

SACRED CONCERTS BY ELLEY BAND

Famous Musical Organization
Will Appear Twice
Today.

ONE CONCERT SATURDAY.

NO MATINEE BECAUSE OF SMALL
CROWD—ORGANIZATION ONE OF FINEST EVER VISITING RICHMOND.

"It's kind of hard talking to people who are scattered about the building in bunches like islands in the Pacific Ocean, but I want to say that I am glad the few of you who are here came," laughingly remarked Manager Channing Elley, of the famous Elley Band last evening at the coliseum. He also stated that he was much gratified yesterday afternoon when, after he had dismissed an audience of thirty-two men, women and children because his musical organization was not used to playing to such sized crowds, informed that fifteen hundred people had witnessed a wrestling match at the coliseum Wednesday night. "That information more than ever made me wish that my tendencies ran more to music than to wrestling," he said, and the "select few" laughed heartily with him.

Richmond people will have another opportunity of seeing the great Elley band, which is without doubt the finest musical organization that has visited this city in several years, for Mr. Elley has arranged to give two sacred concerts today for the benefit of the Penny club, one this afternoon at 8 o'clock and one this evening at 8 o'clock. The programs for these two concerts include splendid selections of sacred and classical music and the music lovers of this city have treats in store for them.

"I have arranged to give the concert Sunday evening at 9 o'clock and that those people who attend church services may attend the concert after church," said Mr. Elley. "You may think it odd that I expect church people to attend the concert—but I do. I hold that music played as the Lord intended it should be played, is as good a religion as one may find."

Richmond has long had the reputation of being the musical and art center of Indiana, but this reputation received a black eye yesterday as the result of the cold reception tendered to one of the best known musical organizations in the country. The program rendered last evening could not have been approved upon, and the small crowd present was widely enthusiastic. Taddeo Di Girolamo, the director, has no superior and few equals in this country. The programs for today follow:

The Magazine club will meet in the afternoon.

Tuesday—A card party will be given at the Country club house. Miss Georgia Cole will be hostess for the function.

Wednesday—The Good Cheer club will meet in the afternoon.

The fortnightly meeting of the Penny club will be held.

The women of the United Brethren church will hold an all day market at the corner of Eighth and Main streets.

Thursday—The members of the Country club will give a subscription dance in the Pythian Temple.

The wedding of Mr. Frank Burg and Miss Bertha Davenport, will take place in the evening at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. and Mrs. Elwood Davenport.

The marriage of Miss Virginia Moser and Mr. Toney Schmidt will take place in the evening.

Friday—Mrs. Kolp will give her annual Thanksgiving dance in the Pythian temple.

The Tourist club will meet, the hostess to be announced later.

Miss Elizabeth Rankin entertained a number of guests recently at her home, 915 North Sixteenth street. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns, palms and yellow and white chrysanthemums. Music, games and other social diversions were features of the evening's amusements. A dainty luncheon in several courses was served. The color scheme, yellow and white was carried out in all the appointments. The invited guests were Professor and Mrs. T. A. Mott, Mr. and Mrs. Sullinger, Mr. and Mrs. Gartwarte, Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey, Miss Huldah Kenley, Mrs. Elizabeth Close, Mrs. Kenley, Miss Amy Harmed, Miss Bessie Burr, Miss Kate Morgan, Miss Moorman, Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Isadore Wilson of Cambridge City, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Jones, Dr. Carter, Professor and Mrs. Wiesler, Professor Harris, Miss Edna Mariatt and Miss Maude Toms.

The masquerade dance to be given Friday evening by Mrs. Charles Kolp in the Pythian temple, will be among the notable social events of the week. A number of drills will be a feature of the evening's amusements. Piano and drums will furnish the music.

Miss Viola Stein has gone to Bath, Indiana for a week's stay with friends. She will attend several social affairs while at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willis of Goodwin, Ind., are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lyons over Sunday.

Miss Hazel Brooks of Fountain City is spending a few days in this city.

Very few social events have taken place during the past week and it seems as if the hostesses must be busy preparing for the Thanksgiving festivities, which are so near at hand.

An important social event for the past week was the wedding of Mr. John Collins and Miss Mary Harrington which was celebrated Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock in the St. Mary's church.

Several Richmond people have received invitations for a reception to be given Wednesday afternoon and evening, November 25, in Indianapolis, by the Rev. and Mrs. George Huntington.

The Daughters of Indiana in New York, of which Miss Mary Garrett Hay is president, held a program meeting on Monday afternoon at the Hotel Astor. "News from Indiana Colleges was the topic for the day and the following speakers, with only one exception were graduates of the state colleges: Miss Martha Tarbell, Mr. Guy Morrison Walker, Mr. James Foggatt and Mr. Craig Kightlinger, who is not a graduate of DePauw, but very much interested in the welfare of the college as his grandfather was mayor of the city when DePauw was founded.

The remainder of the program was as follows:

Songs:
(a) Whispering.....
(b) Mother O'Mine.....
Mr. William Rogers Wheeler
"Y. M. C. A. in Colleges".....
Mrs. Ralph Swynn
"Co-education in the Middle West".....
Mr. Guy Morrison Walker

Songs:
(a) The Summer Fields..... Brahms
(b) Love is Forever..... Brahms
(c) When the Roses Bloom..... Reichardt
Miss Marie Kenney, of Brooklyn

To entertain with an informal meal is one of the most delightful forms of hospitality and one from which no one is debarred. But if it is to be successful, you must suit your table to your guests' tastes. It really is not so hard to do after you once "get it going" and you will find it simplifies matters in the end, for if you know how a certain guest enjoys a special dessert you do not have to think any further about it. If you have a bad memory keep a little list of your friends favorite dishes in the back of your cook book.

CLUB NOTES

The most important event, socially for the week, is the subscription dance to be given Thursday evening, November twenty-sixth by the present social committee of the Country club. Mrs. Harry Jay, with a number of assistants, has charge of the affair. The hall will be beautifully decorated for the occasion. An out of town orchestra is expected to furnish the dance music. All the members with a number of invited guests, have received invitations.

The program for a meeting of the Tourist club Friday evening, November twenty-seventh, as announced by the year book, is as follows:
"Santa Croce"..... Mrs. Jennie Yaryan
Conversation—The Juvenile Offender
Mr. Robert L. Kelly, Mr. Charles S. Bond.

The host and hostess for the meeting will be announced later.

The little people of the city, who are members of Mrs. Kolp's afternoon dancing class met yesterday afternoon in the Odd Fellows' hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Holton entertained the members of the "Buzers" whist club last evening at their home on North D street. The game was played at several tables. Prizes were awarded. At the conclusion of the evening's festivities a dainty luncheon was served by the hostess.

The Ladies' Aid society of the First Presbyterian church, is making extensive preparations for a bazaar to be given Friday afternoon and evening of December eleventh. A musical program will be a feature, in the evening. The booths will be attractively decorated in harmony with the various wares which will be on sale at the same.

The Dorcas society will meet Monday afternoon with Miss Alice Knollenberg at her home on South Fourth street.

MUSIC

The following article written by Prof. Justin Leroy Harris, will be of interest to local musicians.

Simple fact, mere knowledge is a body without a soul; interesting enough from some points of view, but from the standpoint of real use and value almost nil. There is a meaning for every fact, a reason why it exists, and that might be called the soul of the fact. It belongs to the imagination, the poetic or possibly the moral sense to discern this attribute, and when it is discerned the mind's horizons stretch into limitless space.

It is the ability to see beyond the physical fact, its meaning, its purpose, its part in the harmony of all things that is the finest fortune that can

Madame Spectator's Observations

BY CATHERINE ALLMAN.

The courtship of Miss Katherine Elkins and the Duke of the Abruzzi has attracted a great deal of attention; more notoriety, in fact, than the family pines for. It has been hinted that Pater Elkins looks askance at this foreign alliance, that, in fact, it is only because he is an indulgent and henpecked husband and father he has been brought to sanction the match.

No doubt he takes a leaf out of the experiences of former brilliant international matches that have snuffed out only after singing cruelly the wings of our dear little American butterflies.

While abroad Miss Elkins was prey to many fortune hunters, imperious nobles with titles for sale. She was fairly besieged by one insignificant French count who followed her about refusing to be shaken off. Miss Elkins finally decided to put an end to the annoyance and suggested that he first run across the pond and "ask papa."

The count, spry as a cock-sparrow, took the next steamer for America and arrived in this country with seventeen trunks. He invaded the Elkins domain and requested an interview with the senator from West Virginia. He got it. The ardent suitor found himself facing a man as hard as flint; enough to make the dapper little Frenchman quail in his dainty boots, but he plunged volubly in.

"M. Elkins, I, ze Count de —, come to seek ze hand off your loofee daughter, Mlle. Elkins. I, ze Count de —, M. Elkins, have ze nobility, ze haute mode, ze titles, Monsieur, estates; cumber-red it true, but estates. I see Mamselle. I adore. I give them all, nobility, titles, estates, all— he made a grandiloquent gesture, "for ze exquisite hand of ze most char-ming lady. A-h-h!"

Senator Elkins lacks the polish of a French noble. He glared at this impertinent little cock-sparrow, then showed his teeth ominously.

"You are too generous, M. Count de Frenchy," he snapped. "My daughter has informed me of your persistent annoyance. Now, I refuse you Miss Elkins' exquisite hand, as you put it, but I cordially promise you her father's uncultured boot if I find you prowling around her again. Good day."

What subtle change has crept over the spirit of our fair Americans that come to a man. It opens out to him the beauty and wisdom of all things, and with the thoughts thereby inspired, lifts his life to the appreciation and practice of truth. There is a divine expression in everything from a golden dawn to a suicide, but a man must open his heart to see it, and to see how every discordant note chords with the music of the spheres.

This is the basic idea of education. It is the explanation of true art. We have heard pianists, old in the practice of it and full of the knowledge of the science of it, who could play like a whirlwind and never miss a note, or drag, or speed ahead, but their music was not more inspiring than the clanging of a tin pan. We have heard violinists and even a contra-bassist who were technically perfect, and they sawed, and sawed—ripping out notes like a planing mill. But their music lacked soul. The player never saw a star, or a flower, or a sailing cloud; never felt the sigh of the west wind, or the touch of a loving hand; never heard the carol of a bird, or the rippling of sweet waters.

Jeanette Durno is not a pianist—she is an artist. Bruno Steindel, Hugo Kortschak, Hans Schroeder and Glenn Dillard, Gunn are artists. They put a body of warm flesh and blood on every skeleton note. One can shut his eyes and imagine he is keeping company with a lot of happy spirits. That is the office of art—to raise the thoughts to higher contemplation. It is the meaning of all truth. The Artist-Recital Series is not an entertainment course. It is a recognition of that element in the civic body which has made Richmond known as a center for culture. It has for its supporters those who are continuously in the serious pursuit of truth and beauty.

Several important musicale events were held during the past week.

Wednesday morning the Music Study club met in the Starr Piano parlors. The program for the occasion was exceptionally good. In the evening of the same day the Ceramic league exhibit was opened with an informal reception given under the auspices of Prof. William Earhart. Fr evening a musicale was given at the First M. E. church by Miss Bessie E. of Centerville.

Miss Maude Zimmerma ho is attending the Conservatory music in Chicago, is studying the pipe organ. Miss Zimmerman is one of the best known musicians of this city. Last season she had a large class of piano pupils.

A music program will be given this evening by the young people of the United Brethren church. The affair will begin promptly at seven-thirty o'clock. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Creator, who has decided to retire from the business of leading a band, will make one more tour of this country, under the management of Howard Tew, who has directed the past seven tours of the Italian band master.

Mrs. Corinne Rider-Kelsey will make her New York reappearance with the New York Philharmonic orchestra November twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth. This will be her second appearance with New York's oldest and most distinguished musical society within two years, an honor which few American sopranos have been able to share.

Miss Taft, "and my father is a Unitarian, but," she added with a roguish gleam in her eyes, "I don't believe it works at all in me."

The defect in the story is that it most certainly isn't true, as it has been officially announced that Mrs. Taft is not a member of the Catholic church. It seems a shame, though, to spoil so good a story for so unimportant a reason.

BOW TO SOCIETY IN DECEMBER

Debut Ball for Miss Ethel Roosevelt in Washington During Holidays.

IS AN INTERESTING FIGURE.

GLIMPSE AT CHARACTER OF THE GIRL—GUEST LIST INCLUDES HUNDREDS OF CAPITAL'S YOUNGER SET.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Undoubtedly the most interesting figure in the social life of the national capital this season is Miss Ethel Carow Roosevelt, second daughter of the president. Although just past her seventeenth birthday and in many ways still having the naivete of a genuine girl, Miss Roosevelt will make her bow to society, a thoroughly finished and attractive bud at a debut ball to be given at the white house during the Christmas holidays.

While the formal announcement at the white house in October that Mrs. Roosevelt is to give a small dance on Monday evening, December 28, for Miss Roosevelt, did not contain the information that this is to be the debut ball of the president's daughter, yet society is accepting this date as the probable time. An affair of this character at the executive mansion does not mean entirely what the term "small dance" ordinarily implies. The guest list includes several hundred, and it is well understood that Miss Roosevelt will have the entire younger set of Washington, with a number of out of town visitors from New York and other cities. The ball will be given in the east room. The Marine Band orchestra will furnish the music. The event will be followed by a series of smart functions, dinners, other dances, luncheons and everything of the kind that contributes to the happiness of the debutante's first season.

Washington will long remember the brilliant social achievements of Miss Alice Roosevelt, beginning with her debut during the first term of her father's administration, and reaching the climax with her marriage to Mr. Nicholas Longworth—an event of international interest. Few, if any, of the daughters of our presidents have enjoyed a social career of such prominence and brilliancy. Indeed, it may be presumed that Mrs. Longworth will hold a place in the history of the social life of the executive mansion which has been so far without precedent.

Of course Miss Roosevelt will be by no means a total stranger to the social world. For the last two years she has been present at many of the state receptions in the white house, and she was conspicuous as one of attractive young girls at the wedding of her older half sister, Mrs. Longworth. Yet the contrast between Miss Ethel and Mrs. Longworth is most striking, even to the cursory observer. Modest and retiring to the verge of bashfulness, of the simplest tastes, and enjoying keenly the most innocent pastimes—a really "old-fashioned girl" in the good sense—Miss Roosevelt has as yet developed no real penchant for the white light of social prominence. Like all young women, though, who are to experience their first delights and conquests of their initial season, she is anticipating with pleasurable excitement the events of the coming months at the white house. Becoming at once, as she will, a prominent and interesting figure in the eyes of the American public in general she is regarded without doubt as the most charming recent acquisition to Washington's younger set for her sweet personality.

Miss Roosevelt holds the unique distinction of having spent more years in the white house than any young person before her. Coming to Washington as a young girl she has grown to womanhood in these historic surroundings of the white and the national capital. Here she has spent her school days, having had five years at the National Cathedral for Girls, where she was a recognized leader, in her junior year especially, and an officer in her class. During the past year she has continued her studies with private tutors at the white house. And here it is proper to observe how strongly the artistic sense of Miss Roosevelt is developed. Rarely poetic and strongly imaginative, she is deeply moved by the beautiful in arts of which she is a sincere follower.

In 1870 the population of Manitoba was 17,000, today it is 400,000.
