

TELLS STORIES ABOUT OLD ROAD

Surviving Member of Board of Directors of Richmond &
New Castle Line.

LOCAL MEN INTERESTED.

WERE STOCKHOLDERS AND DI-RECTORS—ROAD NOW PART OF
PANHANDLE HAD INTERESTING
STRUGGLE FOR EXISTENCE.

A recent interview with Judge Martin L. Bundy, the "grand old man" of New Castle, recalls the fact that he was one of that sturdy band of Henry and Wayne county pioneers who built that section of the Richmond division of the Panhandle between Richmond and New Castle. Associated with him in this enterprise were three well known Richmond business men, the late John W. Grubbs, the late J. H. Scott and the late J. H. Hutton.

The Hon. Martin L. Bundy, New Castle's "grand old man", whose prominent part in the political and civil history of the state is well known, is the only surviving member of the first board of directors that built the Richmond & New Castle railroad, now a part of the great Pennsylvania system. The board as at first organized, not only built the Richmond & New Castle road, but also the extension for the two divisions Judge Bundy is now 91 years of age. In 1848, when he was treasurer of Henry county, there was not a railroad within thirty miles of New Castle. Richmond was the northern terminus of the C., H. & D., and with these advantages in a short time it stripped her sister town, New Castle. This condition aroused the progressive citizens of this latter place and a meeting was called to take steps toward securing a railroad west from Richmond. A charter was secured from the legislature and a company formed, consisting of George Gillespie and Mark C. Reaves of Hagerstown; John Powell, Jacob Elliott, Elijah Stout, Robert Boyd and Moses Robertson, of Henry county and J. H. Scott and J. H. Hutton of Wayne county. The company was authorized to build and operate the Richmond & New Castle railroad, with a capital stock of $250,000. In conjunction with these men were Joshua Holland, J. T. Elliott, M. L. Bundy and Colonel Miles Murphy, all of whom were well known early pioneers of Henry county and whose descendants are now among that city's prominent citizens. J. T. Elliott was president of the company. John W. Grubbs secretary and Mr. Bundy was general attorney. The board served during the work of construction and for some years afterward.

Books Are Opened.
Subscription books were immediately opened and the responses were very generous. The company was literally swamped with money before a spadeful of earth had been turned in construction. This condition of affairs unfortunately did not continue, as when the work was nearly completed the bonds of the company were disposed of with difficulty at fifty cents on the dollar. These financial difficulties caused the directors of the road to resort to many expedients, and well does Mr. Bundy remember what calls were made upon him during that trying period. Before the road was finished the directors had personally assumed an indebtedness of $500,000. The bonds of the company remained below par, and there was danger that every member of the company would be insolvent through obligations assumed. Colonel Miles Murphy, whose name is linked with the early history of Henry county was the only man on the board who might be termed as wealthy at that time, and with his wealth he was barely able to discharge the obligations assumed by him. All of the others were heavily involved, and but for the able management of Judge Bundy might have remained insolvent the balance of their lives. Judge Bundy considered himself too young a man to settle down into insolvency without a struggle, and, to free himself and associates, he set about to reorganize the company. The directors owed Richmond bankers, Morrison, Blanchard & Co., $80,000, and John Shillito and Alphonse Taft, of Cincinnati, large sums also. These were the heaviest creditors and Mr. Bundy succeeded in readjusting their claims by a partial payment in money and the balance in stock in the road. After much effort all claims were settled and the company again placed upon its feet.

Line Extended to Anderson.
When the line was completed into this city there was an immediate demand for its extension to Anderson to connect with a line that had been surveyed to Chicago. This project was taken up, and, when finished, gave a continuous line from Chicago to Cincinnati. The extension west from New Castle was built by the same directors which planned and constructed the Richmond & New Castle line. The entire line later became known as the Chicago & Great Eastern railway. When a big banquet was held in Chicago to celebrate the completion of the entire line, Judge Bundy was present and the spirits of all were dampened by news of the defeat of the Union army at Bull Run. At this banquet Lyman J. Gage, as Mr. Bundy remembers, made a speech in which he depicted the gloomy outlook for railroads in the United States. Development since have proven how far wrong he was in his conclusions, which did not even dream of the network of interurban electric railways enjoyed in this state today. Judge Bundy served with the railroad until its purchase by the Pennsylvania in 1878. He vividly recalls the early railroad building days and the difficulties which the early residents of New Castle encountered in their efforts to get railroad facilities. Nearly all those who had any connection with the Richmond & New Castle are long since dead and gone, but their descendants make up what is rapidly nearing the "pioneer" resident portion of the population of this part of the state.

JUBONIC PLAGUE SERIOUS DANGER

Despite Advanced Science, No
Remedy of Much Avail
Can Be Found.

INDIA'S LONG STRUGGLE.

DREAD DISEASE FELL IN TRACK
OF COMMERCE AND WAS CAR-RIED FROM EASTERN TO WEST-ERN CONTINENTS.

When the plague broke out in Venezuela this summer, notwithstanding President Castro's decrees to the contrary, it was a source of surprise to many people to learn that the bubonic plague still constitutes a serious danger for the world, the New York Independent says. We have heard much of how epidemic diseases called plagues devastated the civilized world every few hundred years during the last twenty-five centuries. The disease probably existed even before that time, but of its ravages we have no record. During the sixth century B. C., there seems to be good evidence for its having more than decimated the towns of Asia Minor. Five hundred years have not past since without a plague having occurred that spread throughout the commercial world of the time, for it is commerce rather than civilization that facilitates its spread.

Nearly always the disease has been what we now know as bubonic plague because of certain swellings of glands in the armpits, along the neck and in the groin, which occur in connection with it. The disease in the olden time was very fatal, carrying off, as a rule, nearly three out of four of those who came down with it, and in spite of all our improvements in therapeutics we have not succeeded in finding any remedy that is of much avail against it, since at the present time the death rate continues to be more than one out of two of those who are stricken by the disease.

Fifteen-Year Battle With Plague in India.

Ordinarily it might be presumed that there would be very little danger of such a disease spreading over the world in the modern time. Those who think so, however, have no proper idea of the present situation. It is nearly fifteen years now since true bubonic plague appeared in India, and began to count its victims first by the hundreds and then by the thousands. Since then, in spite of all that the British Government has tried to do, the disease has continued to rage among the teeming population of India and has carried away literally millions of the inhabitants.

It has been conquered in various places only to break out apparently with renewed vehemence somewhere else, and over and over again it has gone back over its tracks and has claimed new victims where it had once been eradicated. The native population have suffered much more than the whites, but the foreign element has had its share of victims and has suffered noteworthy losses in many years. There is even now, no serious hope of eradicating the disease in the near future, and though many vaccination methods and preventive measures have been tried, success so far has not waited on these efforts with any encouragement.

Invades Track of Commerce.
Almost necessarily the dread disease got into the track of commerce and was carried here and there. It reached Hong Kong and found its way into various portions of China. From Hong Kong it went to Manila for a time and claimed its victims there. It reached many parts of South Africa and only the most careful quarantine kept it from spreading farther. As was to be expected it reached Alexandria and for the last five years numerous cases of the disease have occurred and the end is not yet in sight. At the other end of the Mediterranean it got into Lisbon and claimed hundreds of victims and Lisbon does not feel herself free from danger of the disease even at the present time.

For a long time it was hoped that we would be spared visitation from it on the Western Continent. Two cases got as far as Quarantine, New York, some years ago, but the disease was rigidly excluded. In South America they were less fortunate or less exacting in their quarantine regulations. Cases began to occur at Brazil and for several years the disease has been known to exist at Rio Janeiro, at Bahia, at Santos and at Corumbá. It reached the other side of the South American continent and cases occurred at Arica, Iquique and Valparaiso, and, indeed quarantine authorities of the world are still guarding their people against these towns.

How to get Strong.
P. J. Daly, of 1247 W. Congress St., Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at A. G. Luken & Co. drug store, 50c.

The Sunrise Of Life.

Infants and children are constantly needing laxative. It is important to know what to give them. Their stomach and bowels are not strong enough for salts, purgative waters or cathartics, powders or tablets. Give them a mild, pleasant, gentle, laxative tonic like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which sells at the small sum of 50 cents or $1 at drug stores. It is a great remedy for you to have in the house for your children when they need it.
