FATHER AND SON.

For more than a generation and a half there has been a Dr. Weist in Richmond. After the first of January there will no longer be one. And so it is that the removal of Dr. Weist is an event which calls for notice.

In professional circles the name has been one of the highest in Eastern Indiana and Western Ohio. Thousands of suffering people have been relieved from pain and many a man today owes his life or his limb to the knowledge and skill of the father and son. It is a fact always coupled with their names that they sacrificed their personal comfort at all times to care for suffering people. Those who remember the death of the "Old" Doctor as he was lovingly called will recall the fact that he sent his son to the bedside of a patient while he knew himself to be dying. A hero? The stern old doctor would have scorned the word. It took no less a quality on the part of the son. And it is with no less feeling of regret that the town loses the son today than it lost the father a few years ago, although under the happiest circumstances he departs.

A strong and high character; public spirit; high mental attainments and charity for all mankind has marked this family.

It is one of the hardest things for those of us who have known Richmond all our lives to see the most capable men called away by force of the very qualities that have endeared them to our hearts. But these are the disadvantages of the small town. All we can say to such men as have been steadily leaving Richmond is "Good bye and Good luck."

The Man Behind

Gee, whiz! Again has Theodore Reached out and hit the drum Of admonition and reproof, And it is sounding some.

The Ananias Club again Has drawn some new recruit And if the invoice is correct They certainly are beauts.

The liars and the infamous, With trimmings on the side, Are wishing now that they'd be good And never, never lied.

Oh, say, somebody ought to go To Indiana now, And the Foulke man in the slats For raising such a row.

By putting letters into print Instead of in the fire, When well he knew that they would raise The Presidential ire.

Oh, ain't it awful, Mabel, say, To hear him talk like that? It sounds almost as if his mouth Had gone off on a bat.

By Christopher; those naughty men Should let T. R. alone, Because they know what happens when They monkey 'round the throne.

But if they will persist, why, then, To soothe our troubled souls, Somebody ought to take Foulke out And shoot him full of holes. W. J. Lampton in The New York World.

Critics of Navy Are Rebuked

Rear Admiral Evans Claims That the Latest Ships of the United States Are Superior to the Dreadnought.

New York, Dec. 15.—Branding a great majority of the scathing criticisms recently directed against the American navy as unfounded in fact, and un-American, Rear Admiral Robert D. Evans, in a magazine, severely arraigns Henry Reuterdaal and other critics of American battle-ship construction. He says in part:

"Our past policy was to put larger guns on our ships than were carried on the ships of other nations, and history records the wisdom of this policy. Simply because foreign policy indicated that others considered the twelve-inch gun a sufficiently powerful weapon, some one in authority changed our policy, discarded the more powerful weapon and came to the one used by England as her standard. I claim that this was a most serious blunder, but I must in fairness say that it was done by the seagoing line officers of the navy and not by any staff corps.

"Of all the inaccurate and misleading statements in this wonderful Reuterdaal criticism, however, this is the most incorrect: 'Within a year after the Russo-Japanese fight in the Sea of Japan, our navy awoke to the realization of a startling fact; the battle ships of the United States are in exactly the same condition as the Russian ships at the Sea of Japan—not temporarily, but permanently.'

"I assert on the contrary that the battle fleet of the United States never was and never will be, never can be, in the condition of that Russian fleet when it went into action for the last time.

"I do not for a moment claim that the Indiana and her sister ships are equal to the Dreadnought of the English Navy; only that she is the equal
