Fathers, Mothers, Brothers and Sisters
Praise the Quaker Health Teacher

That the breadwinners of our American homes believe in good health is shown by the immense number of people who called on the Quaker Health Teacher while he was in Clarksburg, W. Va., had a talk with him and obtained the famous Quaker Herb Extract.

That these medicines cured is evidenced by the testimonials received. The case of Mary Krehnbrink of Pike St. Clarksburg, W. Va., is very interesting. She says:

"I was very nervous and subject to nervous headaches. The slightest noise would startle me. I was cross and irritable morose and melancholy. I had been reading so much about Quaker Herb Extract that I resolved to try it. Thank heaven's I did so for now after having taken less than three bottles, I am a different woman. Have not had an attack of nervous headaches for over three weeks, my nerves are strong and steady, and I am beginning to feel as well as ever. Quaker Herb Extract done it all.

MORE PROOF.

Thos. Garrett, 14 Baltimore St. Clarksburg, W. Va., is another believer in Quaker Herb Extract. He suffered with Indigestion, Dyspepsia and Constipation for a long time. After taking Quaker Herb Extract less than two weeks, he was so much improved that he voluntarily called at the Drug Store and expressed his thanks, and also his desire to have his testimonial published for the benefit of other sufferers. If you doubt, write or telephone. Quaker Herb Extract $1.00, 3 for $2.50. Quaker Oil (Liniment) for all aches and pains 25 cents.

INDIANA IS FIFTY YEARS BEHIND THE TIMES, SAYS HURTY

Secretary of State Board of Health Holds This State Does Not Use Preventative Measures to Stop Disease.

SPOKE TO THE EARLHAM STUDENTS THIS MORNING.

There He Attempted to Impress on His Hearers They Should Heed Preventative Measures and Not Cures.

"Indiana is fifty years behind the times in health regulations," stated Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, who was in the city today. Dr. Hurty is making an active campaign to educate the people of this state in matters of public health. "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," is his motto. Dr. Hurty is trying to make the people of Indiana realize that laws should be enacted to prevent the spread of disease—not to stamp out diseases after they have been contracted. To illustrate his meaning, Dr. Hurty always, in addressing an audience, relates some true incident. This morning he spoke to the Earlham students at Lindsey hall. To his youthful, but appreciative audience he told the following story:

Three Brothers.

The eldest of the three brothers was nine, the second seven, and the third five. They had come, the two younger ones hold of hands, to the office of the state board of health to see what could be done for their mother, Montgomery, the oldest, said: "My mother is sick in bed with consumption, and Mrs. Homer told us to come and tell you, and you would tell us where to take her." "No," he said, in answer to questions, "we haven't a father; he died sixteen months ago of consumption. My sister, too, died of consumption, and me and my two brothers and mother are all there is. Yes, mother worked to support us. She sewed and I was elevator boy at Smith's block. I am doing nothing now, and we haven't anything to eat except what the neighbors give us. Please tell us where we can take mother. She coughs all the time, and—and I am afraid—she's—she's—going to die."

In imagination there appeared a picture of a true, good woman, fatally stricken with the great white plague. She lay on a miserably furnished bed in a bare room. Piece by piece it had been stripped of its furniture to procure food. The thin, transparent hands, pale, wan face, bright eyes and appealing look haunted me without seeing them. Afterwards, a visit and investigation proved that imagination had not run riot. Indeed it had not pictured all. The last stage of the relentless disease had been entered, there remained but a few days for the mother who had given birth to four sons and who had fought a good fight. Between coughs and in gasped sobs, she made no complaint, made no idle wishes, but expressed solicitation for the welfare of her children. They had come out of her life, she had worked all her life for them, and now when that life was on the eve of departing, it was not herself, but the boys whom she hoped to bring to useful manhood, of whom she spoke. The room was dark and mouldy, the floor broken in places and plastering falling off, and the four dollars a month rent went to a man who was paying taxes on $100,000 and over. The window admitted fifth-tainted air from the back yard, and through the front door came the hot street air laden with infected dust. Nothing could be done except to administer a dose of morphine to give temporary sleep with its oblivion to pain and care. It would be murder to give enough to hasten the permanent oblivion which was inevitable in a few days. Yes, it would be murder, and the law, silent and inactive before and during the slow poisoning by the preventable disease, would then tremble with activity. Detectives and police would hunt the murderer; the last cent in the county treasury would be spent to apprehend and convict him, and the economy quack would declare against "spending money for any such crank idea as preventing consumption."

"Please tell us where we can take mother," I might have replied in truth, "To a grave; that is the only place the great Christian State of Indiana has where poor widows with consumption may be taken."

"There might have been no story like this Dr. Hurty said, had the woman been educated to the prevention of the disease.

If people were thoroughly acquainted with preventative laws as they should be, the state would be spared the expense of caring for so many orphans. Until Indiana awakes to her duty, state institutions will increase and more people will be thrust under public care.

There is no medicine so safe and at the same time so pleasant to take as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. The positive cure for all diseases arising from stomach trouble. The price is very reasonable—50c and $1.

LITTLETON BEGINS FINAL ARGUMENT FOR THAW'S LIFE

He Maintained This Morning That the Defendant Was Absolutely Insane at the Time He Shot White.

JEROME WILL SPEAK FOR STATE THURSDAY.

Much Surprise Was Occasioned Yesterday When the Prosecution Did Not Call Expert Witnesses to Stand.

New York, Jan. 29.—Attorney Littleton began his argument today in the Thaw case by maintaining that Thaw was absolutely insane at the time he killed White. His argument will probably consume all of today and tomorrow. Before court opened today it was announced that only those holding passes signed by Justice Dowling, Prosecutor Jerome or Attorney Littleton could be admitted to the court room.

District Attorney Jerome will speak on Thursday. He has promised to be brief and, if his address should not extend beyond the morning session, Justice Dowling will hand the case over to the jury on Thursday afternoon. The court announced, however, that he probably would not deliver his charge until Friday morning.

Contrary to his policy of last year, when he called nine experts in insanity to the witness chair, Mr. Jerome this year utterly ignored the scientific phase of the rebuttal case. He produced several eye witnesses to the tragedy and several police officers who handled Thaw the night of the homicide and placed on record their opinion that the defendant's acts and manner were rational. Under agreement of counsel the testimony given by Abraham Hummel at the trial was read to the jury and the Thaw will be admitted in evidence without further proof as to its custody during the six months following the shooting of Stanford White.

Mr. Jerome's elimination of expert testimony from the rebuttal case occasioned much talk.

SAFE WAS ROBBED

Thief Entered the Office of J. O. Barber and Took About $30.

NO CLUE TO PERPETRATOR.

Yesterday at the noon hour while all the attaches of the office were at dinner, some unknown man entered the insurance office of J. O. Barber in the Kelly block on Main street, by means of a skeleton key, then robbed the cash drawer in the safe of about $30.

The door of the safe had been left open by Mr. Barber so the theft of the money was only the matter of a few minutes. As soon as Mr. Barber discovered the loss of the money he made a careful investigation which showed that beyond question of doubt the money had been appropriated by a thief. The police were called in on the case, but so far no clue which would lead to the identity of the crook has been discovered.

It is thought that the thief must have visited the office some time during the forenoon and noticed that the safe door was open.

Deaths and Funerals.

The Power of the Rothschilds.

It has been calculated that at the present rate of accumulation the Rothschilds will own by the middle of the present century some $2,000,000,000, or nearly enough to pay off the national debt three times over. The imagination is staggered and fails to realize the power which is represented by such figures. It could finance or it could stop a war; it could delay the industrial development of a country for a generation, or it could on the other hand, enable a country which it favored to best all its industrial rivals. A power like this must have its fingers on all the arteries through which flows the lifeblood of commerce, the ebb and flow of which it can regulate uncontrolled.—Grand Magazine.

Our Sun and Others.

Our sun is a pretty big affair, its diameter being 864,000 miles, exceeding that of the earth's 109 times; its surface 11,750 times that of the earth, its volume exceeding that of the earth 1,290,000 times and its mass (or attractive power) being 329,000 times greater than that of the earth. But great as the sun is, it is but one of many hundreds of thousands of similar bodies.—New York American.

The Recent Financial Flurry demonstrated the great value of a savings account. Many wage earners, with income temporarily cut off, passed through the period without inconvenience as they were able to fall back upon their bank accounts.

Unfortunately, however, numerous others had not fortified themselves in this manner. They are now in debt.

Now that the shops are open again, you should maintain a savings account. On this, and the next flurry will not find you unprepared.
