the road to see an intimate friend. As is usual with young ladies, they had a good deal to tell one another. In the course of the conversation Fannie said:

"I used to think that Gus Simpson was a nice young man, but I just hate him now."

"Why, what has he done?"

"He's treated me shamefully."

"In what way?"

"Why, the other evening at a party I said to him: 'Let's play the old game of temptation. If I say "Yes" or "No" to your questions, I'll owe you a box of gloves, and if you say "Yes" or "No," you'll give me a box."

"Then what?"

"Well, after the party he took me home, and all the way there he talked as sweetly as could be about love and that men should not live alone, and all that. And when we got to the front gate he said, 'Fannie, I have waited for this opportunity a long time—will you marry me?' I whispered 'Yes' in a low voice, and— (Here her sobs choked her voice.)

"And what did he do then?" inquired her listener eagerly.

"He just—chucked and said, 'You have lost, Fannie; I take No. 9's.' Then he laughed with all his might. That's what he did."—London Answers.

HE SOBBED BITTERLY

Traveling Man Arraigned for Drunk Regretted His Un-thoughted Action.

HE WAS FLAT BROKE.

Sobbing bitterly, N. A. Marshall of Dayton, O., who is a traveling salesman, entered a plea of guilty when arraigned in the city court this morning on a charge of intoxication.

"Your Honor, I have never been in trouble before and I am not a drinking man. I have a wife and two children to support and I haven't got a cent," said Marshall. Then he covered his face with his hands and sank into his seat sobbing convulsively. A fine of $1 and costs was assessed, it being paid by a local merchant.

COTTON IN INDIA.

The Way It Was Discovered by a Man Who Was an Observer.

A remarkable story is told about the discovery of the cotton plant in India some years ago. Two gentlemen were driving out to dinner near Bombay, one the host and the other his guest. On both sides of the road were hedges. It was getting dark, but the guest noticed some white stuff on the top of the hedges all the way along and at length told his friend that he thought it looked like cotton. His friend ordered the native driver to stop, and the two Englishmen got down and examined. The guest was right. It was cotton of an extraordinary strong staple.

Both men were cotton experts, and yet the host, who had driven along the same road for years, had passed the cotton without recognizing it. The guest immediately proceeded to buy up these hedges, for except them there were none that he had seen during a twelve years' residence in India.

During his investigations he discovered that natives often had one or two cotton trees in their gardens, and the English club compounds possessed three or four in different parts of India, but nowhere except in this Bombay district did he see cotton growing in such luxuriant abundance.

He bought up every tree and plant he could, for not a single native European imagined that it was a cotton tree that he possessed in his garden.—Cotton Age.

Lighted Streets in Europe.

The best lighted street in Europe, declares a weekly paper, is Unter den Linden, in Berlin. Perhaps it is, but we would not be sure. In the torrent steamed hills of the Jura, where water power is as cheap as anywhere in the world, there are little French villages in which every tiny cottage has its electric light installation, and the central street, that one could almost jump across, is flooded by the beams of arc lamps that would do credit to the Strand. However, the Berlin boulevard, otherwise a disappointing thoroughfare, is certainly well illuminated. Plate glass, policeman and policemen are the three most striking features of that capital, but the lighting of the streets is a good fourth.—London News.

Moments That Counted

Bacon's fame is mainly due to books written in his spare hours while he was England's chancellor. Humboldt's days were so occupied with his business that he had to pursue his scientific labors in the night or early morning. Burns wrote his most beautiful poems in his spare moments while working on a farm. Grote wrote his "History of Greece" during the odds and ends of time snatched from his duty as a banker. "Moments are the golden sands of time" if rightly used.

Down to the Norman conquest the Britons had "living money" and "dead money," the former being slaves and cattle, the latter metal.

The Recent Financial Flurry

demonstrated the great value of a savings account. Many wage earners, with income temporarily cut off, passed through the period without inconvenience as they were able to fall back upon their bank accounts.

Unfortunately, however, numerous others had not fortified themselves in this manner. They are now in debt.

Now that the shops are open again, you should maintain a savings account. Do this, and the next flurry will not find you unprepared.
