Druggists Find Eczema Cure.

The local druggist is naturally slow to recommend a remedy for any disease; he will make such recommendation as a rule, only after he has been thoroughly convinced; he is not looking merely for one sale but must have permanently the confidence of his customers.

Perhaps no remedy in the druggists stock has been more widely endorsed by druggists themselves than the specific eczema cure, oil of wintergreen, thymol and glycerine, as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription.

Among hundreds of letters from prominent druggists we quote a few: Mr. Higginson of the Higginson Drug Co., Wichita, Kansas, says:

"We have a number of very enthusiastic people who have been cured by D. D. D. Prescription. These cured patients do as much to increase the sales as any advertising. You cannot make your advertising too strong, as we are ourselves enthusiastic in pushing the goods."

The Voegeli Bros. Drug Co., Minneapolis, Minn., write:

"The remedy is giving splendid satisfaction and our customers are doing much to advertise its merits."

T. P. Taylor & Co., Louisville, Ky., says:

"We have noted remarkable cures with D. D. D. and have had a number of customers tell they would not take $500.00 for the cure effected in their case."

Volff-Wilson Drug Co., St. Louis, Mo., state:

"We believe D. D. D. Prescription to be a medicine of great merit."

A. Baur, Terre Haute, Ind., (established 31 years), writes:

"To all people suffering from any form of skin disease, the D. D. D. remedy has my unqualified endorsement. During my extensive experience as a druggist it is the only eczema remedy on the market that gives satisfaction. I personally know of several remarkable cures."

This sort of endorsement from high grade druggists is the very best endorsement that any remedy can have. It shows that not only one or two but many customers of a drug store are reporting to the druggist the favorable results with this eczema remedy. For sale by all druggists.

Dr. C. W. Andrews, of the geological department of the British Museum, has started on a scientific expedition to Christmas Island, in the Indian Ocean. Ten years ago the island was uninhabited. Since then it has been opened up, owing to its guano deposits, and there are now a number of persons there. The object of the present visit is to ascertain what effect the agency of man has had on a native fauna and flora. It is believed, for instance, that the native rat, which was found on the island, has not been exterminated by the introduction of the common brown rat of England.

Many housekeepers are paying from 15 to 30 cents a pound for paper, twine, pasteboard, tin and cloth, which they take from goods they buy and throw away, but it is all to the advantage of the man who sold them the goods and counted the wrappers in the weight which the purchaser paid for.

Rodin's bust of Whistler is almost ready. The sculptor is to have $2,500 for his work. The bust has given the utmost satisfaction in Paris; so much so that a replica is to be subscribed for New York. Whistler was an American, but once on oath, in court of justice, declared that he was born in St. Petersburg.

Two Thousand Leave the City

Railroads and Interurban Companies Did Exceedingly Heavy Business Today--Fewer People Came Into City.

It is estimated that 2,000 local citizens spent today out of the city. Last evening every train that left was crowded. The 7 o'clock train north over the C. & L. lines proved inefficient to accommodate the crowd and there was a great deal of grumbling and complaint, but the company's local officials offered no remedy. The train consisted of a combination car and a single day coach. Both were packed and jammed. Women had no place to sit and almost no place to stand. They were crowded between seats and onto the vestibules. A number of men, who had been the first into the car, secured seats and were contented to occupy them while the women stood.

The Pennsylvania trains last evening were not pushed to supply accommodations, but today their capacity was taxed. All outgoing trains were loaded. The locals came in for the heaviest traffic but many Richmondites were to be found at Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Dayton, Columbus and a few spent the day at Chicago or equally as distant points.

The interurban cars were loaded each trip. These cars brought a large number of persons to the city, but trainmen said the number leaving was in excess. Western destinations seemed to be those preferred, but the east bound cars came in for a good share of the patronage.

Many others left the city in automobiles or carriages. There was a string of motor carriages going west on the National road this morning. Williamsburg was the destination of several local parties. Others made the trip to Dayton or Indianapolis in their touring cars. Livemen reported a good business and all methods of transportation seem to have been called upon to supply the exodus.

THE SANCY DIAMOND

Legend of Louis de Berquem and the Celebrated Gem.

A NIGHT LAMP FOR A KING.

Checked Career of the Brilliant Stone After the Death of Charles the Tenth. Some Facts About the Invention of Diamond Cutting.

Louis de Berquem, says tradition, was a poor jeweler's workman, but he fell in love with the daughter of a wealthy jeweler. This avaricious father would not give his daughter in marriage to any man not possessed of gold. Louis, having neither "expectations" from relatives nor favor at court, sought to make his fortune. He had often heard the father of his beloved remark that the man who discovered a method of cutting diamonds would become very wealthy, for up to that time they knew nothing more than to scrape off the gravel, and the diamond was left in its native state. Neither time, fire nor the mill could affect the diamond.

After many investigations and deep thought Louis bethought himself that iron is fashioned with steel, which is only hardened iron, and it occurred to him that perhaps the diamond would yield to the diamond. He made an experiment, which was at once crowned with success.

A few days later he presented himself before the rich jeweler with two diamonds cut into facets. He obtained the hand he sought and amassed a fortune. The secret, which he divulged only after he had become wealthy.

King Charles the Tenth was the principal customer of Louis de Berquem. The fastidious enemy of Louis XI, then possessed a large diamond, since become celebrated, accounted among the finest of precious stones. But this diamond was ill shaped, and the fires which it held burned in vain.

Louis de Berquem cut and polished this stone, and nothing could equal the joy of Charles the Tenth when the jeweler brought him the great diamond, so glittering with light that it lit up the darkness, and this to such an extent that the prince said: "It will serve me as a night lamp." Berquem received 3,000 ducats for his work.

As for the diamond, this is the one which was found in January, 1477, on the body of Charles the Tenth after the battle of Nancy. A soldier picked it up, sold it for one gold piece to a priest, who in turn sold it for three pieces of gold to a merchant, who took it to the Duke of Florence.

From the hands of this prince it passed into the possession of the king of Portugal. He sold it for 70,000 francs to one of the companions of Henri III, Nicholas de Harlay, baron of Sancy. Since this time the first large diamond to be cut is known as "the Sancy."

This legend leads to other considerations of the cutting of diamonds ascribed to Louis de Berquem at Brussels in 1465.

Hardly any one will assert boldly that no diamonds were cut before that date, but it is reasonable to suppose that Louis de Berquem regulated cutting by arranging the facets.

Long before the birth of Louis de Berquem cutting was known in India. Even in Europe we find among the treasures of the churches, thick diamonds cut into table and culet, the upper sides beaten into sections. In 1380, according to the inventory of the jewels of Louis, duke of Anjou, is found an entire series of cut diamonds. There is mention of a flat diamond of six sides, of a heart shaped diamond, of a diamond with eight sides, of a lozenge shaped diamond, of a diamond pointed on four sides and of a reliquary in which was set a diamond cut in the shape of a shield.

History informs us that 150 years before the first work of Louis de Berquem there were at Paris, at the corner of the Corroyerie, several diamond cutters.

The Duke of Burgundy, after a fastidious repast given at the Louvre to the king and the French court in 1403, offered to his noble guests eleven diamonds estimated to be worth 780 pieces of gold, the money of the period.

It is hardly possible to suppose that these were uncut diamonds; all of which goes to prove, notwithstanding some opinions, that Louis de Berquem did not invent the process of diamond cutting.

It is no less interesting to follow the fortunes of the Sancy a little further. It remained in the Sancy family some time, and Henri III, took it from them. It was destined to serve as a pledge for the raising of a body of Swiss soldiers, but the servant entrusted with bringing this diamond to the king was attacked, put to death, and the diamond was thought to be lost. Finally it was discovered that the servant had been assassinated in the forest of Dole and through the care of the priest had been buried in the village cemetery. Then the Baron de Sancy resolved that the diamond must not be lost. In fact, they found it in the stomach of the hapless, faithful servant, who swallowed it at the moment that he fell. According to the inventory of 1791 the Sancy weighed 333 carats.

It disappeared in 1792 to reappear in Russia. Its value is estimated at a million francs. Before the revolution it was among the French crown jewels.—New York World.

QUICK WIT SAVED HIM.

The Way a Criminal Fooled a Paris Police Chief.

In the "Memories" of M. Claude, chief of police during the reign of Napoleon III, there is much that is fascinating to lovers of detective stories. One of M. Claude's experiences was that in which he was outwitted by a clever criminal who saw in the police chief's resemblance to Beranger when the poet was at the height of his popularity a means of escape from capture. The criminal had returned to Paris and was living as a rich student in the Latin quarter, then in the height of its bohemian splendor.

Claude thought to make an easy capture of his man by attending a certain famous ballroom at the hour when dancing was at its height. He tells the story:

"I had no difficulty in discovering him seated among a swarm of pretty girls and bewitching danseuses. 'Convinced there were but two ways of getting the better of a cunning enemy—surprise and audacity—I walked straight up to where my rascal was seated. I walked slowly, with steady steps, my eyes on the eyes of my man. He was a dark skinned, handsome fellow, with a face as brazen as it was cynical. I saw by an imperceptible sign that he recognized me. He turned pale—he was mine!'

"I was almost near enough to capture him when I saw him bend to the car of one of his companions. Instantly all the girls surrounded me and stood in a feverish, excited, ardent phalanx before me. They formed an impenetrable barrier, behind which my rascal escaped, while the women pressed eagerly upon me, crying out: 'Beranger! It is Beranger!'

"The magic name presented upon the youthful spirits there the effect of an electric spark. All the dancers of the establishment stopped dancing and surrounded me with exclamations. The students and young girls rushed up to me, some bearing bouquets, others glass in hand. I was literally covered with flowers, while the whole place rang with shouts, a hundred times repeated, of 'Vive Beranger! Vive Beranger!'

"I was aghast, and yet I understood the trick. On the point of being colored by me, the man I had marked down had recourse to this shrewd game, which must have succeeded even better than he expected. I certainly had some points of resemblance to the illustrious song maker or the whole world of students and grisettes in the Latin Quarter would not have fallen so readily into his trap. I was as bald as the poet at that time, and at all times I have had a certain good natured, sympathetic benevolence in my appearance such as the portraits of Beranger show to this day.

"Well, if the youth of Paris counter-signed the intentional error of my clever scamp I owed it to my resemblance to the poet. Though I was tricked, I was well tricked. It was not for me to own to these giddypates that I was not Beranger, but Claude, the policeman, the agent of all the prosecutors, judges and lawyers who under the restoration had done so much harm to their idol. I escaped from the ovation, which was becoming delirious under an avalanche of flowers."

The Wonderful Aphid.

The aphid is in one way the most startling of all forms of insect life, for, although the females can and do lay eggs, its usual method of increase is by a sort of budding process, the young growing on the bodies of the parent exactly as brussels sprouts grow out of the stalks of the plant. The old produce young at the rate of twenty-five a day, and as the young are at once mature each can produce its twenty-five on the following day. It positively frightens one to work this multiplication out to a conclusion, for it means this: Supposing that the aphid could increase and multiply without interference, the twenty-fifth generation would be a number too long to quote here. Put down a 1 and follow it with 28 naughts and you will be within a few millions of it.

HE USED TACT.

A Successful Man's Story of the Way He Won Wealth.

"The late Ira D. Sankey," said a Brooklyn clergyman, "attributed a part of his success to tact—the faculty of pleasing people. He used to tell a story in illustration of tact's great power."

"Mr. Sankey, according to the tale, met on the street one day a man he hadn't seen for two years."

"'Why,' said the man, 'how well you're looking, Sankey!'

"'You, too, are looking well,' said Mr. Sankey. 'And two years ago you were quite out at the elbow, while now you are clothed in purple and fine linen. Come home to dinner with me, won't you?'

"'Gladly,' said the other, and they went to dine."

"During dinner Mr. Sankey's guest talked agreeably of his 120 horsepower racer, his wife's limousine and his daughter's husband, the earl. It developed, in fact, that he was a multimillionaire."

"'And yet two years ago,' Mr. Sankey said, 'you were as poor as a church mouse. Tell me, how did you manage it?'

"'By means of tact,' replied the guest. 'I suddenly took to being tactful, and the results were marvelous. I never neglected on meeting an acquaintance to say, 'How well you are looking!'. The acquaintance would be tremendously pleased. He would invite me home to dinner, he would introduce me to all his influential friends and he would give me valuable tips and pointers. Naturally I soon became rich, very rich, rich enough to retire.'

"Then the guest looked at his watch and rose."

"'But I really must be going,' he said. 'Thank you, my dear Sankey, for an excellent dinner. Goodbye. How well you're looking!'"—Cincinnati Enquirer.
