"Something novel in the way of a 'good time' and very suitable for this year is a Leap Year masquerade dance. Invitations written in old English on gold parchment paper inscribed as follows are very good:

"Whereas it hath now become apart of the common law in regard to social relations of life that as often as Leap Year doth return, the ladies have the privilege during that time of making love either by words or by looks, as to them it seemeth proper; and moreover, no man will be entitled to benefit the clergy who doth in any wise treat a proposal with slight or contumely."

The guests should come in "powder" and "patches." The "ladies" with their gentle escorts should be blindfolded and turned loose in the reception room to find their partners for the evening. While blindfolded each girl may propose to any man who happens to pass her way. The hostess must give each girl a heart and the boys a mitten. When the fair maid delivers her proposal she must hand over her heart, if declined she has the privilege of asking another member of the sterner sex. When a blindfolded man declines a proposal he must surrender the mitten and also the heart which his unseen captor presents to him. After the company are mated they then form in line for the grand march. Punch and wafer may be served or refreshments, the affair is not supposed to call for an elaborate luncheon, but is simply intended for a good time. This idea was found in the Ladies Home Journal and with appropriate decorations might be used for a valentine party.

Mrs. Dr. Harold and daughter, Miss Haley, of North Tenth street, have issued invitations for a reception Thursday, February six. About two hundred have received invitations and the affair promises to be one of the most prominent in the social calendar.

The Helping Hand society met yesterday afternoon with Mrs. George Steinkamp. The club has a member.

HOBBO CARS ON

ALL FREIGHT TRAINS

Millionaire Leader Would Have Them Inaugurated.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 31.—James Eads Howe of the Brotherhood Welfare association, himself known as the millionaire hobo, is evolving a plan for the transportation of the unemployed followers to fields of industry, which he will soon present to the trunk line railroads of the country. Howe proposes to guarantee the railroad company accepting his proposition an immunity from hobos if the company will agree to attach a special "hobo" box car on one of its regular freight trains once a month. By this plan hobos will travel only on these special "excursion" days, and the railroad company is pledged the support of Howe and his association that no hobos will be found riding the bumpers on this road.

HIS SATANIC MAJESTY

CURIOUS OLD LEGENDS CONCERNING THE EVIL SPIRIT.

In Popular Folklore the Prince of Tempters is Constantly Outwitted, and Finds With Him Are Broken by the Simplest Expedients.

There is a curious legend of the devil making his confession in Cologne cathedral. He professes to repent his crimes and to be willing to endure a thousand years of penance. "My son," says the priest, "all you need is to bow before the image of the Crucified and ask him for pardon."

"What?" cries the devil. "He who swept up the chips for Joseph, he who hung on a gallows?" And he turned on his heel, with a curse.

In popular legend and folklore the devil is outwitted constantly, contracts made with him are broken, and he is again and again deceived by the simplest expedients as substituting a lantern for the sunrise. This, if I remember rightly, occurs in the legend of the Devil's Dike at Brighton. As a child terrified by a very different Satan I remember the light brought to my own spirit by some story of the kind. The expedient in this case was cutting the sole out of the shoe which the devil had to fill with silver. The shoe was never filled, and so he could never claim his part of the bargain. I remember feeling a thrill of relief at seeing that it was possible to evade and elude him after all.

There is an Icelandic legend which is possibly the origin of the proverb, "The devil take the hindmost." He had agreed to instruct seven scholars in all the mysteries of magic for no other reward than that when their seven years' apprenticeship was over he should have as his thrall the last to leave for the last time by the single narrow door. On that fatal day the last to leave literally escaped him, eluded him by slipping out of his cloak, which the devil had grasped. He became a most worthy parish priest, venerated all over the island. As the iron door slammed to it crushed his heel.

The devil is constantly represented in tradition and folk tales as childish, grotesque, spiteful. With his bellow he tries to put out St. Genevieve's candle as she carries it alight through rain and wind to church. A very well known legend is that of St. Dunstan who, when attacked by him while busied at the forge, brought the conflict to an end by seizing the adversary with the red-hot tongs. This incident was the most popular pageant provided by the goldsmiths on lord mayor's day, when the mayor happened to be elected from their company.

The lion and the dragon are the animals typical of the devil. It is said that the ancient idea of the animosity between the lion and the cock is the origin of the placing of the weathercock upon the steeple. A mediaeval rhythm says of the cock, "In nocturne concinat leo perturbatur," and the idea was to terrify Satan by the sight of the enemy on the highest point of the sacred building. The dragon was the symbol of the powers of darkness everywhere. In many of the stories of saints delivering a countryside from a devouring dragon the dragon obviously represents paganism destroyed by the labors of the Christian apostle. Up to the French revolution a prisoner was set free at Rouen every year on Ascension day in commemoration of the deliverance of the people from a dragon by St. Romain. In Provence St. Martha bound a monster called the tarasque with her girdle so that the people could slay him "with swords and knives," hence the name Tarascon. In Spain a monster snake, called the tarasque, is dragged in the Corpus Christi processions to signify Christ's triumph over death and hell. By the way, the Elizabethan injunctions decreed that in the rogationtide processions "there should be neither George nor Margaret, but the old dragon to come on alone and show himself."

He was believed to have special power over the air, to be continually stirring up thunderstorms and tempests of wind and hail; hence the ringing of the bells during thunderstorms to frighten the evil spirits away. It was by the help of Satan that Simon Magus, according to the early Christian legend, floated in the air till commanded by St. Peter to descend. It is significant that Leonardo da Vinci, the typical figure of the renaissance, spent many years of his life in the endeavor to invent a flying machine. The opposition he met with from the clergy and devout people was intense. It is indeed difficult to imagine a more concrete symbol of all that is most opposed to what has been known historically as the Christian spirit than a flying machine. It must have seemed a parody of Lucifer's daring presumption, to be speedily followed by a similar fall.—National Review.

The Twilight of Life.
The muscles of the stomach in old age are not as strong or active as in youth and in consequence old people are very subject to constipation and indigestion. Many seldom have a bowel movement without artificial aid. Many, also, have unpleasant eructations of gas from the stomach after eating. All this can be avoided by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which permanently regulates the bowels so that passages come naturally, and so strengthens the stomach that food is digested without discomfort. Druggists sell it at 50 cents or $1 a large bottle.

England is Claiming That Her Fighters

Are Now the Fastest in the World

England now claims the fastest fighting craft afloat. The picture which is shown herewith shows the destroyer Desperado, which has a speed of 39 knots an hour. She is not the fastest of the English destroyers. The Albattross can exceed 32 knots and the Tartar has a speed of more than 37 knots an hour. In other words, she can dive her way through the water faster than a y, except the very fastest express trains can travel or land.

NOT A CANDIDATE RAYNER FOR BRYAN

J. A. M. Adair Says Under No Circumstances Will He Run for Governor.

TRUE TO HIS PROMISES.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Congressman J. A. M. Adair will not be a candidate for the democratic nomination for governor. The formal statement permitting the use of his name, which has been expected for a long time, will not be forthcoming.

Mr. Adair defined his position: "The people of my district elected me to serve them in congress," he said. "I was proud when I was running for this office that if they elected me I would perform the duties of the office faithfully and punctually. I am going to carry out that pledge to the letter."

"If I were to make the race for the nomination for governor, it would be necessary for me to spend a considerable part of my time prior to the convention in Indiana. My time belongs to my constituents, and I shall spend every available minute of it looking after their interests in Washington. While I would accept the nomination for governor if my party called me, and would do so with a firm conviction that I could be elected, I shall not be a candidate."

The Indiana democratic congressmen are watching the gubernatorial developments in their party with interest.

PALLADIUM WANT ADS. PAY

In an Interview He Says That

The Nebraskan Will Be Nominated

THE MASSES ARE FOR HIM.

Washington, Jan. 31.—Senator Rayner of Maryland, has for nearly a year been the ring leader in the movement to prevent the nomination of William J. Bryan for President. He is now ready to admit that it is impossible to sidetrack the Nebraskan.

When asked for his views in the light of recent developments he said: "You will recall the fact that last summer I wrote several articles, the object of these articles being to blaze the way for some consensus of opinion as to who would be the proper candidate for our party. My efforts did not materialize. I tell you now that I do not see the faintest sign of any organized opposition to the candidacy of Mr. Bryan in any State of the Union."

"It is a paradox to say so, but the Democratic leaders here who are against him are all for him. They will tell you that they are against him and at the same time will tell you that the delegations from their States will be for him in the convention. I have no views of my own to present at the present time, nor can I foresee what a day will bring forth.

Has a Wonderful Hold.

"The true situation at this hour is that Bryan has a wonderful hold on the Democratic masses and if the convention met tomorrow, in my judgment, he would be named by acclamation. Those of us who want the Democratic party to win have day after day here, in informal conferences, suggested the names of Democratic candidates who, we believe, could carry the pivotal States that must be carried in order to give us the electoral vote.

Memory bells are toys given by the Japanese youths to their sweethearts. They are constructed of slips of glass so delicately poised that the least vibration sets them jingling. The delicate tinkling serves to remind their owners of the giver; hence the pretty, fanciful name, memory bells.
