KING COAL.

While He Lives His Throne is Fixed In the United States.

The part played by coal in the world's affairs can well be illustrated by assuming the available supply to be suddenly cut off. The huge railroad system of America would stop at once. So also would the electric power and lighting in all cities and suburbs. Steamship service would cease everywhere. Transit facilities would be dead. Factories, manufacturing and shops would close down. Vast industries like steel, iron, copper, etc., would cease. Armies of laborers would be thrown out of work. Mails, schools, the navy, newspapers, foreign and internal trade—all would cease to exist. The trilogy governing commercial advance, heat, light and power, except a negligible amount of water, oil, etc., would be annihilated—all this until some other form of power could be developed. The possibility of such a cataclysm is not imminent, for coal will reign for some time yet and is destined to become a power whose capabilities have as yet been comparatively felt only more faintly than would a feather on the hide of an elephant.

The world needs coal. The United States has that coal to deliver. It will be wholly natural that so potent a necessity will make for continued peace and understanding among the powers of the world.

The coal mines of Europe are sunk about 3,000 feet deep. Coal is still being quarried on the banks of the Ohio, and the mines of Europe are nearing the limit of commercial possibility. The manufacturing supremacy of the old world is passing to the new. Coal is king, and while he lives his throne is fixed forever in the United States—Metropolitan Magazine.

EARLY CARICATURES.

Quaint Art and Humor of the Ancient Egyptians.

The fables of Aesop prove that the ancients were not without a liking for fun, and the remains of ancient art tell the same story. Examples of artistic humor are more common than is generally supposed.

A drawing on a tile in the New York museum represents a cat dressed as an Egyptian woman of fashion. She is seated languidly on a chair, slipping one out of a small bow and being fanned and offered dainties by a direct looking tomcat with his tail between his legs.

The cat figures largely in the ancient comic groups of animal life. In a papyrus in the British museum a flock of geese are being driven by a cat and a herd of goats by two wolves with crooks and wattle. One of the wolves is playing a double pipe.

There is in Turin a papyrus roll that displays a whole series of such comical scenes. In the first place, a lion, a crocodile and an ape are giving a vocal and instrumental concert. Next comes an ass dressed, armed and accepted like a pharaoh. With majestic swagger he receives the gifts presented to him by a cat of high degree, to which a bull acts as proud conductor.

A lion and a gazelle are playing at draughts, a hippopotamus is perched in a tree, and a hawk has climbed into the tree and is trying to dislodge him.

Another picture shows a pharaoh in the shape of a rat drawn in a carriage by prancing greyhounds. He is proceeding to storm a fort garrisoned by cats having no arms, but teeth and claws, whereas the rats have battle-axes, shields and bows and arrows. St. Louis Republic.

A COSTLY EXPERIENCE.

By way of showing that hawks and owls are in reality friends and not enemies of the farmer a recent magazine article cites an experience which the state of Pennsylvania had a score of years ago. In the year 1885 the state legislature passed what was known as the scalp act, which authorized the payment of a bounty of 50 cents a head on all hawks and owls killed in the state. Under this act bounties were paid on 100,000 birds, which was accepted by the farmers as pretty good proof that the chicken killers were exterminated. But this was not the end of their troubles. Within a period of two years gophers, field mice and noxious insects appeared in such numbers that the farmers were powerless to cope with them, and the losses which they suffered from this source as the direct result of the indiscriminate hawk and owl slaughter were placed at $4,000,000. A Washington authority has said that 90 per cent of the food of the red shouldered hawk, usually known as the "hen hawk," consists of injurious mammals and insects, while 200 droppings of the barn owl were found to contain the skulls of 454 small mammals. 225 of this number being of the destructive field or meadow mouse.

WEIGHT OF EGGS.

A quite extensive test which has recently been made in determining the weight of eggs shows that they vary in weight from fifteen to twenty-eight ounces per dozen, the average weight being about twenty-two ounces. Such figures as these would seem to justify the selling of eggs by the pound and not by the dozen, especially in a season when they have ranged from 25 to 40 cents per dozen regardless of size.

During the year of 1928, it is safely presumed from the nearest figures obtainable, there was enough coffee drunk in the United States alone to fill a cistern twenty miles long, one mile wide and two miles deep. Of the 78,000,000 people in the United States, 84 per cent are coffee drinkers. There were more than 11,000 carloads of coffee grain brought into this country last year, or sixty-seven shiploads, to say nothing of smaller shipments that are not recorded.
