H. JOHNSON TALKS ON SEN. DOLLIVER

Former Representative Thinks
Iowa Statesman Will Cause Sensation.

KNOWS INSIDE MATTERS

HE STATES THAT THE SENATOR IS WELL ACQUAINTED WITH GOVERNMENTAL MACHINERY AND IS SINCERE MAN.

While in congress from this district Henry U. Johnson became personally acquainted with Senator Dolliver of Iowa, who is creating consternation at Washington by his attack on Aldrich, and the latter's tariff reform ideas.

Mr. Johnson says Dolliver served for years as a member of the ways and means committee, and in that position learned the secrets, which now he is telling. The local man does not regard Dolliver as exceptionally brilliant, but as a man who has been so placed as to know how governmental matters have been managed in the past and one well equipped to make revelations, now that he has begun.

May Expect Much.

Johnson says much may be expected from Dolliver if permitted to proceed. The Iowan occupied the time of the senate yesterday afternoon and created furor seldom seen. He promised to be on the floor to continue his argument today. He has caused an awakening in the party that will be felt throughout the country. At the time Mr. Johnson was in congress, Dolliver was regarded as one of the strongest protectionists.

In his speech yesterday he admitted he was an out-and-out protectionist, seventeen years ago, but that times have changed and he does not believe such protection is needed now.

Johnson's Views.

Although engaged only in the practice of law, Mr. Johnson retains his idea about tariff reform legislation. He has made the statement that more stringent reform is being advocated now than he did at the time he began to differ with his party and bring about the breach that ultimately led him to become identified with the democrats. He declares that without the protection on hides, a shoe now selling for $4 per pair could be bought for $3 and there would be less repairing and more sales, if the tariff were removed so manufacturers would not feel any of the effect of loss of trade, they claim to fear.

CLOTHED IN FLOWING GOWN

PINK STOCKINGS TRIPPED LIGHTLY AND TWINKLED DELIGHTFULLY ON THE STAGE—SHORT, BUT APPRECIATED.

New York, May 5.—Mrs. Arthur Scott Burden's pink stocking feet twinkled in a burst of speed that carried her completely around the stage and fluttered the gauzy folds of her claret colored tunic, as with a final gasp she sank at the base of the altar of Bacchus.

She lay there with one hand pressed against her forehead, her eyelids drooping, her leafy chaplet bobbing, and nothing that the audience could do could make her abandon that last picture. For many curtain calls she held it, unmindful of the clamor across the footlights.

It was the end of Mrs. Burden's Bacchante dance and the last number of the Greek pageant of Bacchanalia, which had been arranged to draw crowds, and the right sort of crowds, to the bazaar of the Manhattan Trade School for Girls at 200 East Twenty-third street.

Not Long, but Appreciated.

She wasn't long on the stage, but from the moment the lesser bacchantes with cymbals and tambourines extended toward the wings made way for her through lines of flower girls, flute players, fruit carriers, torchbearers, and many others that are found in the temple of Bacchus, not an eye forsook the dancer.

It was all quiet and unexciting at first, her arms swaying with a willowy downward sweep, her feet timing to the murmurings of the orchestra.

Thrown across one shoulder was a leopard skin and the draperies beneath it left her arms and shoulders bare.

Above her knees the flowing skirts were caught up with a cord of the same color, the folds below being free to follow the movements of the dance.

Music Enlivens Dancers' Steps.

Gradually the music increased in volume, and with it the dance became more lively. This way and that she went, tossing her arms with the music, her fingers closing and then relaxing.

Now she stood still with her hands sweeping from high in the air to the level of her waist; now she stooped forward with arms extended, shutting out the gaze of Bacchus priests. She danced among the pillars in the temple and behind her came the procession of Bacchus.

There were other Bacchantes, Miss Martha White, Mrs. James Eustis, Mrs. Stewart Walker, and Miss Grace Walters, who planned all the dances. Mrs. Henry Villard and Miss Kathryn Rhoades bore on their heads baskets laden with fruit.

The whole production was declared to be a social and financial success, and the artistic staging of the production was said to be equal to anything of the kind ever attempted in New York.

Most Deadly of African Fevers.

We often hear of the African fever, or jungle fever. But speak of the fever to the man who has been in the regions where it prevails and he will tell you that it is more feared by the explorer than the most dangerous animal. There is a malarial fever that the African mosquito will put into you with its bite. It may stay in you six or seven years, but you can finally get rid of it by proper treatment. But the black water fever of German East Africa comes on you and catches you when you may think the trouble is only a little malaria. Unless there is a physician in the party who knows its signs the man who is stricken with it seldom comes back in the civilised world alive.—Van Norden Magazine.

The New Phillips.

Some people have a misconception idea that college boys are typical with a cigarette in one corner of their mouths, a dinky cap on the back of their heads and a gift of gab that is muchly tinged with "rough talk" or street slang. But this is not so of the typical college man. To get right on this question one has to see a representative Yale man, because Yale is the most democratic of all of our first class schools. If you go to the New Phillips tonight you will have the opportunity of seeing just how the Yale man lives, and true, it is a very amusing yet a very original way to live withal. Robert Findlay is starring in his own playlet "The Room Mate" and with Miss Cecilia Crane and A. Deborn Derou is making a great hit. The ventriloquists, McCormack and Wallace, are the subjects of household gossip. No scandal attached to them, mind you, but a whole ton of fun. That Upside Down Duffy should be appreciated. He is a marvel in balancing feats.

Cook Stock Company.

The engagement of the Carl W. Cook stock company at the Gennett theater next week promises to be one of the best equipped organization here this season. For the past four years this company has enjoyed the reputation of being the leading repertoire attraction playing the middle west, and the business done is a matter of theatrical history. The company is made up of eighteen artists, many of whom have never appeared with a popular priced attraction. The plays to be presented embrace several of the best that have been played in the one night stands. The usual matinees will be given during the week. Opening play, "In Missouri."

Now that the strawberry season is at hand State Food and Drug Commissioner Barnard, whose duty it is to enforce the pure food laws, says that the inspectors of the department will at once begin a campaign against dealers who violate the law and the rules of the board in regard to the proper care of strawberries.

He says the inspectors are already at work in Indianapolis and that they will prosecute every dealer who leases his berries uncovered. They will first tackle the larger cities of the state and then the smaller ones.

State Board of Health Says

WILL BEGIN A CAMPAIGN

Indianapolis, May 5.—Dealers in strawberries had better be on their guard from now on, for the state board of health proposed to enforce the rule it made some time ago that all fruit exposed for sale must be covered and kept from the air and the outside dust and dirt.
