ROOSEVELTISM

ENDORSED BY THE ELECTION

from Washington as one likely to be influential with the new administration. The suggestion is probably warranted, but it will not be as a seeker for office that Hammond will aid the next president. He wants no official recognition of his services, but will be content with the fact that he did contribute mightily to Taft's success. It would be fortunate for the country if more of the men who devoted their energies to the election of the republican candidate had been as disinterested.

Bryan Eliminated.

That Bryan has been eliminated as a presidential possibility hereafter by the election, all the democrats concede and not a few of them with manifest rejoicing. He was not supported by the full democratic strength in a number of states.

That he would not be indicated even in the convention. When the delegations from New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Connecticut and Georgia refused to utter a single word in the demonstration which attended his nomination, it was pretty sure that he would lose in those states.

NEW INDIANA

STATE OFFICERS
STILL IN DOUBT

tical news of the week was the dispatch from Columbia City that Thomas R. Marshall is returning to the Indiana campaign. He is returning to the Indiana campaign. He is returning to the Indiana campaign. He is returning to the Indiana campaign.

But during the campaign several hundred letters were received at his law office in Columbia City containing sums of money for his campaign fund. He did not touch a cent of it, and this week, after the election was over and he was returned a winner, he began the task of sending back to the contributors the sums they had sent in. The largest individual contribution was $500, but there were several of $100 each and scores of $50, $25 and $10. He expected to have every cent of it returned to the senders by today.

Marshall said he appreciated the contributions but that he could not and would not accept them. When Officers Take Place. Inasmuch as Thomas R. Marshall, the democratic governor, will have many appointments to make, inquiry has arisen as to just when the present terms of some of the appointive officers will expire. The term of Union B. Hunt, republican member of the railroad commission, will not expire until September 1, 1912, and the term of Henry M. Dowling, the other republican member, will expire May 1, 1911. The term of William J. Wood, the democratic member, will end May 1, 1909. It is thus evident that the political complexion of this board cannot be changed under ordinary circumstances until May 1, 1911, when the term of Mr. Dowling expires.

The political complexion of the state tax board, as far as the appointive power of the governor is concerned, cannot be changed until April 4, 1911, when the term of John McCordie, republican member, will expire. The term of Fred L. Gemmer, recently appointed, will not end for four years. The term of Parks Martin, democratic member, will expire May 1, 1909. Terms of other appointive officers will expire at the following dates: Sid Conger, oil inspector, January 1, 1910; Samuel Shutt, state house engineer, April 15, 1909; Otway Baker, state house custodian, April 15, 1909; Oran Perry, adjutant-general, December 11, 1909; George W. Powell, quartermaster-general, December 11, 1909; William E. Blakely, factory inspector, July 1, 1911; Will Freeman, secretary of the state board of forestry, May 18, 1909; B. W. Douglass, state entomologist, June 11, 1911; A. W. Bitting, state veterinarian, March 23, 1909; Z. T. Sweeney, commissioner of fisheries and game, April 4, 1911; George W. Purcell and Charles F. Woerner, labor commissioners, May 1, 1911. The terms of the members of the state board of forestry will expire May 18, 1909, at the same time the term of the secretary ends.

Chicago, Nov. 7.—Work began upon Chicago's new $2,000,000 railway station the next day after the Northwestern road let the contract. Trainloads of material made their appearance by mag. It is expected that by January 1910 trains will run into the new station which will be big enough to accommodate 250,000 people a day, the second largest in the United States. The train shed is to cover 6 acres, the basement of the main building over two acres; 10 acres of floor space are to be provided for the brick and steel buildings covering four blocks of ground has already meant the expense of millions of dollars. In planning it the architects embodied so many features unique in railway stations that it will bear little resemblance to the primitive frame "depot" of old scarred benches, cracked cannon stove and dingy wall.

There will be ticket offices and waiting rooms, but the waiting rooms will include rest rooms, tea rooms and emergency rooms and baths for women, and barber shops and baths for men, and dining rooms. Instead of splintered plank floors, such as were laid in Chicago's pioneer depot, all floors will be of marble, and the walls will be of marble all around a main waiting room 100 by 200 feet and 80 feet high. The train shed is built for the travel of the future, being 318 feet long with sixteen tracks and big enough for the handling of 1,500 trains daily—as many trains as arrive and depart now at Chicago's six railway stations—during the summer, 1,584, there being daily 502 from the Illinois Central station, 417 from the Northwestern, 275 from the Union, 233 from the LaSalle street, 115 from the Polk street and 42 from the Grand Central.

The man who invented the picture post card died recently in Germany. His name—it happens to be Schwartz—will be unknown to all but a small fraction of the people who send these cards daily. No one cares who started the printing of illustrated cards ready for mailing, yet millions of them are in transit daily. They are a valuable medium of communication. Indeed they may be said to be a powerful stimulation to correspondence, says the Washington Star.

A traveler reaches a new town to stop for the night and at the newsstand or cigar stand or the soda fountain, finds a collection of local cards. They are cheap and in five minutes as many of them can be addressed, stamped and mailed, sending to five friends information of location and words of greeting. The receipt of a card from a tourist is gratifying. It is impossible to measure the educational effect of the picture postals. They have given to people in all corners of the world glimpses of foreign parts which they never hoped to see. They have stimulated interest in geography and history and have in many cases evoked a desire to travel. A kept post card album gives a child a distinct interest in the regions which lie beyond the personal horizon.

It was inevitable that the post card should cause a flooding of the mails. Postal authorities have been wailed the practice, but the complaints have fallen on deaf ears. The postal service is established for the precise purpose which the picture post card fulfills so effectively, namely the prompt transmission of intelligence. Herr Schwartz may not be honored with a monument contributed by the employees of the post offices of the world, but he deserves to be set down in the records of this wonderful age as the inventor of one of the most popular and useful methods of communication ever devised. He truly helped to girdle the earth.

Denver, Col., Nov. 7.—Walked 15,000 miles in two years, eight and one-half months, gained forty-five pounds, wore out twenty-five pairs of shoes and visited twelve countries. This is the record of Joe Mikulec, of Croatia, who is in Kansas City. Mikulec started February 5, 1906, to walk 25,000 miles in five years. If he succeeds the editor of the Matica, a weekly publication, is to pay him 25,000 crowns, equivalent to $5,000 in United States money. Mikulec is now about 840 miles ahead of his schedule and expects to cover easily the required distance necessary to win the wager. He has visited France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, Brazil, Portugal, Spain, Paraguay, Uruguay, Argentine Republic, Ecuador and America. He will leave Denver for San Francisco, walking through Ogden, Salt Lake City and the principle cities on the northern route to the coast. He intends to work his passage from San Francisco to Sydney, Australia. He will tour that country.

No mileage is allowed for distance covered on the water. A large book
