THE MARION CHRONICLE AND MR. FOULKE.

The tirade of abusive abuse which the Marion Chronicle is responsible for in regard to Mr. William Dudley Foulke and which has been the going rounds of the state papers is highly absurd as well as disgusting.

To the unprejudiced observer it might appear that Mr. Foulke's remarks anent the Crumpacker bill and the civil service might have something to do with it.

There are three great counts on which Mr. Foulke has been indicted. First: That he writes "books which nobody reads" and "speeches that nobody listens to."

Second: That he is interested in civil service reform and good government. Third: That he is a close friend of Theodore Roosevelt.

It is not necessary to make out a testimonial for Mr. Foulke. Mr. Foulke is quite able to take care of himself. There are however certain things which should be said in this case.

When Lowell was sent to the court of St. James there were those senators who said they would not vote for his confirmation as ambassador because he was one of "them dam literary fellers."

The chief fault, although it is not openly admitted, with Mr. Foulke seems to be that he is a civil service reformer. In that he is in good company.

As to Mr. Foulke's personal friendship for the president—that dates back to the time when the name of Roosevelt had not been heard outside the city of New York.

The Marion Chronicle to the contrary, Mr. Foulke is one of the few men who has no axe to grind in the political world.

Had he fawned when toadyism was desired. Had he stuck to party instead of to principles which he honestly believed in, all this would have been different—and had he done all these things, that same Marion Chronicle would have set him apart as one anointed instead of using those soft words "envy hatred and treason."

Now according to Mr. Foulke's admission and Mr. Bennett Gordon's statement—Mr. Foulke had nothing to do with the attitude of the Richmond Evening Item in the last campaign although it was not generally known at the time.

Mr. Foulke as a free lance and independent has at times not held the same views of matters political which this paper has held. This is a party paper and Mr. Foulke is independent.

Is it not possible to do this without mud slinging? Mr. Foulke could easily do without Indiana. He is able to live where he pleases.

And though this is a party paper and the Marion Chronicle is a party paper it is well to point out that partisanship has nothing to do with malice, hatred and envy, which are more properly applied to their original sources than to the man at whom they are aimed.

If there be no place in modern life for such men as Lowell, George William Curtis, Daniel Coit Gilman and Eliot of Harvard (men who voted as the thought of the good of the whole country merited; men all, of scholarly attainments which they laid at the service of the people).

Such a man is Mr. Foulke. When Lowell was sent to the court of St. James there were those senators who said they would not vote for his confirmation as ambassador because he was one of "them dam literary fellers."

Give us more men of that stamp and we shall have better government and less graft.
