Sailors' Superstitions.
It is a common belief among sailors that a ship which has been sunk and raised again is haunted by the ghosts of those who were drowned in her. Some years ago a large emigrant steamer was sunk in the Mediterranean, and over 500 lives were lost. Thousands were spent in raising the vessel. She was brought home and refitted, but has never since been used. It is impossible to keep a crew. The men declare that every night the great hull rings with the screams and groans of the multitude who sank, like rats in a trap, to the bottom of sixty feet of stormy sea.—Strand Magazine.

A Philosopher's Woe.
Diogenes dropped into the corner store. "Gimme a new candle for my lantern," he said, "and charge it," he added at the psychological moment. "Now, see here, Di," protested the proprietor, "that blamed old lantern of yours is on my books yet. Say, when yeh find yer honest man I bet he'll convert yeh."—Philadelphia Ledger.

"Dora, would you be willing to marry a young man who has to make his own way in the world and who has nothing but his love for you to recommend him?"
"Certainly, Gerald, if I cared enough for him, but at present I don't know of any such young man. Free! Free! weather, isn't it?"—Chicago Tribune.

Where Politeness Doesn't Pay.
"French and German hats," said a hatter, "only last half as long as ours. It isn't the poor quality of the hats, but the fine quality of the manners, that causes this. Lifting the hat in salutation is the hardest work that falls on the headpiece, and the French and Germans lift it to men and women equally, thus giving it twice as much labor as we do. Naturally, then, it wears out twice as quickly. It goes in the bin in no time over the water."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

M'GUIRES DIVORCED

Sophronia I. McGuire was granted a divorce from Fred McGuire in the Wayne circuit court this morning. The plaintiff asserted the defendant had deserted her and also failed to provide for her. She stated he had been cruel toward her in his treatment and had not been true to his marriage vows in other ways.

McGuire is the young man whose actions created excitement throughout the North End several weeks ago, when he went to the home of his father-in-law and seized his own child and attempted to flee with it.

ON TO ANDERSON

Methodists of this city and county are well represented at the annual North Indiana Conference, which began its sessions at Anderson last evening. The delegation from this city will increase in size until next Sunday, when the banner crowd will be in attendance. Owing to the convenient train schedule and proximity of Anderson, it is expected that on that date a larger crowd will be present from this city than ever attended a conference held outside of the county. The conference is expected to prove to be one of the most important ever held. Delegates are to be selected to the national conference, which will be held at Baltimore. The name of the Rev. T. M. Guild, presiding elder of the Richmond district will be presented as a ministerial candidate.

APPRAISERS NAMED

Appraisers of the stock of the Rost & Marshall company, formerly proprietors of the Big Store have been appointed. It has been reported currently that the stock of the company, which has been placed in involuntary bankruptcy is valued at $30,000. It is not believed the stock will show an actual value of more than one third that sum. One of the attorneys in the matter stated today he does not expect the appraisers will value it at more than $6,000. William Goodwin, of New Castle, and Will Loehr and Fred Krone, of this city, all experienced clothing and men's furnishings dealers have been named appraisers. Henry T. Burns has been appointed trustee in bankruptcy.

In the bankruptcy court held here yesterday Clay Hunt, referee granted the petition of Ray Shively for an order to sell the stock of the defunct firm at private sale to be valid up to and including April 22. If the stock were not disposed of at private sale the petition asked that it be disposed of at public auction either in bulk or parcel on the following day. The petition will be heard April 11 at New Castle.
