

INDIANA BANKS GAIN LAST YEAR

Controller Currency Reports
State Undivided Deposits
Increased $7,564,889.

A GROWTH IN RESOURCES

BANKING OPERATIONS HAVE ENTIRELY RECOVERED FROM FINANCIAL DISTURBANCES EXPERIENCED LAST YEAR.

Washington, Jan. 2.—A wonderful improvement in financial conditions in Indiana last year is indicated by advices received by the controller of the currency. These advices show that the state of Indiana begins the new year under the most favorable auspices with a complete restoration of confidence and with banking operations entirely recovered from the financial disturbances of the early part of the year just closed.

Based on reports to the controller from Indiana, there has been an enormous increase in resources and deposits of national banks in Indiana during the last year. On December 3, 1907, the national banks of Indianapolis had clearing house certificates to the amount of $509,000 outstanding and the national banks of the remainder of the state had issued $119,745 of clearing house certificates. All of these have been redeemed and have disappeared.

Probably the most notable improvement is in the increase of individual deposits. This increase amounts to the enormous total of $7,564,889. The individual deposits are the deposits of many and the increase represents thousands of accounts that did not exist a year ago.

The total increase of individual deposits includes an increase of $1,150,845.89 in the deposits of the national banks of Indianapolis and an increase of $6,414,043.11 in the deposits of the national banks of Indiana outside of the state capital. The individual deposits of the Indianapolis national banks as shown by the controller's latest call were $19,751,919.49, as compared with $18,901,573.00 one year ago. The individual deposits of the national banks outside of Indianapolis were $94,595,710.05, as compared with $88,181,106.94 one year ago.

Total Increase Striking.
The increase in the total resources of the Indiana national banks is equally satisfactory and striking. This increase amounts to $12,597,418.41 during the year, of which the Indianapolis national banks show an increase of $2,463,842.04 and the national banks outside of Indianapolis an increase of $10,133,576.37. In other words the national banks of Indianapolis at the time of the controller's last call had total resources of $51,201,578.90, as against $48,737,736.05 one year ago and the national banks outside of Indianapolis had total resources of $150,829,871.37, as against $140,196,295.90 one year ago.

During the year there was an increase in the loans and discounts of the Indianapolis banks amounting to $5,821,803.89. This represented an increase of $1,709,699.12 in the loans and discounts of the Indianapolis national banks and an increase of $3,611,004.75 in the loans and discounts of the national banks outside of Indianapolis.

A year ago the per cent of reserve in the Indianapolis national banks was 32.86. The recent call showed it has been reduced to 28.97. The per cent of cash on hand in the Indianapolis banks a year ago was 37.25. This has been reduced to 31.88. No other state enters the new year under more favorable conditions than Indiana.

ALL NEWSPAPERS SHOULD COPY THIS.

We cheerfully copy the following: "I hope that every newspaper in the country will copy this. If they will, they will do words of good for thousands of sick people who are now suffering as I did for years with my stomach and kidneys, but thanks to the wonderful medicine that is now doing so much good all over the country, I am liberated from my years of torture and am once more enjoying the great blessing of good health. For several years my back was hurting me most of the time, and I would have to get up from ten to fifteen times every night on account of my kidneys. My food would sour and burn in my stomach and I would bloat and belch until I would get dizzy and nervous. I was badly constipated, and had to be taking something all of the time. If I didn't I was sure to have a bad spell of sick headache. No one knows how much I did suffer, but after taking the great remedy, Root Juice, a short time, I began to improve, and after using about six bottles I am strong and well, and feel like a boy. I am glad to tell every sick person all about it, because I sympathize with those who suffer as I did." L. F. Pratt, South Bend, Ind. It is well known here that Root Juice is certainly a wonderful medicine. It is sold for one dollar a bottle or two bottles for two dollars and a half. A. G. Luken & Co., drug store.

Don't Sleep on Your Eyes.

"The beautiful heroine, burying her face in the pillows, sobbed violently."

"This is a familiar sentence in fiction," says a physician, "and it reminds me of a point in treating eye troubles which not only average practitioners overlook, but patients as well."

"Many cases of weakness of the eyes have been superinduced by the thoughtless habit some persons have of sleeping on the side of the face so that the eye presses against the pillow. The head in itself is very heavy, and with the body in supine position there is much added weight thrown on the surface of the pillow. The flesh which covers the bones of the face and cranium does not, of course, feel this pressure to any appreciable extent, but with the eye, the most delicate and sensitive organ of the body, it is another matter."

"Just this simple but dangerous habit alone will produce bloodshot eyes, inflamed lids, lachrymal discharges or watery eyes and tend to impair the sight. I have discovered in my practice that many cases of bad eyes have resisted treatment until this cause in delaying the cure was found out and corrected."—Buffalo News.

The Ligue Nationale Aerienne recently received from Commandant Doltus, the offer of a prize of £400 for the first kite of French construction capable of lifting a man to the height of 200 meters, and of maintaining him in the air for a period of at least one hour. A Daniel has come to judgment in the Vermont Legislature with a bill intended to guard newspapers against "fakirs." It makes the giving of false news to a newspaper with intent to deceive punishable by fine ranging from $5 to $20 for each offense.

"We hope that the Vermont lawmakers will lose no time in making the bill a statute," says the Boston Transcript. "Its enactment will fill a long felt want of Vermont editors and blame the way to relieve those of other States."

A party of Maine hunters has the old plan of catching birds by putting salt on their tails "beaten to a frazzle," as President Roosevelt would say. The Kennebec Journal declares that the woodsmen got a fine deer by simply leaving some salt on the table in their camp. Of course, they didn't do it intentionally, but they got a fat fawn just the same. The deer wandered in through the open door and was cornered and killed when the hunters returned after a day's tramp which had yielded them nothing.

ANOTHER ANTI-TAX LEAGUE IN FIELD

Taxpayers' Protective League
Willing and Anxious to Save State Revenues.

CUTS OUT MANY OFFICES

ORGANIZATION ALSO PROPOSES TO SEE MANAGEMENT OF THE STATE INSTITUTIONS RECEIVE THOROUGH INVESTIGATIONS.

Palladium Bureau, Indianapolis, Jan. 2.

Another tax-saving, tax-reducing organization has entered the field and will wrestle with the legislature over the question of public expenditures. The Taxpayers' Protective League is preparing to get busy along this line. Some of the officers of the league, including Representative W. S. Wells of Allen county, president, and Representative John B. Faulkner, of Michigan City, secretary and treasurer, got together at the Denison and later it was announced that the members of the league will come to Indianapolis in great numbers during the coming session, and will lobby hard to have the State's expenses reduced.

The announced intention of the league is to lower the taxes of the people of the state about $450,000 a year.

Eliminates Fat Jobs.

In order to carry out this program a bill is being prepared now which provides for the elimination of many state positions. Officers of the league refuse to say just which positions are scheduled for the ax, but it is declared that the State Auditor's office will not be neglected.

"We believe," said Mr. Wells, "that we can save the people of the state $5,000 a year by cutting down the expenses in the auditor's office alone. There are two or three positions in the auditor's office that could be abolished without doing any harm to the state."

The Taxpayers' League proposes to see to it also that the management of state institutions is investigated thoroughly. It will furnish the money to pay the expenses of the ways and means committee in visiting state institutions in case the legislature does not provide money for this purpose.

To Satisfy Legislature.

"The League will see to it," said Mr. Wells, "that the legislature is not compelled to depend on information furnished by the legislative visitation committee appointed by the governor. If the ways and means committee is not satisfied with the report made by the legislative visitation committee on any state institution, representatives of the league will personally make arrangements to inspect the institution and study its needs. In this manner we hope to cut out extravagant appropriations and give the institution as much money as it needs and no more."

The taxpayers' protective league, Mr. Wells explains, has a membership of 1,700 including many manufacturers and shippers. It was organized two years ago, soon after the legislature adjourned, it is explained, and the coming session will be its first opportunity to get busy on its plan for reducing expenses. The bill which the league is preparing will be ready for presentation soon after the opening of the session. Lemuel Darrow, mayor of Laporte, is the vice president of organization.

A Fellow Feeling Saved Him.

A now prosperous Indiana lawyer was a poor youth and knew what adverse fortune was in his early days. The road looked dark and dreary when he first embarked in the practice in Indianapolis. He lived several miles out in the country and was in the habit of walking home at the end of his day's work for reasons of economy. One dark night as he was nearing his rural abode he was commanded to throw up his hands by a ruffianly highwayman, who emphasized his demand by clapping a pistol to the lawyer's head. The order was promptly obeyed, and the footpad proceeded to investigate the victim's pockets.

"Great Scott!" said the robber in tones of disgust. "Is this two dollar bill all the money you possess?"

"It is," replied the trembling lawyer. "Take it and let me proceed."

"What business are you in?" was the next interrogation.

"I am trying to be a lawyer," said the future district attorney.

"Then, in heaven's name, man, take back your money! Men of our profession must stand together."—Baltimore American.

Why Not Now?

FUGITIVE SPAR BUOYS

Rescuing These Stray "Sticks" Is Perilous Work.

SIGNBOARDS OF CHANNELS.

How These Mariners' Guides Are Anchored and How They Sometimes Break Away and Are Hunted Down by the Lighthouse Service Tenders.

When the winter gales begin to blow, the tenders of the lighthouse service turn their stems toward northern seas to hunt stray spar buoys. Of all the work of the coast patrol this, perhaps, is the most exposed to danger. Pulling these "signboards" out of the sea or putting them over side is like "yanking" splices with a ton derrick on a heaving platform.

Although passengers in the boats that ply the waters of New York harbor, Long Island sound and other waterways along the coast see many spar buoys, they give them little thought. With the man at the wheel it is different. Color, shape and size give him volumes of information, and he looks upon the spar buoy as an invaluable guide.

In the government inventories they are listed as "sticks," although they are sometimes sixty feet long. They are anchored in the bed of a river or harbor channel, their "up ends" painted in such a way as to indicate to the observer the formation of the bottom. On the margin of government charts explanatory notes tell one that vessels approaching a harbor from the sea should leave red buoys with even numbers on the right and black, with odd numbers on the left side of channel. Black and white striped buoys, the stripes running perpendicularly, mean an obstruction in the channel, with room to get by on either side. If balls or cages ornament the "up ends" it means a turning point, the color and number indicating the course.

These sticks are put down with heavy iron anchors and sometimes great stone weights. One would suppose that so fixed they never could get away, but they do, and it is a job to find them. Ice floes break their cables and sometimes crush the sticks; storms pull them loose, and ships in the fog or darkness foul them and tear them from their hold on the bottom. Not infrequently ships use them as moorings, although this is forbidden.

There are instances where the anchors of a spar buoy have been secure enough to hold against ice pressure and in a narrow channel cause a dangerous jam. But such cases are few, for when this happens the weight of the ice usually becomes so great as to force the buoy under, and the pack slides on.

If the ice pack gets under the buoy so as to lift it there is only one result—the parting of the cable. Then off starts the spar upon a journey maybe of thousands of miles, perhaps of only one or two. It may fetch up on the nearest shore, and it may drift to the coast of Europe or into the southern seas. On the Irish coast today is one which traveled there in six weeks from New York harbor. It was presented to the British government by the United States and now floats off the coast on which it stopped after its long Atlantic journey.

If it is a long chase to find the stray buoys it is even a more difficult task to recover the anchors left behind by the fugitive spars. Tenders that sail out of the harbor have a derrick and tackle rigged in front of the pilot house, with a donkey engine to lift and pull. The location of every buoy is marked on the charts to a degree, so it is not difficult to find the desired position. The serious business is dragging with it to hoist it aboard ship. Here the donkey engine comes into play. Another hazard is to pull a spar buoy aboard. If a sea happens to be running the captain of the tender has to use extreme care. Should a big roller get under him and suddenly tighten the lifting chains, either they would give way or the crew in either case being placed in jeopardy of their lives.

But the risk these men run is all in the day's work. To them a job in a gateway on a lee shore is regarded as no more monotonous task than repeating a row of buoys on land.—New York Post.

The Brevity of Ballarat.

It was in Ballarat that Mark Twain found the local language so puzzling at first, the good people of the place deeming life too short to dawdle in their talk.

The mayor called on the American humorist and ironically said "K'm." Then when Mark Twain gave him a cigar he simply said "O."

Subsequent inquiry revealed that these words were Ballaratian for "welcome" and "thank you."—London Chronicle.

A Movable Watermark.

The Circle tells the following story of high tide and low tide in a small boy's affairs:

"Willie," commanded the mother as the little family was about to set out for the Sunday school picnic, "you run right back to the sink and wash your face again, and when you come out don't let me see that black watermark on your neck!"

A little later, as the mother and her two children were hurrying toward the suburban trolley depot, the boy and the girl, unable to keep the mother's pace, dropped behind.

"Willie," asked the sister, stimulated to continual chatter by the thoughts of the joyful picnic, "did you manage to wash the watermark off?"

"Naw, I didn't!" the boy gleefully rejoined, casting a stealthy glance at his mother. "I only moved it further down!"
