articles of incorporation providing for the selection of its board of trustees, its sole governing body, from reputable citizens of said city, who are interested in hospital work and without any reference to any political or sectarian influence and for the desired purpose of keeping the government and management of such hospital always in the hands of citizens interested in its work and clear and free from political or sectarian influence whatsoever.

"The objects of the association are to manage, maintain and operate such hospital and benevolence devoting all its resources to such purposes without any compensation to its trustees or any profit to them or any of them. The said hospital and all of its property is the property of the people of the city of Richmond for whose benefit all funds for its benefit were contributed. The hospital is designed primarily for the people of Richmond to whom it belongs. Its object and purpose, however, is to extend its beneficial work to the citizens of Wayne county and any and all others so far as its facilities and ability will permit.

"The trustees of said hospital act as trustees, administering a trust for the benefit of the people of Richmond and without any beneficial interest in the hospital or its property other than that in common with all other citizens of the city. The corporation in its name as such will hold all its property and its trustees will have no power to dispose of its property so as to defeat the purpose of the trust they administered. The declaration of the articles of incorporation that it will have and assume all rights, powers and privileges given to corporations by the common law will be subject to the above."

MONUMENT TO BENJ. HARRISON UNVEILED

among its "few immortal names."

Such was Benjamin Harrison, whose works do follow him.

Let us then proceed to presentation of the facts, not all, indeed, but enough surely to prove that he was a constructive statesman of the first class, and the measures he advocated and enforced have now continuing power, and forever hereafter must beneficially affect our country's career.

The speaker discussed the steps toward the advancement of international arbitration and the beginning of the new navy of the United States under the Harrison administration. It was said the nation was fortunately at peace during the administration, but there was more than one occasion when there was possibility of conflict. The dispute with Great Britain as to the right to protect American seals in Behring Sea was reviewed. Attention was called to the "Valparaiso incident" in which sailors of the Baltimore were assaulted and an apology was demanded by the United States. "Peace was secured with honor." The subjects of postal affairs and the merchant marine were taken up by Mr. Noble. Credit was given the administration for the extension of the postal system. The late president was spoken of as a constitutional lawyer, such a lawyer largely, because, with all his learning and acumen he was a servitor of the law, proud on his profession, but prouder still of the judiciary whose goodness and greatness he knew, and the individuals composing which he ever respected. National support of education, reservation of forests, reservation of reservoir sites, and the subject of homestead claims were among the subjects discussed with favor to the administration. Attention was paid to other administrative measures and the subject of pensions.

In concluding, the speaker said: "It was he (Harrison) who helped to inaugurate the movement for Indiana's Soldiers' and Sailors' monument, and as president he was at the laying of its corner stone, which he deemed 'a twin expression of that one great sentiment which had already set up the statute of this state's great war governor' (Morton).

We may well rejoice that there is now added to these other two this beautiful classic and worthy memorial before us. By one we recall the sleepless watchfulness of that governor who raised to the struggle for the Union, and who appeared upon field after field to relieve the suffering at each succeeding battle, and to encourage the survivors to renewed endeavor in battles yet to come. By the other we are reminded of the heroic sacrifices made by Indiana's soldiers and sailors, with their other Union comrades, ending only with their lives given for their country. And by this last one here unveiled, we express our love and reverence for him who, with all his other great services, not only offered all he was and all he cherished upon the field, but who kept his pledge and that of his country 'to care for him who had borne the battle and for his widow and orphans.'

Let us, then, this day here recognize in him our loyal fellow citizen; let us salute with respect the soldier who led his regiment and his brigade without fear and to victory; let us look up with admiration to the able and patriotic statesman; let us transmit to all the future the testimony of a now reunited people, that in his day and generation, Benjamin Harrison was acknowledged to be among the best of our presidents, and among the foremost of Americans; and let us commit his memory to the gratitude of the nation, the welfare of which he had constantly at heart, and sought, by all his talents, to preserve in unity, to advance in justice and to cause to endure forever for the good of all hu-

the fact that he was a defaulter was known to only a few people. When the public announcement of his default was made in May, 1906, following the action of the federal grand jury in returning an indictment against him, Mr. DuHadway left for parts unknown and since that time up to his death he was a fugitive. He was fifty-two years of age.

Cheering Indiana News.

These men brought cheering news from Indiana to National Chairman Hitchcock. They told him that Indiana is sure for Taft by a big plurality, their figures ranging all the way from 30,000 to 75,000. None of them placed it below 30,000. But they believe Watson's plurality will not be as large as Taft's, although they are confident of his election also.

But the state committee has been hard up throughout the campaign and the plea for money from the national committee was based on the fact that the final work of a campaign is expensive and the state committee did not have money with which to complete the work.

Hemenway Optimistic.

"Things are looking better for the republicans in Indiana every minute," said Senator Hemenway at the Auditorium Annex, yesterday. "Excellent reports are coming in every day from all over the state."

In fact, the Indiana republican leaders were in a happy frame of mind while here for they believe the Indiana battle is won.
