

WHISPERED "IS THERE NO APPEAL?"

Italian Who Slayed Priest Heard of Jury and Asked Question.

JUDGE THANKED JURYMEN.

WAS PLEASED WITH THE VERDICT RENDERED—UNDER THE LAWS, ALIA CAN NOT BE HANGED FOR SIXTY DAYS.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Amusements

THEATRICAL CALENDAR.

NEW PHILLIPS.
Week of March 9—Vaudeville.

GENNETT.
Week of March 9—Crescent Comedy Company.

March 14—(Matinee and Night)
"The Man of the Hour."
March 21—(Matinee and Night)
"The Widow McCarty."
March 26—"The Sweetest Girl in Dixie."

Repertoire at the Gennett.

The Crescent Comedy company will close its engagement at the Gennett tonight with a presentation of "The Men of Jimtown." The company could not be given a full week owing to the fact that "The Man of the Hour" is to appear Saturday afternoon and night.

Vaudeville at the Phillips.

All who enjoy witnessing the presentation of a clever playlet, amounting practically to a complete act from a play, will be pleased with "Beggars" as it is being given by Ann Hamilton and her company at the New Phillips this week. "Beggars" is a Mexican study and is built on observations by Miss Hamilton while in country. Eddie King, a local amateur will appear in a black face stunt to night.

"The Man of the Hour."

"The Man of the Hour" with a record of two years' stay at the Savoy theatre, New York City, four months in Chicago and three weeks in St. Louis this season, will make its first appearance here at the Gennett, Saturday afternoon and night. "The Man of the Hour" was written by George Broadhurst and is a national play, as it is a drama that is fitted to all places. The play deals with the topic of municipal graft, around which in a powerful manner, a love story of absorbing interest has been woven. In addition to the company producing the play here three other companies are touring the South West and New England. The company selected by Messrs. Brady and Grismer for the production here is the same which played in Washington several weeks ago and which was especially complimented by President Roosevelt.

Mrs. Emma Nardis of Oregon, Ill., is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. V. Gause at 215 North Thirteenth street.

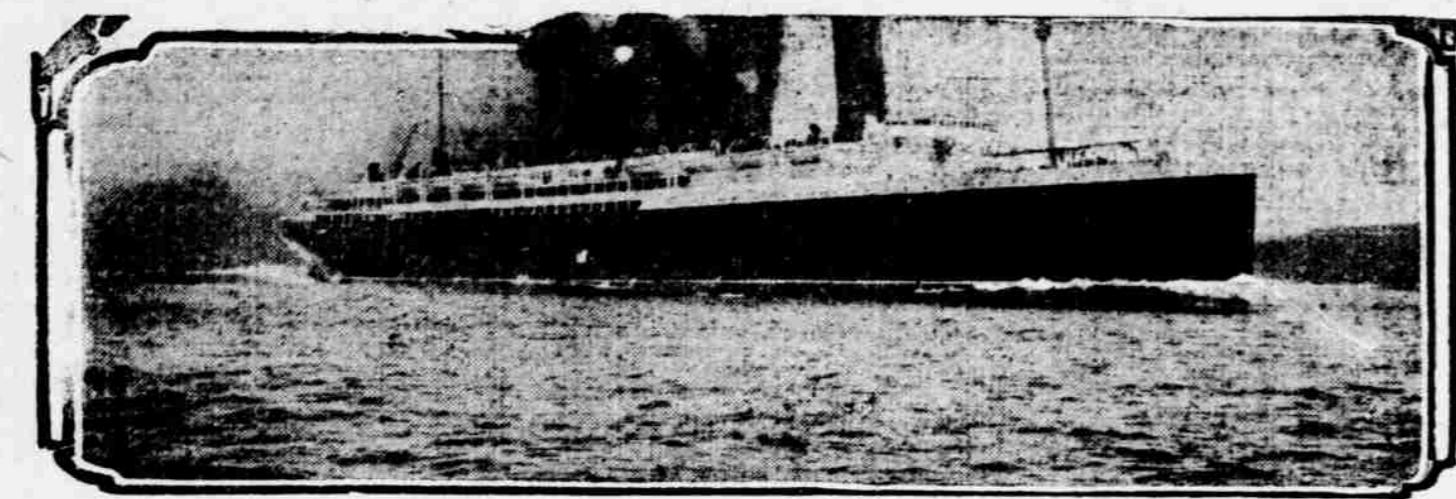

Mrs. Brady—You don't love me as much as you used to.

Mrs. Brady—Think not?

Mrs. Brady—No. You used to say I was worth my weight in gold, but—

Mrs. Brady—But now you're not as stout as you were, you know.—Philadelphia Press.

New Record for the Ocean Established By the Greyhound Mauretania, Yesterday

MAURETANIA.

Five Days and Five Minutes Required to Make New Transatlantic Record—Records Are Established Enroute.

Queenstown, March 13.—The steamer Mauretania yesterday established a new transatlantic record by beating her own best previous eastward record by two hours and 36 minutes. She arrived off Daunt's Rock at 4:14 yesterday afternoon, and this makes her time in transit five days and five minutes. She cleared Sandy Hook lightship at 11:09 a. m., March 7. The total distance traversed is 2,932 knots.

The average of knots an hour for the whole trip has been 24.42, as against her own previous record of 23.90. The best eastward daily average of the Mauretania is 23.62. The best day's run was 575 knots, with an average of 24.77 an hour.

The highest average run an hour by the German transatlantic lines is 23.58.

This was made by the Kaiser Wilhelm II.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.

When the jury had been polled, the Judge thanked them for having done their duty and expressed his approval of the verdict.

Under the laws, Alia cannot be hanged within 60 days of the rendering of the verdict. The finding had seemed inevitable from the beginning and the audience received it in silence, apparently satisfied that justice had been done.

Denver, March 13.—"Is there no appeal?" These were the only words spoken by Giuseppe Alia, when informed by Interpreter Matter that the jury found him guilty of murder in the first degree and fixed sentence at death.

Just 18 days after firing the shot which brought death of Father Francis Leo Heinrichs, at the altar in St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church, while in the act of administering the holy sacrament, this wanderer from Italy, an alleged, but not proven Anarchist, heard his doom.

In the courtroom, not three blocks from the church where he committed his crime, and within the sound of the chimes which he said drew him to that church, Alia received the judgment delivered by a jury of his peers. Stolid to the last, he simply nodded his head and whispered to the interpreter, "Is there no appeal?" Then his chin sank on his breast and he made no further comment.