VISITING CARDS.

Names and Messages Used to Be Scribbled on Playing Cards.

It is somewhat curious that so useful an invention as the visiting card should have been unknown to society until comparatively recent times. Yet 150 years ago the carte de visite did not exist. The belle of the seventeenth century used nothing in the shape of a name card, or "ticket," as it was afterward called. Invitations to routs and dances as well as names and addresses were written across the backs of playing cards, which in those days were made with a white reverse and innocent of the intricate pattern familiar to us in modern times.

Mary Wortley Montagu, a lady of ton, says the Connoisseur, would be apt to use a red playing card—a queen of hearts—for ordinary social purposes, while an amorous beau inscribed his name and the most tender of inquiries on the back of a jack of spades. The great world of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries was a small world. It was rigidly exclusive. Living in the same quarter of the town, the quality sent each other scribbled messages by the hand of a favorite page. Society, in a word, was informal in the midst of stately formalities, and we have no difficulty in believing the Comtesse de Boigne when she tells us that in 1800 Lady Harrington used to trot up and down Bond street picking up guests for a party for the same night.

TRAP NEST—ENTRANCE CLOSED.

Used as a trap nest, it is like the night watchman's clock—it forces the one who looks after the eggs to be on time or the hen will lay and be gone without his knowing which hen laid the egg.

It is interesting to see how hens take to the nest. Those outside see the hen on through the screened opening and will stand around, sometimes three and four at a time, waiting to gain admittance, not offering to find a nest elsewhere. The box seems to offer just that seclusion and protection that suit their fancy.

Trap Nest—Entrance Open (Patent Applied For).

and the shutter lowers and closes the entrance door. The weight of the shutter in coming down carries an elevator board up on a level with the partition board. This elevator board is always down when the entrance door is open and always up when the entrance door is closed. When the hen has laid and is ready to come out she sees the screened opening above the entrance door as the only place of exit. In fact, she thinks she will, her weight carries the elevator down and brings the shutter up, when the little spring catches the shutter and she walks out where she came in, leaving the nest open for the next hen.

The upper opening is screened and serves to give ventilation and light.
The nest, or box, is 12 by 24 inches and 24 inches high. The front half of the box is the reception gate and the rear half is the nesting apartment.

Agricultural Legislation in Mississippi.

At a recent session of the Mississippi legislature a number of acts were passed with a view to promoting the agricultural interests of the state. Among these was an act authorizing each county in the state to build an agricultural high school and pledging a state support fund of $1,000 annually for each school meeting certain specified conditions. Fifteen counties have already located schools. A first of these was Neshoba county, which has voted a tax levy of 1 mill upon the taxable property of the county for the support of its county agricultural high school at Marshallville, an inland village twelve miles west of Macon. This school will have an income of $1,000 from the state, $1,000 from the public schools merged into it and $5,000 from the county, making an annual income of $7,000.

The legislature also authorized boards of supervisors to appropriate money for premiums to boys engaged in corn growing contests. Such contests were organized in five counties last year and in twenty-three counties this year, with over 3,000 boys engaged in the work. There are also about 500 girls organized in home culture clubs. Exhibits are first held in the home counties, after which those taking prizes are shown at the state fair.

Old Herbal Charms.

History lurks in many of the old herbal charms, which were once as popular as any magic specific connected with field mice. Cures for the bites of sea hares, scorpions and tarantulas tell a tale of a different England from the one we know now. So do charms "to render a man or woman insensible to torture," though advice to seven-year-old children to grow beautiful by dancing among fax is of all ages. Protective charms against witchcraft were common, but an old French book of spells gives an interesting recipe for centaury, which, "if joined with the blood of a female lapwing" will cause the drinkers "to believe themselves witches, so that one shall believe of the other that his head is in heaven and his feet on earth." If this was witchcraft, how did Shakespeare and Herrick and a few others escape the stake?—London Chronicle.

An Architectural Ace of Clubs.

Midford castle, near Bath, England, was built about 200 years ago. The castle is of singular construction, being triangular and in the form of the ace of clubs, the angles being rounded off and embattled. A Mr. Roebuck, a great gambler, is said to have built the manor with the proceeds of a night's gambling and by backing the run of luck of the club suit.
