HIGHEST HONORS PAID L'ENFANT

City of Washington Remembers the Frenchman Who Planned the City.

MEMORIAL HELD FOR HIM

PRINCIPAL CEREMONY WAS HELD IN THE ROTUNDA OF THE CAPITOL—PRESIDENT TAFT IN ATTENDANCE.

Washington, May 1.—High honors were paid the memory and remains of Maj. Pierre Charles L'Enfant, the French engineer officer, who under the authority and direction of Gen. George Washington, planned the city of Washington.

The principal ceremony was held in the rotunda of the United States capitol, beginning about 10:40 o'clock in forenoon. Central figures in the notable gathering were the President and Mrs. Taft, Vice President Sherman and the French ambassador, M. Jusserand. Surrounding them were justices of the United States Supreme court, senators, representatives, members of the diplomatic corps, the commissioners of the District of Columbia and representatives of patriotic and other societies.

Remains Lie in State.

The remains of Maj. D'Enfant, which were disinterred from their resting place on Diggs farm in Maryland, where L'Enfant was buried in 1825, were taken to the capitol and lay in state in the rotunda before the commencement of the ceremonies.

The casket, wrapped in an American flag and covered with beautiful floral remembrances, was surrounded by a guard of honor composed of sergeants of the United States Engineer Corps and Capitol policemen.

The setting for the ceremony was a most appropriate one. High above in the vault of the dome were the representations in allegory of human progress and human liberty. Standing around the circular auditorium of the rotunda, like silent sentinels of the republic, were the statues of distinguished American generals and statesmen, with American history pictured in the great paintings above them.

The gathering was a large one, and those present seemed to feel that the honor long due L'Enfant, though tardily paid, was at the last of a dignity.

Banner Salute to Taft.

The big clock on the wall of the rotunda, marked 10:42 o'clock when the President and Mrs. Taft, Vice President Sherman and M. Jusserand, preceded by District Commissioners Macfarland, West and Judson, filed into the rotunda through a lane in the massed humanity, and were seated in the center of the great audience. No demonstration marked the entry of the distinguished party except the lowering and raising of the blue and silver banner of the Society of the Cincinnati, which was held aloft by representatives of that ancient and honorable organization.

After the prominent participants had been seated, Henry B. Macfarland, president of the board of District of Columbia Commissioners, called the assembly to order and made the opening address.

BASKERVILLE MET A GALLANT DEATH

Sturdy American Led Hopeless Charge to Save Lives of Others.

HIS ACTION IS DEFENDED

HIS BROTHER SAYS THAT SALLY AGAINST THE BESIEGERS WAS NOT A FOOLHARDY VENTURE, AS WAS ANNOUNCED.

Princeton, N. J., May 1.—Charles E. Baskerville, of Royalton, Minn., a senior in the Princeton Theological Seminary, whose brother, Howard C. Baskerville, Jr., was killed on Tuesday at Tabriz, Persia, while leading a small number of revolutionists against the besieging troops of the Shah, has received several cablegrams telling of the young missionary's death. Mr. Baskerville said:

"Some of the newspaper accounts give the impression that my brother met his death in a foolhardy venture, but I have received information that my brother's courage was not reckless or impetuous, but rather an action that the circumstances demanded. The authorities had appealed to him to lead the sally from the city to gain food for the starving inhabitants of Tabriz. He organized about one hundred and fifty men and all but nine deserted him. He kept on despite the odds and was shot in the heart. One cablegram to me from a prominent American in Tabriz says Baskerville died nobly."

Howard C. Baskerville, Jr., graduated from Princeton University in 1907, with honors. He was prominent in debating and oratorical contests. He left here in June, 1907, to teach in the mission school of the American Presbyterian church in Tabriz. On March 31, last, he left the mission school to assist the revolutionists with whom he was in sympathy, his act being formally repudiated by the American mission. He had planned to return to Princeton to take a course in the Princeton Theological Seminary next fall. His parents, the Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Baskerville of Royalton, Minn., and three brothers survive him. He was twenty-four years old.

Galveston has not only displaced all but one of her American competitors in the volume and the value of her foreign commerce, thereby relegating Boston to the fourth place in the column, but was the only port in the United States to show a gain in her exports and imports during 1908, all the others, including New York, suffering declines, as compared with the business of 1907.

R. G. LEEDS SAYS HONOLULU, H. I. IS MODEL CITY

This Enchanting Garden Spot Of the Pacific Ocean Has Many Points of Interest to Visitors.

EXECUTIVE BUILDING A GREAT ATTRACTION

This Structure Was Erected About Twenty Years Ago by King Kalakana and Is Of Solid Concrete.

Honolulu, March 25.—My letter, this time, will deal with Honolulu and its various points of interest, which we have been "covering" since landing here ten days ago. As I stated in my last letter the city is situated on the island of Oahu—pronounced Wa-ho—on the coastal plain between the mountains, some three miles back, and the ocean. It is a modern city in every sense of the word, having miles of oiled macadamized streets, electric lights at night; a twenty-six mile street railway system, equipped with the finest cars and served by the most obliging and courteous conductors and motormen it has ever been my good fortune to encounter; a good water-works system, supplying pure rain-water—yes, rain-water, oh, ye of Richmond who remember last summer's drought—to all parts of the city; a business section composed of blocks of fine, up-to-date buildings, many of these being of the latest steel and concrete, fire proof construction; a residence section in which, surrounded by bowers of luxuriant tropical trees, bushes, palms and flowers, are located the beautiful homes of the people of Honolulu.

A Garden City.

Within this enchanting garden city of the Pacific are many things to interest those who are here on a first visit. Among these is the Executive building which was formerly the palace in the days of the Monarchy. This building, which was built by King Kalakana some twenty years ago, is of concrete construction and stands in large park-like grounds, fronting King street. It is now the home of the territorial government. The senate sits in a large room to the left of the main entrance. This room was formerly the king's state dining chamber.

Across the hall is a larger room in which the representatives hold their sessions.

This room was the throne room under the monarchy and on the raised dais where kings and queens once sat, is now the chair of the speaker of the house. The house was in session when we visited the Executive building and the proceedings were very interesting and absolutely unlike the legislative proceedings of any state assembly in the United States. The members are a decided mixture. The majority of the members, of course, were native Hawaiians, though there were also a number of representatives of Portuguese and American birth. Debates are carried on in two languages, Hawaiian and English. The native representatives all say their say in the Hawaiian language and an interpreter translates what is said in English. Vice versa this interpreter translates the speeches of the English speaking representatives in to the Hawaiian language. The speaker of the house is a native Hawaiian and appears to be a very well educated and intelligent gentleman. Although a native, his English is faultless and under his guiding hand the affairs that come before the house are handled very expeditiously.

Governor's Office.

On the second floor are the offices of the territorial governor, Mr. Frear, whom we met on the occasion of our visit to the Executive building.

To the right of the Executive building is a small stone building called the Archives. This building was erected four or five years ago and contains all the ancient, as well as more recent records, communications and treaties of the Hawaiian nation during the years it was governed by the monarchy. No other territory or state of the country can boast of any similar institution, as none was an independent nation before being admitted to the Union. Washington, D. C., alone, as the seat of the national government, is the only other place in the nation where treaties with foreign nations can be seen, providing the necessary permission could be obtained. In the Archives the first interesting document is a letter signed by Kamehameha the great, the first ruler of the entire group, who won his title and possessions by right of conquest. The time of Kamehameha the great was before the arrival of the missionaries and the establishment of a written language in Hawaiian and the great king signed this letter with "his mark." Then follow many other interesting communications, one being a letter to a former king from the great martyr, Abraham Lincoln, and bearing his signature; another is an autograph letter from U. S. Grant, when president. There are treaties galore with all the great foreign nations as well as with the United States, for Hawaii was, until 1898, an independent nation and, therefore, just like every other country, was under the necessity of having its relations with other countries established and guaranteed by treaties. These interesting documents are all signed by the various kings and emperors or presidents who were directing the affairs of the various governments of the world during the different periods of the last century.

In glancing over these documents one sees the authentic signatures of Victor Emmanuel of Italy, grand father of the present king; Franz Joseph, now the grand old man of Europe, who still guides the destiny of Austria-Hungary as its emperor; Emperor William of Germany, father or grandfather of that country's present ruler; Dom Luis of Portugal, who ruled fifty or sixty years ago; Alexander, autocrat of all the Russias, as he signed himself in the treaty; Queen Victoria—Victoria Regina, as she signed in the treaty—England's great queen, who ruled so wisely and so well, during her long reign from mere childhood to ripe old age; Napoleon III, descendant of the great Napoleon, whom he sought to emulate, only to lose to his destiny at Sedan; the Emperor of Japan, still ruling the nation that, having accepted western "civilization," has forged ahead so fast as to give rise to the dreaded "Yellow Peril" cry; and last, bearing the signature of our own great general-president, U. S. Grant, the famous reciprocity treaty of 1878, which first gave Hawaii's commercial interests the impetus that has enabled this little mid-Pacific land to become the richest per capita on the globe.

As my subject of "Honolulu and its points of interest" has already filled several pages without my nearing the end of it, I will continue the subject in my next letter.

THIRD INDICTMENT AGAINST PASTOR

Serious Charge Against a Chicago Minister.

Chicago, May 1.—A third indictment containing charges more serious than made in any indictment against him was voted against Rev. Robert Morris Kemp, former rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church by the grand jury today. The bill was returned before Judge Clifford, who ordered a capias issued for the arrest of the minister, now in New York. New bonds were fixed at $5,000. The latest complaint against Kemp was made by George Nelson, 15 years old, who was a bellboy in the Auditorium Annex. He said the alleged offense was committed in the Reau Hotel.

MOLINE

MOLINE

Ten Points of MOLINE Superiority

- FIRST—14 inch road clearance; other cars have 8 and 9.
- SECOND—34x3 1/2 inch tires. Largest of any low priced car made. Big tires give longer service and insure greater riding comfort.
- THIRD—Thermo-siphon circulation, does away with pumps. Pumps cause trouble and trouble means a dissatisfied purchaser.
- FOURTH—Accessibility. All machinery is in plain sight and within easy reach, as a result of doing away with unnecessary parts.
- FIFTH—A 4 Cylinder Engine. The product of a factory which has been building gasoline engines for 25 years.
- SIXTH—25-30 Actual horsepower. Every engine is tested both in shop and on the road and must develop on brake test its full rated horsepower.
- SEVENTH—Double chain drive, giving high road clearance. Other low priced cars are single chain drive. We furnish shaft drive as an option.
- EIGHTH—Extra equipment. Besides the two side and one rear lamp, we furnish two acetylene gas lamps, with Bosch & Lomb reflectors and first class tool kit in canvas roll, most of these are extra on other cars.
- NINTH—Economy in operation. One gallon of gasoline will give a maximum number of miles traveled. (Actual road tests with four passengers resulted in 107 miles on 5 gallons of gasoline).
- TENTH—$1,500 buys a MOLINE fully equipped. Fully equipped means not only the extra equipment mentioned above, but a Magneto, Folding glass front and an Automobile-rubber top with leather covered bow sockets and dust cover.

Compare these points with the information you have about other automobiles and note particularly that the price asked is for everything; and that there is not $75.00 added here and $50.00 there, and $25.00 added somewhere else for extras. $1,500 is for Everything, Complete.

Don't forget our Auto Livery Service. Especially low rates by hour or trip.
