

SUITABLE HOMES FOR DIPLOMATS IS BIG QUESTION

Congress Will Wrestle With
The Proposition to Appropriate Millions for Erecting Legations.

GIVE POOR MAN CHANCE
IS HEARD BY CONGRESS

Argument Advanced That to Be American Diplomat One Must Be Wealthy Because Of the Expense.

By Guy W. Finney.

Washington, Jan. 30.—Would it pay the United States government to spend several million dollars in building embassy and legation buildings in the principal capitals of Europe? This is a question which has presented itself forcibly to congress and it will be one that will give President-elect Taft much concern when he becomes chief magistrate. On the face it would not seem that this government was justified in the expenditure of any large sum merely to provide elaborate residences for American diplomats, with the resultant encouragement to ostentation and un-democratic display. In fact, this has been the chief objection to the proposition, without regard to the money it involves.

Want to Drop the Charge.
But underlying the subject is the desire of the government to be relieved of the charge that by failing to provide homes for its representatives abroad it has denied poor men equal opportunity with rich ones to seek the more exalted diplomatic posts. In this sense, the very argument employed to defeat the plan to build these embassy and legation homes—that so doing would encourage lavish entertainment and display—can be used in its favor. It can be contended as reasonably that whereas under any circumstances the rich man can seek embassies and legations, the poor man cannot. It is to be admitted that the American people will welcome the desire of its representatives anywhere they are chosen according to the standard of fitness rather than because financial or social preeminence or, as is so frequently the case, in fulfillment of a political obligation. Were these posts distributed to men of brains, without reference to political preference, there probably would be no "Hill" incidents, nor would this country be embarrassed by a lack of intelligence or tact on the part of its representative, as it frequently has in the past. There is something in the assertion that the mental caliber of American diplomats would undergo considerable improvement if this government only gave assurance of better financial support.

Will Welcome the Day.

There is no case on record of a cough, cold or la grippe developing into pneumonia after Foley's Honey and Tar has been taken, as it cures the most obstinate deep seated coughs and colds. Why take anything else. A. G. Luken & Co.

A GOOD LIAR.

He Finally Came to Believe His Own
Yarn Was True.

The usual party of evening town gossip has gathered in front of the postoffice when Rastus, a good hearted old dandy, said:
"Folks, I know a man who tells lies so often that he sometimes actually believes he's telling the truth. You've heard of them people, haven't you? Listen. One day he was passing by a restaurant, and as he was very hungry he went in to get something to eat. But when he got inside he saw that every seat was occupied. Then he thought a minute and suddenly said, 'Just so long as that every one could hear him.'
"Have you heard?
"Of course every one said 'What?'
"Why," said he, "there's a whale down in the dock that they just captured last night. His tail around and up, settin' the tugboats and steamers. He's only got to be there ten minutes."
"Of course every one jumped up and run down to see the whale. That was just what he wanted, so sittin' down, he ordered his dinner and begun to eat. Suddenly he looked out the window, and there was everybody runnin' to the docks—policemen, Chinamen, coons and all—and he said:
"By golly! I guess it's so!"
"And he ran down there himself."—Judge.

The Whole Board.

When the Rev. Dr. Newman Hall was in this country in 1867 he attended a meeting of the American board in Buffalo and was entertained by the Rev. Dr. Wolcott Calkins and family, afterward of Newton, Mass. Those were days when the coming of the board to a city or town created considerable stir, and when Dr. Hall entered the house one of the children exclaimed, "The board has come!" and early next morning a child's voice at his door kindly asked, "Will the board like some coffee?"

CEMENT LINED CISTERN.

Impurities in Rainwater May Be Easily Extracted.

To provide against a water famine during a dry time an extra cistern or two is a good investment. The purest water we get is rainwater, a fact that has been brought to the attention of different states by the boards of health.

Disease germs follow rainwater down into the soil to percolate through to the well. Persons using the water continually become immune, so they may not contract a serious disease for years, but a severe cold may weaken their vitality and disease resisting power, so they may become infected at any time.

Strangers drinking the water are especially liable, because their systems are not fortified against the peculiar dangers lurking in that vicinity. Every fall city papers contain accounts of typhoid that has been brought home from country places by people while away on their annual vacation trips.

With cistern water it is different, as the principal contamination of rainwater comes from dirt on the roof. The water itself is pure enough until it strikes the roof. Some farmers have two cisterns. They let the first water from a rain shower run into one cistern, then switch the leader to the other one, which is used for house purposes.

Good, durable cisterns in clay or loamy ground may be made by plastering cement mortar directly on the earth surface of the excavation. In some sections of the country a great many cisterns are made this way and covered by putting timbers across and building a floor of double thick inch stuff, laid to break joints. The spaces over the wall and between the timbers are filled in with cement, and a drain is cut in one side while the cement is fresh.
