FACTIONAL FIGHT ON

Contest Arises in Miners' Convention Regarding the Seating of McDonald.

HOT SPEECHES ARE MADE

Indianapolis, Jan. 23.—A spirited factional fight developed today in the Miners' convention when a protest was made against the seating of Stephen McDonald of District No. 1 Pennsylvania. Each side made hot speeches and the matter went over till the afternoon session when a vote is to be taken. Delegate Dempsey led the fight against McDonald claiming he had not been working as a miner. Other contests also are pending. The convention adopted a motion authorizing President Lewis to appoint a special scale committee to place the demands of the anthracite miners for a conference with the operators. The committee named comprises the presidents of all the districts including the bituminous coal workers. This indicates that the entire organization will back up the anthracite men in their demands.

COME ON MONDAY TO GET MONEY

About $124,000 to Be Distributed.

Township trustees and treasurers of all school boards and towns will gather at the office of the county auditor Monday for the purpose of receiving funds from the January distribution. At this time about $124,000 will be paid out. The auditor will make warrants against the treasurer for the amounts.

"I had a fight yesterday with the boy next door," a lad confessed to his father. "Yes, I know; his father is coming to see me about it at my office." "Well, father, I hope you will get the best of it, the same as I did yesterday."

STORIES OF THE SEA.

Quenching a Blaze In a Hurry on Board a War Vessel.

PRANK OF A TRICKY MASCOT.

There Were Lively Times on Deck When the Big Monkey Got Himself Mixed Up With Hot Pitch and Gun Cotton and Took a Trip Aloft.

We were making passage from Norfolk, Va., to Lisbon, Portugal, in the United States steamship Alliance. It was shortly after 4 o'clock. I had just gone to my room for a pipeful of tobacco when the sailmaker came to my door with a scared face. "Got any water in your room, Mr. Du Bois?" he said.

"Yes; here's a pailful."

"For God's sake give it to me quick! The sail room's afire, but don't say anything! I'll have it out in a minute!"

I handed him the pail of water, but was not going to take any chances of a fire on a man-of-war with fifteen tons of powder not six feet away, so I ran to the ship's bell and rang the fire alarm as furiously as I could. In less time than it takes you to read this hand grenades were being thrown and water was pouring into the now stifling mass of burning canvas. Men jumped in among the great bundles of furled sails and passed them out, and when one could not endure the smoke any longer another took his place. At last the danger was over, and I began to look around and take stock of the affair.

I had often wondered what I would do in case of a fire on the ship. I never saved my watch. A watch is never used at sea, so it hung from a hook over my desk. I would be sure to take along my best girl's picture, and there were a few other little belongings which must not be parted with. Well, when the thing was over, what had I gathered together? Not my watch, not my best girl's picture, not anything that I had thought I would, but I had filled my pockets with extract of beef and nothing else. Dumb instinct, not a thought of anything but of something good to eat in dire extremity.

How did the fire start? The sailmaker, whose duty it is to keep the sails in good order, is privileged to go to the sail room at any time, but he is supposed to always carry a peculiar lantern, consisting of a common candle set in a globe of horn, sufficiently opaque to give enough light for his needs there. The candle does away with any danger from oil that might be spilled and catch fire, and the globe, being of horn instead of glass, precludes a possibility of breakage. This time the sailmaker, desiring a little more light, had taken out the candle. It had dropped from his fingers away down into the light of a furled sail, and the cloth had caught fire. There was a terrible mess of burned and smoky sails in there, and they were all hauled up on deck and spread out in the sun to dry and to find out just what the damage was. In the bottom of the room on the floor one of the men found the stump of candle and put it in his pocket. The sailmaker was a favorite on board, and the officers never found out how the fire started. They thought they knew. The captain "broke" the sailmaker—that is, reduced him to the decks. But he couldn't prove anything. So after a week or so he restored him to his old rank.

We came near having another fire once, and while it might have been very serious, it was really funny.

We had several hundred pounds of gun cotton on board, and fearing that it might have gathered dampness, the gunner's gang got up all cases from the magazine, pulled it all out and spread it on the warm decks far aft in the sun to dry. Away forward the boatwreckers' mate and his gang were busy with tar pots and ropes putting some of their stuff in order.

We had on board a mascot in the shape of a monkey, one of the largest I have ever seen. He would stand
