

POLITICAL STORM FOR OLD NEW YORK

Big Speakers of Both Parties
To Complete Campaign
There.

ALL READY FOR ACTION.

ONE OF MOST REMARKABLE DEMONSTRATIONS EVER MADE IN A POLITICAL WAY WILL RESULT FROM PLANS.

New York, Oct. 10.—New York City is to be the storm center of the great political battle this month. Judge Taft, Mr. Bryan, Governor Hughes and Mr. Chanler are all going to be here during the last few days of October, and the campaign managers of both parties are planning to make it one of the most remarkable demonstrations in political history.

That this peculiar situation was approaching was indicated when the Republican State Committee announced the itinerary of Mr. Taft, Governor Hughes and Mr. Sherman in New York state. The Republican candidates will be here on October 28 and will speak at at least two different places in the city. Mr. Chanler will also be here on that day to make a roundup in the Bronx. Mr. Bryan will be in Brooklyn on October 26 and in Manhattan on October 27. Mr. Taft will arrive in New York on the morning of October 26. A dinner will be given him that night by Chairman Woodruff at the Montauk Club, in Brooklyn, after which Mr. Taft will speak three times in that borough. On October 27 he will begin a tour of the state.

Governor Hughes will arrive in New York City on the morning of October 12 and will register.

Sherman Late in the Month.

Vice President Fairbanks has been assigned to New York state for a few days. The attitude toward Governor Hughes at Republican state headquarters has undergone a notable change in the last few days, and, whereas, he was to be knifed throughout the state according to the common understanding of a week ago, the machine leaders are all storing away their weapons and getting ready to work hard for the Governor's re-election.

THE PLOWING SEASON

Ancient Superstitions Surrounding Tillers of Soil.

SACRIFICES TO THE GODS.

The formal inauguration of the plowing season is very ancient and still is observed in some parts of the world.

Among the Romans by the institution of various religious festivals connected with agriculture the seasons came to be regarded with a sort of sacred reverence. Before the old Roman put the plow into the ground he went to the temple of the goddess of earth, Tellus, one of whose priests performed certain propitiatory rites. Virgil in his "Georgics" advises the Roman husbandman to observe the signs on heaven according to the crop he desires to produce. The time to plow for flax, barley and the sacred poppy was when "balance has equalized the hours of day and sleep and halves the world exactly between light and shade. When Taurus ushers in the year with his gilded horns and Sirius sits facing the threatening bull is time for beans. For wheat and spelt the Pleiades should hide themselves from your eyes with the dawn. Many have begun before Maria sets, but the desired crop has baffled them with empty ears." But first of all the poet admonishes the farmer to "honor the gods and offer sacrifices to Ceres."

In India there are certain days when it is unlawful to plow. Mother Earth is supposed to sleep six days in every month, and on such days she refuses to be disturbed in her slumber.

In northwest India the cultivator employs a pundit to select an auspicious time for the commencement of plowing. Great secrecy is observed. In some places the time selected is in the night; in others daybreak is the customary time.

The pundit goes to a field, taking a brass drinking vessel and a branch of the sacred mango tree, which is efficacious in frightening away evil spirits that may haunt the field. Prithivi, the broad world, and Seshha Naga, the great snakes which support the world, are supposed to be propitiated and reconciled by this ceremony. The pundit satisfies himself as to the direction in which the great snake is lying, for it occasionally moves about a little to ease itself of the great burden of the broad world which it carries. The pundit then marks off an imaginary line. Five (a lucky number) clods of earth are thrown up, and water is sprinkled in the trench five times with the sacred mango bush to insure productivity. Caution must be exercised lest the charm be broken and prospective fortune imperiled. The farmer must remain secluded during the following day; no salt must be eaten, no money, grain or fire given away.

Among the Kurnas before plowing the farmer makes a burnt offering of butter and molasses in his own field and again at the village shrine.

The Chinese begin plowing on the first day of their solar year. Anciently the rites which were celebrated by the Chinese at plowing time were elaborate, but rationalistic sovereigns eliminated one expensive religious rite after another until nothing was left except the imperial act of homage to heaven and earth and agriculture in the ceremonial plowing.

The Siamese observe a rite called Raakua about the middle of May, which is preliminary to the plowing season, and it is not proper for any one to plow until the ceremony is over. The court astrologers determine the time for the day fixed by the minister of agriculture, who is always a prince or nobleman of high rank, goes with a procession to a piece of ground some distance from the capital. Where the festivities are to take place a new plow, to which a pair of buffaloes are yoked, is in readiness, decorated with flowers and leaves.

The minister guides the plow over the field, closely watched by the spectators, who are especially interested in the length and folds of the silk of his lower garments, because the prosperity of the season and its characteristics, wet or dry, are to be predicted from these as he follows the plow. If the robe rises from his knee there will be disastrous rains. If it falls below his ankles there will be a drought. If the folds reach midway between knee and ankle the season will be prosperous.

After a proper number of furrows have been turned old women strew grain of different kinds in them and bulls are released from the yoke and allowed to feast upon the seeds. The grain which the animals eat most freely will be scarce next harvest, and that which they refuse to take will be abundant.

In Yorkshire it was considered unwise to disturb the earth with plow or spade on Good Friday.—Exchange.

A Shipwreck.

Muggins, gazing intently at a dead dog, in a resigned tone at last said: "Here is another shipwreck."

"Shipwreck! Where?" blurted out Juggins.

"Where, my dear friend?" quoted M.

"There is a bark lost forever."

Juggins growled and passed on.—London Fun.

It is impossible for a man attempting many things to do all things well.—Xenophon.

A Mighty Eruption.

It has been calculated that the quantity of solid matter ejected by the great eruption of Krakatoa, in the strait of Sunda, in August, 1883, was 4.4 cubic miles. To give some idea of the enormous volume this represents we may take the following illustration: The largest of the pyramids of Egypt, known as the Great Pyramid, contains about 82,000,000 cubic feet of masonry. It would therefore take about 7,300 of such structures to equal in bulk the matter that was thrown out by this eruption.—New York American.

Warming a Serpent.

"Down in Bermuda," said a Cincinnati, "I heard Mark Twain make a speech about snakes to a group of little girls."

"The speech was great. The only trouble was that the little girls could not appreciate it. It flew over their heads."

"I remember the humorist's conclusion."

"Never warm a serpent in your bosom," he wound up. "It is far easier to warm it by placing it under the pillow of an intimate friend."

How Sea Lions Capture Gulls.

The sea lion displays no little skill and cunning in capturing gulls. When in pursuit the sea lion dives deeply under water and swims some distance from where it disappeared; then, rising cautiously, it exposes the tip of its nose along the surface, at the same time giving it a rotary motion. The ungainly bird near by alights to catch the object, while the sea lion at the same moment settles beneath the waves and at one bound, with extended jaws, seizes its screaming prey and instantly devours it.

St. George and the Dragon.

According to Percy, St. George, the son of Lord Albert of Coventry, after fighting against the Saracens went to Syrene, a city of Libya, where there was a stagnant lake infested by a monster dragon "whose hide no spear could pierce." Every day a virgin was sacrificed to it, and at length it came to the lot of the king's daughter to become the victim. She was tied to the stake and left to be devoured when St. George came up and vowed to take her cause in hand. On came the dragon, when the saint, thrusting his lance into its mouth, killed it at once.
