EVELYN MAKES STATEMENT

SAYS THAT THE SURROUNDINGS
OF HER HUSBAND MAKE HER
CRY—PROBABLE OUTCOME OF SITUATION.

New York, Feb. 5.—Harry K. Thaw today delivered an ultimatum to his counsel. He gave Martin W. Littleton 24 hours to start to get him out of Matteawan. If the lawyer who secured his acquittal failed in that, Thaw said O'Reilly and Peabody could have the next 24 hours to try their hand at the job.

At the end of 48 hours Thaw said he would employ new counsel if proceedings for his release were not under way.

After receiving the ultimatum Messrs. O'Reilly and Peabody hurried to Fishkill with a compromise offer, which they urged Thaw to accept.

From Saturday night until this morning in ward 1, north of the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane, was such a trying interval for Thaw that he sent peremptory instructions to Mr. Littleton to begin habeas corpus proceedings today.

There was a telephone conference among counsel, and it was agreed that Messrs. Peabody and O'Reilly should visit Thaw at once and assure him that the state commission in lunacy had been consulted and was considering representation that a crowded ward such as that in which Thaw is confined at Matteawan cannot have any but an injurious effect upon Thaw's mental or physical health.

This compromise offer provided that a move would be made as quickly as possible to get him transferred to a quieter retreat—either the State Hospital for the Insane at Middletown or to a private asylum.

"Something must be done for my husband," Mr. Jerome made me gulp a few times, but Matteawan made me cry. There is no reason why Harry should be compelled to associate with criminals. He has been acquitted of the charge of murder, and we are willing that he be sent to any state institution where he can have a private room and be cared for in a manner that will permit of his early recovery. I did not visit him yesterday, because I could not bear to think of him in such a place as I saw yesterday."

Evelyn Thaw made this statement to Thaw's counsel at the Hotel Belmont last night.

"I don't care where he is sent," said the elder Mrs. Thaw to Mr. Peabody over the phone. "just so we are permitted to aid in his recovery in every possible way. I am willing that he remain in the custody of the state authorities, but he must be where I can see him and know that his mental condition is not jeopardized by his surroundings. I direct you, as one of his counsel, to take such steps as are necessary to effect a satisfactory arrangement."

At the conclusion of the conference Lawyer O'Reilly said: "It is within the power of Dr. Albert Warren Ferris, president of the state lunacy commission, to permit the transfer of Mr. Thaw to some other institution upon application. Dr. Ferris testified, however, at the first trial that Thaw was suffering from paranoid. When he visited the patient at the hospital at Matteawan, the interviews he made public signified that he had not changed his opinion. It is hardly probable, in view of this, that Dr. Ferris would approve an application of that kind."

"The next alternative," continued Mr. O'Reilly, "will be a writ of habeas corpus. If we adopt such a course it will not be of our own volition, but for the reason that drastic measures will be necessary to secure rights to which we believe Thaw is entitled."

The Twilight Of Life.

The muscles in the stomach in old age are not so active as in youth, and consequence old people are very subject to constipation and indigestion. Many sedentary people have unpleasant eructations, gas from the stomach after eating. All this can be avoided by the use of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Peppermint, which is permanent. It is a safe medicine, passes naturally, and so strengthens the stomach that food is digested without difficulty. Druggists sell it at 30 cents or $1 a large bottle.

STORIES FROM THE NATIONAL CAPITAL

From The Palladium's Special Correspondent, Ralph M. Whiteside

Washington, Feb. 5.—John Wesley Gaines, of Tennessee, is a great man to make speeches. He has flights of oratory that are really enjoyable.

Sometimes his speech-making is the basis for good stories, and the members of the house find real delight in telling them between sessions.

Recently Mr. Gaines made a fine speech. The members of the house were rapt in attention as he climbed, rung by rung, the oratorical ladder. Finally, he reached the climax.

"Can anybody tell me right now how much it costs to run this congress?" he shouted. "I want to know."

The new member from Wisconsin, Kustermann by name, who has a distinctly German accent, began to figure. Then he waited for the next intermission. It came, and Kustermann interrupted.

"The gentleman from Tennessee wants to know the cost of running this congress," he said. "I have the desired information. It costs exactly $146 a minute."

Kustermann paused a minute to give the member time for reflection. Then he continued.

A further figuring shows that the gentleman from Tennessee has consumed exactly $43,800 worth of time, for he has been talking this last half hour. It will continue to cost $146 a minute as long as he continues to address us."

It was the first speech Mr. Kustermann made, and he sat down, rather self-conscious and flushed in the face. So did Mr. Gaines.

The government is planning a real revival meeting, to be held in the Philippines. Necessity demands that something of this sort be done without delay. The idea is to have the natives sign the pledge—not to abstain from alcoholic beverages, but to throw away the dope they possess and not buy any more.

The opium habit continues in the Philippines, despite all efforts to down it. Opium is smuggled in right along, and the most vigilant efforts of the government officials cannot stop it.

To shut up opium at once would work a hardship, and the government is convinced that the people must be worked up to the right point before the supply is entirely shut off.

Mass meetings will be held throughout the islands and orators will talk on the evils of the habit. A genuine reform wave is to be instituted, and the result is awaited with interest. There is considerable speculation as to whether much can be accomplished with moral suasion, so peculiar an individual is the datto.

At every session of the senate a little brown-eyed woman sits in the gallery and watches every gesture of a man on the floor below. The woman is Mrs. Thomas P. Gore and the man is her husband, the blind senator from Oklahoma.

The senator calls her his "eyes and his right hand," and says she knows more about parliamentary law and politics than any other woman in the country.

He is probably right, for Mrs. Gore has studied politics step by step with her husband. She reads to him and discusses every question of national or state importance that arises. She takes down his speeches, attends to his mail and supplies every function that his sightless eyes cannot perform.

Mrs. Gore contributed greatly to her husband's election. She was his political manager and was with him when he made his campaign through Oklahoma.

Senator Gore has not yet made a "big" speech, but, according to reports from Oklahoma, he is a great orator, and will make the senate take notice when his opportunity arrives.

It is surprising the attitude the senator maintains when he is in the senate. One would not know that he is sightless, for his manner is that of a man who can see everything that is about him.

When he first came to Washington he practiced walking to his seat from every door in the house, and now he makes his way without trouble. After sessions his little wife is waiting to conduct him home.

The solemn frock coat, which traditionally has been regarded as the modernization of the toga of ancient Rome's senators, may soon be put on the shelf in the senate. Of course the frock will always be worn, but the day is coming when it will not be regarded as necessary.

A few years ago a senator would no more think of appearing at a session without a frock coat than he would attend a committee meeting in formal evening dress, but a change has come.

Senator Beveridge, of Indiana, was the brave man who first made the departure. He has become the fashion leader of the senate, and has introduced the sack coat. Decked out in a natty, neatly-fitting business suit, Senator Beveridge looks to be the youth of the senate. He looks younger even than William James Bryan, of Florida, although Senator Bryan is 15 years the junior of the man from Indiana.

Before his marriage, Senator Beveridge always wore the frock, and he had an air of haughty magnificence and solemnity that placed him quite a distance from almost everyone. After he was married, however, and laid aside the frock for the comfortable business suit, he also changed his manner. He is the soul of sociability nowadays.

Washington, Feb. 5.—"Died a-Bornin'" is the epitaph that will be written on the tombstone in the quiet, secluded corner of the congressional where Senator Beveridge's tariff committee bill will soon be laid away.

No bill could survive such murderous attacks as were made yesterday on Senator Beveridge's pet measure. It was biffed and banged, jabbed and twisted, kicked and cuffed by the congressional leaders, and its dearest friends, few though they are in number, were willing to admit last night that it is ready for its shroud and winding sheet.

Today the senator tried to inject some elixir of life into his bill by delivering a speech to which gave painstaking preparation. The brilliant calumet lights were turned on and extensive press notices in the Washington papers invited the public to the feast of oratory. There was a large attendance and the subject was presented with such a candid, straightforward line of talk from the men who shape the policies of congress that they were quick to see the handwriting on the part of the spoliators.

CHAPMAN ON TRIP

He With Evangelist Alexander
Will Travel Around the Globe.

TO OCCUPY SIX MONTHS.

Winona Lakes, Ind., Feb. 5.—Dr. J. Willard Chapman, leader of the Presbyterian evangelistic work in the country, has arranged to join his forces with those of the Rev. Charles Alexander in a tour that will take them around the world. The trip as planned will require six months. An itinerary occupying about three months will be followed in the English-speaking centers of Europe and the evangelists will spend about three months in Australia.

It is said by the Winona assembly management that the tour will not interfere with Dr. Chapman's work at Winona Lakes, where he conducts a Bible conference each summer. He has about completed the program and list of speakers for the conference next August.

The tour of the world probably will begin early in the fall. Dr. Chapman is now conducting evangelistic campaigns in cities of the United States, and will not close this work until about May.

The solemn frock coat, which traditionally has been regarded as the modernization of the toga of ancient Rome's senators, may soon be put on the shelf in the senate.

Of course the frock will always be worn, but the day is coming when it will not be regarded as necessary.

Yet all this does not necessarily make a doctor.

We have known many graduates with their sheepskins, who could not apply the knowledge they had acquired to relieving and curing a patient of dyspepsia.

They were floored by their first attempt to cure such a patient.

They were not to blame for this, for all the knowledge they acquired from medical works, was wholly experimental. They were told to try the following:

Aromatic Ammonia.

Bicarbonate of Soda.

Bicarbonate of Potass.

Blue Mass.

Camphor Water.

Catechu.

Charcoal.

Cresote.

Hot Water.

Lime Water.

Magnesia.

Mineral Waters.

Nitric Acid.

Nitro-Muriatic Acid.

Nux Vomica.

Oil of Amber.

Oil of Cajuput.

Rhubarb.

Senna.

Spirits of Lavender.

Starvation.

Strychnia.

Sulphur.

Sulphite of Lime.

Tincture of Cardamom.

Tincture of Ginger.

Tincture of Iron.

Tonics.

Vegetable Bitters.

In the list hot water is the only remedy that will not do more harm than good, and its use is still an unsolved problem.

If the professor who coaches the graduate would hand him a package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and tell him that it was a specific for dyspepsia, indigestion and flatulence, and should be his mainstay in such cases, that one grain of their active principal would digest 3000 grains of food in the stomach, and that added by this remedy the stomach would soon regain its normal condition, he would do the student more good than sending him forth with a lot of uncertain knowledge about the cure of these diseased conditions.

The young doctor would gain a reputation by curing his first case of dyspepsia.

The patient cured would sound his praises far and near, as do thousands upon thousands who praise Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Instead of experimenting with the mess of medicine in the above list, and doing his patients more harm than good, he would always be gaining reputation by always curing his patient.

When he met any indication of a diseased organ, he should discover what hundreds of other doctors have, that the whole trouble started with imperfect digestion and assimilation, then take out of his pocket medicine case a few of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, and tell the patient how to use them.

The result would be considered by the patient almost miraculous, and success after success would be achieved by him.

Many blood diseases, skin eruptions and heart trouble yield readily to Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, because they cure the incubating cause—dyspepsia. If the stomach is wrong, you are wrong all over.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are sold everywhere at druggists—50 cents per package.

Send us your name and address today, and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 5.—In a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Mabel Shrode, aged 16 years, against Valentine Shrode, aged 40, the wife charges that he, last night, tried to sell her to a Jew for $10.

She says that her husband keeps her hypnotized and that the Jew would have carried her away but for her mother's interference. Shrode fears violence at the hands of his neighbors and is reported to have fled from the city.
