THE DOLLAR MARK.

A Theory as to the Origin of This Monetary Symbol.

The origin of the dollar mark is one of the curios of our financial history. In the early days of the nation there was utter confusion in the circulating medium. Several of the colonies had authorized coins of different denominations, and, besides these, there were English pence, shillings, crowns and half crowns; French coins brought from Europe and Canada; Spanish coins of half a dozen denominations, especially reals and doubloons; Mexican coins; in Pennsylvania Dutch and German pence, and along the coast Portuguese and even Italian money was often seen, brought by seamen.

The United States mint was established in 1791, and the United States coinage became, of course, the legal tender. The mixed coinage, however, was not at once displaced, but continued in local use, so that it became necessary for merchants in keeping accounts to designate that a bill was to be paid in United States currency, or, if in miscellaneous coins, these were received at a discount. So before the sum total of the bills the merchant was accustomed to write the letters "U. S.," signifying United States money. In the hurry of writing the "S" was often written over the "U," then the connecting line at the bottom easily dropped off, and to the present day most people unconsciously commemorate the original practice by making the two down strokes first, then adding the "S."

LARGE ATTENDANCE MARKS SECOND DAY OF YEARLY MEETING

most proficient man that has ever occupied the presiding chair of the Meeting.

Mr. Nicholson entered upon his duties for the fifth consecutive year with an enthusiasm that would scarcely be equaled by men of half his years. For fifty years Mr. Nicholson has occupied some position within the dominion of the Friends church and the general expression heard is, that he has filled all these positions most satisfactorily. Anna M. Roberts of this city was again chosen as recording clerk and in this capacity she has demonstrated her proficiency. Prof. E. P. Trueblood and Edith Hunt were rechosen as reading clerks and no trouble is being experienced by those in the most remote part of the large auditorium to follow the proceedings.

Book and Tract Report.

At the afternoon session Wednesday, the first item of business in the regular routine was a report from the Book and Tract committee, presented by Timothy Nicholson. The report was an excellent one and showed that much religious literature had been distributed during the year in public places where it would accomplish the most good for the public. While there was shown to be an increase in the number of books issued by the Friends yet there were some discouraging features about the tract movement that occasioned some apprehension.

A stirring appeal was made by Frances Thomas of Spiceland, in behalf of this worthy cause. He related a number of personal experiences with tracts in which he had the assurance that many were induced to join the church because of this peculiar method of appeal. He stated that it had been his custom for many years to drop tracts in front of doors and in such a position that the party they were intended for would be sure to find them. Mr. Thomas does not believe that with the modern complexity of life, the tract movement must be forsaken, but he insists that it has its place today as well as in former years.

Report on Peace.

For many years the Friends society has been recognized as the chief incentive behind the movement for national and international peace. Consequently the report of the Peace association of Friends in America was hailed with marked interest. This is the 39th annual report of this phase of the Friends church work and is of wide interest. The report in part was as follows:

"During the fiscal year just ended our association has continued its work through the accustomed channels of distribution of literature and the circulation of the Messenger of Peace, 2,500 copies of which have been issued monthly during the year; much pains is taken to furnish, through its pages, a correct view of the advancing trend of the peace movement and to supply to busy readers a select fund of information, argument and suggestive exposition and reference which may facilitate arrangements for meetings, contests and all the varied lines of home work for peace; for if we are ever to have national and international peace, the principal and sentiment thereof must be nurtured in our home and social life. Since the beginning of the year the size of the Messenger of Peace has been slightly enlarged, giving something more than an additional page, while the price of the paper remains unchanged. This extra page is especially devoted to the children and the Messenger is thus rendered suitable for a Bible-school paper. Twenty-three thousand tracts have been printed and a large portion of them circulated, mostly by sale, in widely separated parts of the country. Others have been called for, but the limit of means to print them has put a limit upon our supply of much needed literature.

It was hoped that the impetus given the work by the action of the Five Years Meeting would lead to its better support and especially to the establishment of an efficient Lecture Bureau, as was at that time proposed. This project has not as yet been realized, but there is room for hope that it may be set in motion before the end of the year. Peace addresses have indeed been given in many parts and by several members of the association, but in order for the establishment of this very important branch of the work, there is need of a fund for the starting expenses of those who give much of their time in the lecture field.

The contests for prizes in our schools and colleges has evidently aroused a most encouraging interest among students and this plan of work, which may obtain among young people out of school as well as in, is commended to the Peace committee of the several Yearly Meetings.

The association has sent to congress on behalf of its widespread constituency, earnest protest against proposed increase in our naval forces and the extravagant expenditures of the people's money which this increase would necessitate.

In 7th month of the past year the treasurer of the association, Charles A. Francisco, a man highly esteemed in business and religious circles, and greatly beloved in his personal and social relations, was suddenly "called Home." His loss as a member of the executive committee has been keenly felt. His place as treasurer has been filled by the appointment to that office of Isaac Wilson, a member of East Main Street Friends Meeting, Richmond, Indiana.

Conclusion, let our attention be directed to the fact that the Friends church is a body of people who are Isaac Wilson, Treasurer, Richmond, Indiana.

Audited and found correct: Cyrus W. Hodgkin, Richmond, Indiana.

Isaac Wilson, of this city, a prominent young man of East Main Street Friends church, has been selected to fill the position of treasurer, which was left vacant by the death of Charles Francisco.

Daisy Barr Speaks on Peace.

Mrs. Daisy Barr had been selected by the committee to make the main address of the afternoon and her subject was "The Prince of Peace vs. The Prince of War." Mrs. Barr is undoubtedly one of the most eloquent women preachers in the country and for one half hour she held the large audience under the spell of her marvelous oratory. She first disclosed an array of statistics to prove the enormous cost of maintaining a standing army and an up-to-date navy. She reviewed the enormous appropriations that have been made by congress for the maintenance of pomp and display. According to Mrs. Barr the United States is today spending one half million dollars per day as interest on her war debt. From a strictly commercial standpoint there is a most expensive luxury. Mrs. Barr then showed the economic waste that comes from war equipment and made the startling disclosure that the United States is today spending 67 per cent of its income for military purposes. The third point in the address was made to show the wickedness of war. Mrs. Barr says that there is nothing in connection with our national institutions that demoralizes men as quickly as does the army. To substantiate this assertion she gave many personal observations as seen at Ft. Harrison at Indianapolis and other places in her travels. It is the belief of Mrs. Barr that war runs in direct divergence to Christian principles and that we can not be a Christian nation in the full meaning of the term, until the military spirit is eradicated. Mrs. Barr in a most touching way declared that she would rather see her little boy in his casket laid away than to have him grow up to be a soldier.

The solution of the question in the estimation of Mrs. Barr depends on the individual. All war and strife must first be dispelled from the individual hearts of the Quakers before they can hope to be strong advocates for national and international peace. Following this address Allen Jay took a collection for the benefit of this movement. The collection amounted to $77.22. Timothy Nicholson then spoke a few words noting the absence of Prof. Cyrus Hodgkin one of the most ardent advocates of peace. Mr. Nicholson stated that it was feared that Prof. Hodgkin would never recover from his present illness and the reference to this noble educator, prompted many throughout the audience to tears. George W. Hartly of Fountain City recommended that the clerks be instructed to send to Prof. Hodgkin an expression of sympathy from the Yearly Meeting and wishing him recovery, if it be divine will. A tribute of memory was also expressed for Daniel Dill at one time the leader in the peace movement. Cyrus W. Harvey, a visiting delegate from Kansas was asked to tell why he was in the war and he occasioned some merriment when he stated that he guessed it was because he had more patriotism than religion then. James B. Unthank, president of the Peace association, concluded the program for the afternoon by giving a short, but interesting address on the work of the organization and some of its needs. Wednesday evening the services were in charge of Pand W. Keates, pastor of the Mid-Saturday Street Friends church, fresh southerly. The music was furnished by the choir.
