MISPLACED TRUST

Superintendent of Girls' School Resigns Because There Was No Honor.

GIRLS FLED FROM PLACE.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 18.—Discontented on account of the frequent cases of girls confined in the Indiana Girls' school on the Crawfordville road, near Clearmont, Miss Sarah Montgomery, superintendent of the school, has resigned.

It is understood that the principal reason for Miss Montgomery's resignation was discouragement on account of the unsatisfactory outcome of the experiment begun by the state last year, when the Indiana Girls' school was separated from the Woman's Prison and the prison features of the school abolished. No fences were built about the buildings which were to house the incorrigible girls of the state and iron bars were not put on the windows. The policy of the institution was to place trust in the girls, with the idea that when placed upon their honor and treated more like school children than prisoners, they would not try to get away.

Although this system seemed to have worked in other places, as soon as it was established in the Indiana Girls' school, the girls began to run away.

WINTERS IS NEW NIGHT SERGEANT

Patrolman Rises in Police Ranks.

The police commissioners met last evening and appointed Scott Winters, one of the veteran members of the police force, night sergeant in place of Joseph Betzold, who recently tendered his resignation rather than purchase one of the "high school cadet" uniforms the commissioners had ordered the police to wear. Winters is a republican and it is understood, the only applicant for the vacancy. He has a splendid record as an officer and his appointment is popular. There now exists a republican vacancy on the force because of Winters' promotion.

TELL DOCTORS HOW

Books of Instructions Issued To Indiana Health Officers.

WARNINGS ARE SOUNDED.

Books of instruction have been issued by the state board of health for the benefit of health officers of the state. The book gives detailed instructions in regard to the filling out of blanks and presents the rules that have been adopted by the state board of health and copies of the laws of the state that relate to the care of public health.

Copies of two model ordinances are presented and it is suggested by the board that one form of ordinance be adopted by cities and the other by towns. The ordinance for cities would make it unlawful for "any person, persons, company or corporation to treat, treat, cause, permit, keep or maintain within the limits of said city, anything whatsoever which is injurious to health, or indecent, or offensive to the nose, or an obstruction to the free use of any street, and any person or persons, company or corporation causing any nuisance as aforesaid, is declared to be the common maintainer of a nuisance."

Another paragraph says: "When visiting persons known to be infected with smallpox, diphtheria and scarlet fever, all physicians and health officers shall paint their clothing and hands against infection and shall thoroughly disinfect themselves before coming in contact with the public. The penalty for violation of any of the provisions of the ordinance would be a fine of not less than $25 nor more than $100 to which might be added imprisonment for ten days."

The ordinance recommended to towns is similar to that for cities, except that it provides for reporting certain diseases to the local health officers.

CARNEGIE IS THE GAME.

Washington, April 18.—Theodore Roosevelt's future, according to a story told in the capital today, after he has left the White House on March 4, has been determined.

After making an extensive trip abroad, during which he will divide his attention between studying university conditions in the European centers and in visiting big game with Emperor Wilson and other members of royalty, Mr. Roosevelt, it is said, will return to Washington, to be the head of a new national university to be founded by Andrew Carnegie.

The Laird of Skibo, according to the story, will endow this university with $25,000,000.
