

WINKLEHOEFER IS THE FAVORITE

German Hercules Heavier than Olson, But Great Go Is Predicted.

GENERAL INTEREST SHOWN

EXPECTED THAT THERE WILL BE AT LEAST TWO THOUSAND PEOPLE ATTEND MATCH—ROEBER MEETS YOUNG BEEL.

Judging from the advance sale of seats to the wrestling match at the coliseum Monday night, the largest crowd that ever witnessed a contest of this kind in Richmond will be present. Sport lovers from all over this section of the country will be present and it would be no surprise if the double-header was witnessed by a crowd of 2,000. At the last match there were 1,500 paid admissions.

Many bets are being made on the result of the Olson-Winkelhoefer match and the German Hercules is the favorite, although Olson has many supporters who are willing to back him to the limit. The German is one of the heaviest wrestlers in the business and his 210 pounds is all muscle. He is exceptionally fast on his feet, has a reach almost equal to Olson's and has as much skill and experience as the Indianapolis lad. Olson realizes that he has the hardest match of his winter's campaign and is training hard in preparation.

Roeber, who will meet Young Beel, has been the middleweight sensation in Chicago this season and his clash with Young Beel will surely be an interesting event. Young Beel is said to be the fastest wrestler in the world and despite the fact that he only weighs about 165 pounds, he has had the distinction of throwing Americans last year.

Wednesday—Business Men's League—D's vs. C's.

Thursday—A's vs. D's.

In the City Bowling league last evening, the Richmonds defeated the Carmans' three games. This was a surprise to the great number of supporters of both teams present. All the men on both teams played hard but the Richmonds "had it on" their "Red Demon" friends and thus walked away with the match. The high scores were made by Hodge 190; Lichtenfels 198; Youngflesh 182 and 171; Markley 173. Smith made the high score of the evening, 213. By taking all three games last evening the Richmonds tied for second place and have an excellent chance of stepping into first.

Summary of the game:

Richmonds 797 814 749—2,360

Carmans 754 804 740—2,298

Good Year For Pacers.

This is an unusual year for sensational pacers. In fact, while there are some remarkable trotters out, it might be called a passing year, as there has seldom if ever been a season where there were so many high class pacers on the big circuits as now. At Detroit Dan Patch made his first start of the season in an attempt to beat his mark; but, while he failed to do so, he paced a mile in 1:58%, which was certainly fast enough to keep him from catching cold while en route. Then Minor Heir paced a mile in 1:59% at the Milwaukee track, which is surely a great performance for a five-year-old stallion the first year out.

On the grand circuit are a few pacers that have been keeping the followers of the caravan constantly on the anxious seat this year by their speed. The Eel (2:02%) has the fastest mark, but had not Dan McEwen staked his gray pacer right through the grand circuit it is safe to say that he would have a faster mark than that right now. The Eel had had easy sailing in the stakes, but were he to bump up against the free-for-allers, which include Hedgewood Bay (2:03%), Baron Grattan (2:03%), Gallagher (2:03%), John A. (2:03%) and some others, the pace would have been so hot that some new records would have been hung out.

Clever Light Heavyweight Who Will Have Battle of Life Monday

CHARLES OLSON OF INDIANAPOLIS.

When Olson meets Winkelhoefer, formerly wrestling partner of Hackenschmidt at the coliseum Monday night, he will have decidedly the hardest match he has had this season, as Winkelhoefer is heavier than he and has a good reach, strength and plenty of endurance. Olson is now in hard training.

Affairs of the Sporting World

It probably will be a long time before Yale goes another season without developing a first-class quarter back.

Already the big colleges have started searching the schoolboy ranks for future candidates for football honors.

Coach Yost of the Michigan eleven is very much discouraged because of the defeat suffered by his men at the hands of the Penn and Syracuse elevens.

It is not unlikely that when the experts get to work and pick their all-America eleven after the games Saturday, some members of the Syracuse, Cornell and Penn elevens will have berths.

The Army eleven has a good many trick plays that it expects to spring on the Navy in their great contest at Philadelphia today, thereby turning the tables on the midshipmen, who easily defeated them last year.

Down at Princeton they are still speculating as to next year's head coach, but the chances are that Roper will again be at the helm.

FIGHT EXPECTED OVER REPUBLICAN CHAIRMANSHIP

Several Good Men Would Take The Place Should They Be Selected, Adding Interest to Situation.

REMEY OF INDIANAPOLIS MENTIONED FOR PLACE.

Democrats Who Would Serve The Public in Various Capacities Flock to State Capital Nowadays.

By Ellis Seares.

Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 28.—And now while the democrats are fighting it out among themselves for United States senator and for the position of Speaker of the House of Representatives, the republicans bid fair to have a scrap of their own on hand in a short time that will keep them busy for a while.

It is about time for the republicans to elect a new chairman of their state committee and it is this that is making them sit up and look around. They have plenty of good timber for the place, and the main trouble they are having is in picking out the one who will fit best.

Charles F. Remy, of this city is the latest man mentioned in connection with the chairmanship. Remy was formerly reporter of the supreme court, but since he left that office he has been practicing law in this city. He lived in Columbus at the time of his election, and claimed that city as his home until recently.

Remy is one of the hottest republicans in Indiana. He has been known as a Beveridge follower, because he believes in Senator Beveridge, but there never has been a time when he was not ready to get out in the trenches and dig for the ticket, no matter whether a Beveridge man was on it or not.

This has popularized Remy in many parts of the state where such efforts on his part have been seen.

In the campaign this year he was a member of the executive committee of the Republican State Committee, and it is said that no man worked harder for the success of James E. Watson and the rest of the republican ticket than Remy.

He made speeches all over the state and the executive committee, of which he was a member, had a great deal to do with the innermost workings of the campaign.

Possible Candidates.

Remy will have opposition, however, when it comes time to elect a new chairman. Winfield T. Durbin, of Anderson, George W. Cromer, of Muncie and Harry S. New, of this city, are all mentioned for the job. Durbin would accept it. Cromer might accept it and New wouldn't have it. So there is the situation as it stands just now.

It is almost a certainty that a new chairman will be elected to succeed James P. Goodrich, who has served through three campaigns, but the matter will not be taken up in earnest until after the big rush of legislative business has been disposed of. Then the different candidates and their friends will get busy.

Stephen B. Fleming, of Fort Wayne, was in town last night, and when people saw him they began to think at once that there would be some tall talk in the race for senator, inasmuch as Fleming is the main backer of Edward G. Hoffman, of Fort Wayne who wants the place, and the chief fighter against John W. Kern, of this city, who also wants it. But as far as can be learned Fleming did not stir up any dust while here. He talked politics with a few of the leaders, and it is said that he did very little in the direction of the senatorship for Hoffman.

John E. Lamb, of Terre Haute, was another Senatorial aspirant who was in the city last night. He comes over frequently and talks things over, but it is believed by those who have been watching his campaign that he is not making much headway. He will have a following, of course, but it is not likely to be very strong. It is generally understood that Lamb has the backing of Crawford Fairbanks, owner of the Terre Haute brewery, but it is a question just how much good that will do him in this race, even if he does have it.

James Garrard, of Vincennes, one of the strongest contenders for the speakership of the house, is in the city, too. He says he did not come especially to look for votes for speaker, but that he was not allowing any opportunity to pass to land a vote.

He thinks it is a little early to tell much about the relative strength of the various candidates, but he says this will be possible when the democratic members of the legislature come in on December 15, for their pre-legislative conference.

All the members of the democratic side of the house are expected to be here at that time and Garrard says it will give the candidates for speaker a good opportunity to size things up and find out just where they stand in the race.

Garrard says he is more interested just now in a bill that he is preparing than he is in the speakership. He will introduce a bill to create a public utilities commission. He says it is not his purpose to seek to abolish the State Railroad Commission, however.

His idea is that the railroad commission should continue in existence and that its jurisdiction should be broadened so as to cover all common carriers.

Then a new commission would be created that would have control over all other public utilities. And Garrard's bill will go so far as to give the public utilities commission jurisdiction over property insurance companies. Garrard says that there should be a tribunal to which a policy holder could appeal for justice when an insurance company charges too high a rate or refuses to make good a loss.

"The public is at the mercy of the insurance companies when it comes to a matter of rates," said Garrard. "A central board fixes the rate of premium and all the companies use that rate. If you don't pay it you can do without insurance. Now, if the rate is too high, there is no way to get at the insurance companies. This looks to me very much like a trust and the public should have some remedy. I propose to include one in my bill which I am now preparing."

Spider Cures.

In China spiders are highly esteemed in the treatment of croup. You get from an old wall the webs of seven black spiders—two of which must have the owners sitting in the middle—and pound them up in a mortar with a little powdered alum. The resulting mixture must then be set on fire, and the ashes, when squirted into the throat of the patient by means of a bamboo tube, are said to effect a certain and immediate cure.

Black spiders are evidently full of medicinal virtue, for they are largely employed in the treatment ofague as well. In Somersetshire, if one is afflicted with the unpleasant ailment, the way to get well is to shut up a large black spider in a box and leave it there till it dies. At the moment of its death theague should disappear. In Sussex the treatment is more heroic; the patient must swallow the spider.

It is about time for the republicans to elect a new chairman of their state committee and it is this that is making them sit up and look around. They have plenty of good timber for the place, and the main trouble they are having is in picking out the one who will fit best.

In R. F. Johnson's book, "From Peckin to Mandalay," the author tells the story of a poor Chinese scholar noted for his piety, who heard the voice of an invisible being who spoke to him thus: "Your piety has found favor in the sight of heaven. Ask now for what you most long to possess, for I am the messenger of the gods, and they have sworn to grant your heart's desire."

"I ask," said the poor scholar, "for the coarsest clothes and food, just enough for my daily wants, and I beg that I may have freedom to wander at my will over mountain and fell and woodland stream, free from all worldly cares, till my life's end. That is all I ask."

"Hardly had he spoken than the sky seemed to be filled with the laughter of myriads of unearthly voices. "All you ask," cried the messenger of the gods, "Know you not that what you demanded is the highest happiness of the beings that dwell in heaven? Ask for wealth or rank or what earthly happiness you will, but not for you are the holiest joys of the gods."

The Ungrateful Cuckoo.

To hear the cuckoo's cheery note you might think he had the clearest conscience in the world. He can have neither memory nor moral sense or he would not carry it off so gaily. We say nothing of the "raptures," who are a race apart, but the most disreputable of birds, as a rule, are guilty of nothing worse than peccadilloes. The jackdaw will steal for the mere fun of the thing, for he can make no possible use of plate or jewelry, and sometimes under temptation may make a snatch at a pheasant chick. Sparrows are, of course, notorious thieves, but they rank no higher in crime than the sneaking pickpockets. But the cuckoo, so to speak, is a murderer from his cradle. He violates the sanctity of a hospital birth. His first victims are his own foster brothers, and before he tires his wings on the first flight he is imbibed in fraternal blood, like any Amurath or Bazajet.—London Saturday Review.

Bright Prospects.

"My dear," said the banker to his only daughter, "I have noticed a young man attired in a dress suit in the drawing room two or three evenings each week of late. What is his occupation?"

"He is at present unemployed, father," replied the fair girl, a dreamy, faraway look in her big blue eyes, "but he is thinking seriously of accepting a position of life companion to a young lady of means."

An Everyday Suit.

"That Gus is certainly a nifty dresser. He has a suit of clothes for every day in the week."

"Why, he has the same suit on every time I see him!"

"Yep; that's the one."—Cleveland Leader.
