RAILROAD MEN WILL WATCH LEGISLATURE

not want the place. Former Governor Winfield T. Durbin, of Anderson, is another. He is not working for the job but says he will accept and do his best if elected. Former Congressman George W. Cromer, of Muncie, is talking of, but he says he is not hunting the job. Then there is Charles F. Remy, of this city, formerly of Columbus, who was a member of the republican state executive committee during the last campaign. Remy is known as one of the hardest fighters in the party and this has brought him a good deal of support since his name has been mentioned for chairman. It is more than a year from now until the new chairman will be elected and there is no telling who may come to the front in that time.

It is believed that much will depend on the course pursued by the democrats in the legislature this winter in shaping up the republican organization for the next campaign. If the democrats follow their usual program and do the wrong thing during the session and renew the distrust that the people have entertained for years there will be no lack of good organizers to take charge of the party organization.

Candidates in Conference.

The democratic candidates for state offices who were defeated at the last election held a conference here yesterday afternoon to talk over the plans for the contest which they will make before the legislature for the offices. They are going right ahead gathering evidence for use in the contest. James F. Cox, of Columbus, who was defeated for secretary of state, said he was sure that he would find sufficient errors in the returns from the various counties to more than wipe out the plurality received by Fred A. Sims. Bert New, of North Vernon, who lost out for state statistician, said a good many errors had been found in the northern counties, but that more were found in other sections of the state. New also feels confident of success in the contest. New was defeated by only 171 votes, so it will not require very many bona fide mistakes to overcome it.

New Deal Likely.

Governor-elect Marshall, while he was in this city the past two or three days, did not make anything known as to his intentions with reference to any appointments. He is keeping that to himself.

But there is a strong belief that he is going to stand for an entire new deal in the offices at his command, and that little attention will be given to the various factions in the Democratic party. One thing is certain Marshall will not do much for the Taggart outfit. There is good reason to believe that he will not allow Taggart or any of his followers to dictate any appointments. In fact, there are many who believe that Marshall will give the Taggart crowd one good appointment and then tell the rest of the bunch that that is all it will get.

Joseph Rely, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, will probably be appointed State Oil Inspector. Rely is an out and out Taggart man and his appointment will be a distinct recognition of the Taggart faction.

But that is all the Taggart crowd will get from Marshall. It will have to be satisfied with it or take nothing. Taggart will probably be able to run the House of Representatives and dictate party action there, but he will not be able to dictate to Marshall, unless all signs fail. Of course, signs have been known to fail, however.

Marshall is believed to be framing things up to dump W. J. Woods, the Democratic member of the State Railroad Commission. During his campaign, Marshall said he would appoint on the Commission men who were practical railroad men. Wood's term is the first to expire and it is believed that Marshall will appoint a working railroad man suggested by the railroad organizations.
